THE PONY EXPRESS

HERE'S a wire from Francis M. Kadow, Mikadow Theatre, Manitowoc, Wisc.: "Thanks for 'The Pony Express'. 'The Covered Wagon' held the record. 'The Ten Commandments' topped the 'Wagon'. Now 'The Pony Express' tops everything. Eureka!"

This wire is typical. In scores of cities and towns "The Pony Express" is smashing theatre records every week. It's the biggest film bargain on the market today—a $2 road show that comes to you as one of the Greater Forty group. Get it. Play it to sure-fire, more-than-capacity business!

To my Exhibitor Friends:
I have completed my first Paramount Picture, "SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE", and I honestly believe it is the best comedy I have made to date. It's the kind of a comedy you want - packed with real gags, swift, clean, romantic and with a dash of mystery.
"SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE" was George M. Cohan's biggest stage success. I'm confident it's my biggest screen success to date.
Here's hoping you make a lot of money with it - and I'm sure you will.

Here's Another Box Office WOW!

"MADAM BEHAVE" comes from a money family—the Al Christie Comedy Specials — whose reputation for luring the dollar from the pocket of the patron to the cash register of the exhibitor is established by the marvelous records of "Charley's Aunt" and "Seven Days."

Made for Entertainment Purposes Only—that's "Madam Behave." Built around a sensationally successful French farce, and with two of the greatest stars of the day in the leading roles—Julian Eltinge and Ann Pennington—directed by Scott Sidney, who was responsible for "Charley's Aunt," and carrying all the Christie sure-fire comedy gags, "Madam Behave" has all the elements of a Riot.

Julian Eltinge and Ann Pennington are two of the greatest box office assets on screen or stage today.

Miss Pennington is an outstanding star of Ziegfeld's Follies—and she's just as magnetic on the screen.

Julian Eltinge is the Greatest Woman Impersonator Ever Known to the Stage or Screen. Last year he toured the country from coast to coast, making personal appearances in first run houses.

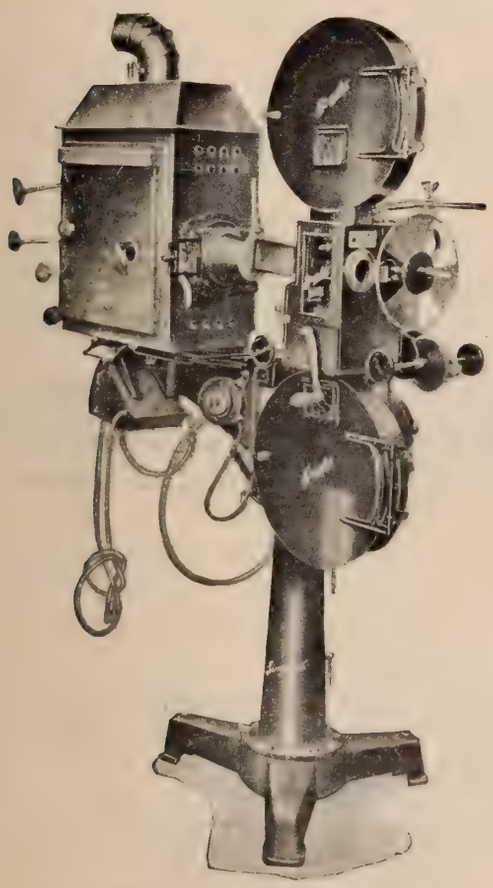
The Theatre of To-day

THE most enlightening, interesting and authentic story ever written on the modern theatre, profusely illustrated, will appear in THEATRE BUILDING & EQUIPMENT BUYERS GUIDE, a special supplement to the November 21st issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

A complete Buyers' Guide for all types of theatre equipment and accessories will also appear in this supplement.

Watch for your copy — make use of the valuable material it contains. It will help you make your theatre the most up-to-date in your territory.



The New Idea

that Will bring more patronage to your theatre

A change is taking place in theatre business practice. The old idea that a good picture would make up for deficiencies in projection is giving way to the new idea that good projection is just as important as good pictures.

As a result efficient projection equipment is replacing faulty equipment in hundreds of theatres everywhere; projection rooms of new theatres are being outfitted with as much care as lobbies or auditoriums; the general standard of motion picture projection is being raised, and many theatres that have formerly attracted little patronage are now enjoying a continually increasing popularity.

The general realization of the necessity and value of good projection has naturally brought an unprecedented demand for Simplex Projectors—chosen for the proven correctness of their design, the assurance of sturdy quality that the name Simplex guarantees and the projection service that is extended to every Simplex equipped theatre.

EVER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET

with Anita Stewart, Bert Lytell, Huntley Gordon and All Star Cast

The Underwriters Laboratories extended their label service to the American Film-Safe after exhaustive tests had proved the value of this safe as an eliminator of film fire storage hazards. Many Insurance Rating Organizations have already made big allowances wherever American Film-Safes are installed.

Now the Film Fire Storage Hazard Is Conquered!

You can now keep your films in a convenient cabinet in your studio or projection room in absolute safety against any fire hazard.

The American Film-Safe, perfected after eight years of experimentation and development, effectively solves the film storage problem. It has been listed as standard and labelled by the Underwriters' Laboratories and is the only film receptacle of its kind that has ever been given this label.

Insurance Rating Organizations will make reductions in insurance charges for places where American Film-Safes are installed. Many have already made big allowances in favor of the installation of this equipment. In some sections of the country these allowances will pay for a safe in one year.

The American Film-Safe will, therefore, give you fire-proof protection for your films—a sturdy and convenient cabinet for housing films—and it will bring into effect such a material reduction in the cost of your insurance that it will pay you an actual cash profit on your investment.

American Film-Safes may be purchased on the deferred payment plan.

Full description sent on request. Mail the coupon.

Some Features of the Film-Safe

The FILM-SAFE is a highly developed and efficient receptacle that not only protects the films within it, but also protects surrounding property.

FILM-SAFES have the valuable feature of extracting abnormal heat from films and maintaining them at normal temperature. They also keep films at normal humidity. Thus they preserve and insure the life of films.

FILM-SAFES form an ideal system for storing purposes. They are not only fire-proof but are as convenient as file cabinets. Each film is contained in a separate compartment on a film carriage that automatically moves forward when the door to the compartment is opened, making each film readily accessible for handling.

FILM-SAFES have an attractive appearance. They are made of sheet steel and in construction are the equal of the highest grade metal furniture. The exterior surface is beautifully finished in baked enamel. Standard colors are olive green with bronze hardware, but they may also be had in mahogany, oak, American Walnut or Circassian Walnut.

FILM-SAFES are of Unit Contruction so that when once installed they can be added to or rearranged at will.

They are made in two sizes: Style 1100 has five compartments for five 1000 foot reels of film and is used principally in exchanges, studios, laboratories, etc. Style 1200 has five compartments for five 2000 foot reels of film. This style is installed principally in theatre projection booths.

"A red hot comedy. Warners will have to install a one-way traffic signal outside the theatre this week."

—New York Evening Journal

"There is real entertainment awaiting you at Warners Theatre this week. 'Red Hot Tires,' the feature picture, is a gay little comedy full of action and laughs. The story is refreshing and original; Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller, about whom the tale revolves, are both at their very best. A zippy farce, this 'Red Hot Tires'."

—New York Morning Telegraph

"Mr. Blue finds in this vehicle and character something quite suited to him.

—New York Times

Everybody likes MYSTERY-COMEDY!

You can't go wrong with fast, clean-cut comedy. You can't go wrong with absorbing, thrilling mystery. "Seven Sinners" combines the two. It's a crook drama matching laughs with thrills. It's a battle of wits for the possession of the family jewels. It's a mix up of thievery, mirth and romance. In short, it's a picture any audience will enjoy.

They took New Orleans for the locale.

They selected a beautiful society girl (believe us, Mary Astor is gorgeous as this girl), and wove around her a marvelous love story.

But they refused to permit her to secure happiness without a little struggle.

And as a result, the story of how she surmounted the difficulties they laid across her path makes "The Scarlet Saint" one peach of a picture.

It rings true with every ingredient so necessary to the mixture known as "a success at the box office."

Compulsion Not the Answer

N. L. NATHANSON, head of a large circuit of theatres in Canada, gave an interview to a Toronto newspaper upon his return, recently, from Europe.

His remarks strike us as eminently sensible. He says that the best American pictures are the best in the world; that our poor pictures are no worse—and better in technique—than Europe's poor pictures (he might have added that they also have the very large box-office advantage of well known players). He would like to book English pictures; obviously that is so, since Canadian sentiment greatly favors a British trade-mark. He would like them to balance his bookings of American pictures: but the prospects of getting British pictures are not rosy. He says that the British producing forces need organization. A subsidy is needed.

The Kinematograph Weekly of London cites the above interview in an editorial entitled "Subsidies and Soft Soap." The editorial ends as follows:

"In one way or another the American producer has certainly shown that he will voluntarily do nothing for the British film. There are various remedies and even a subsidy may be of temporary assistance.

"But the real remedy is compulsion, and it is not surprising that in France as well as in England the Kontingent looms even larger in trade discussion. The blatant insincerity of American protestations may, in fact, force the very remedy they have most reason to fear.

"And they do fear—badly—being compelled to do what they would have us believe they would love to do."

As to this matter of compulsion—compelling the American distributor to take British films:

Would it not be wise, in this respect, indeed in the whole discussion of British films in America and American films in Great Britain, to consider those who ultimately pay for them—namely, the public; and also to consider those who buy the films for public consumption, namely the exhibitors? In all the articles in the British trade press on the subject we find reference mostly to producers and distributors. But the producers and distributors, here and in Great Britain, do not, of course, control their respective amusement publics. Nor, of course, do the makers and jobbers of any goods control the public taste for them.

The British public is not "compelled" to pay to see American films; nor do we know of any way to "compel" the American public to pay to see British films.

Here in fact seems to be, and simply enough, the crux of the entire matter. If our distributors are "compelled" to take British films, just how will they "compel" the American public to pay to see them? There seems good opportunity here for discussion. We invite the British trade press to take it up, and suggest the business ways and means.

To make this discussion concrete, we suggest getting right down to the essentials: in every point throughout the length and breadth of the United States today where two theatres are in competition let us say that one is showing an American bill and the other has a program of British pictures. The American bill in all probability is founded upon well advertised stage plays, books, magazine stories, cartoons, topical events or taste, etc.; the British bill is not so founded (and here we speak from a fairly good knowledge of British

CHARLIE PETTIJOHN, of the Hays organization, appearing before the House Ways and Means Committee in behalf of admission tax repeal, decried foolish publicity on star salaries. Incidentally, he pointed out that the amounts alleged to be paid were greatly exaggerated. Will we never learn in this industry that the film business is big enough and important enough to stand on its merits without indulging in ballyhoo statements that only turn out to be boomerangs in the end?

THE retirement of Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld from the managing directorship of the Paramount theatres on Broadway is an event of great interest in more ways than one. It foreshadows, if we read the situation correctly, other important developments in the management and operation of large chains of theatres. An interview with Dr. Riesenfeld elsewhere in this issue sets forth his own views on several topics.

SALES strategy—and we use "strategy" in the best sense—is highly developed, these days. Perhaps organization would be a better word. Certainly a man like E. A. Eschmann of First National would prefer it—and he is a skilled sales organizer, with the intimate details of local situations throughout the country at his command. Mr. Eschmann is a very wise observer of box-office values. He sizes up pictures as they come along—and always from the viewpoint of the public, for that is what governs the sales barometer. The answer to successful selling of pictures is two-fold: first, good pictures and second, real organization. It is an open secret that Mr. Eschmann has built a very fine organization at First National. The results prove it.

IN an era of big pictures here and coming—— "The Big Parade," "Ben Hur," "Stella Dallas," "The Black Pirate," "The Dark Angel," "The Vanishing American," and others—reserve space for Sam Rork's "Clothes Make the Pirate." A most ingenious story, built on the universal theme of the hen-pecked husband with a complex to be a bold, bad hero. A remarkable cast is headed by the inimitable Leon Errol, who is screamingly funny when he is turned from a little, browbeaten tailor in New England village before the Revolution into a roaring pirate chieftain—who does not roar, however, until he has been through a series of adventures in which he becomes the picture of helplessness. Then there are Dorothy Gish, Nita Naldi, James Rennie, Tully Marshall, and others of equal calibre. Production values are first-rate. There are big scenes, notably of the fights at sea. Altogether, a fine picture of which Sam may well be proud.

Nick Altrock, irrepressible comedian and coach of the Washington Senators, turned cameraman at the first game of the World's series in Pittsburgh and "shot" Governor Gifford Pinchot with his Pathex.

FOX comes along this week with the announcement of the purchase of a large amount of outstanding material—"What Price Glory?" and six Belasco plays, in particular. This is significant because, for one thing, it extends still further William Fox's policy of big specials, which was signalized by the alliance with John Golden some months ago. It indicates also that we shall have another group of very promising pictures to look forward to from this very progressive organization.

Britain Must Face the Facts, Rowland Declares

If British Pictures Are to Find Market Here

Richard A. Rowland, General Manager of First National Pictures, Inc.

By William A. Johnston.

"YES, they can make pictures for this market. Certainly. But they've got to open their eyes, see things just as they are, and proceed accordingly."

R. A. Rowland, General Manager of First National, just returned from Europe, gave the above summary when asked by Motion Picture News to comment upon the present moot subject of British films for America.

"I'll tell you," said he, "just what I told some of the leaders of the British trade.

"We want foreign pictures in our theatres—British, French, German, Italian pictures. Now that may be construed, coming from an American, as so much bunk. All right. But I mean it, and every sensible man knows it's true. Our theatres count most over here—more than American distribution, more than American production. We've got to keep an increasing hold upon the public with our theatres, or some other amusement will take place of the picture—and then, up goes the whole business, here and everywhere. So we want novelty, all the time, from every possible source of supply.

Analyzing the Situation

"Now, about British production and this market.

"Let's analyze the situation. Call a spade a spade. Get down to the facts.

"American pictures have the hold today. Why? Because of the capital invested, the personalities built up, the showmanship back of them, the studio technique acquired. These are the big essentials.

"So if British pictures are to compete with American pictures, British producers must acquire these very same essentials. Nothing else will do, nor will any skimping do.

"Put them down in order:

What Britain Needs

"Money: it will take a lot. In my opinion a government subsidy is the only thing. They've got to go right into the open market and compete for our stars and featured players. You know what that means. Maybe they will need a national distributing system here; maybe theatres, too, here and elsewhere. Then they've got to be prepared to pay, and pay well for the big plays, books, stories.

"Stars: stars bring the people to the box-office, no question about that. The bulk of our theatre-going public is the youth of the land, and the young people are talking stars all the time. How can you attract them without these well-known names?

"Showmanship: showmen have got to step to the front in British production—men of practical and broad experience, of proven success; men who know the peoples and tastes of the world, not merely of Great Britain.

"Studio technique: that can be had, with money expended in materials and men. But again they've got to compete for the best technicians, just as we do here.

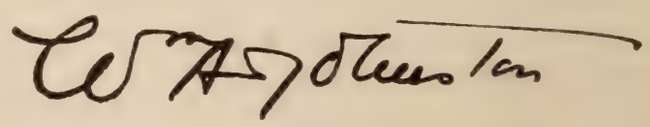
pictures offered to the market). The American bill contains, in all probability, personalities whose names are household words in our homes; the British bill presents utter strangers. Laying aside all points, but saying that the theatre advertising is equal in each case—which bill will attract the public? And if the British bill loses money, who is to pay the loss? It would seem to us that the British picture—as it stands today—will have to receive a subsidy from this market.

Let us also, in fairness, consider Mr. Nathanson's predicament. We know, first hand, that Canada today is far from being a country of easy motion picture profits. A land of great distances and sparse settlement. distribution is highly expensive there. Censorship is bad. Local ordinances are restrictive. Theatre attendance is low per capita. But, without this information, the recent balance sheet of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation indicates clearly enough to us that only through the benefits of circuit management does this group of theatres pay at all. Would The Kinematograph suggest to Mr. Nathanson that he undertake the marketing to his public of a new line of untried goods to the end of fostering British production? If so, how should he go about it and still pay dividends on his capitalization?



American theatres and British theatres alike must buy pictures which the public wants. Otherwise they will go out of business. If goods are forced under compulsion upon the motion picture public—anywhere, in Great Britain, France, Germany, America—the whole motion picture industry will go out of business.

There is no royal road to profits in any business under the sun. To short cut economic processes, to substitute compulsion for the natural give and take of supply and demand is to invite disaster. This is beyond argument.

We do not argue here against "compulsion" simply because the American trade does not want it, or fears it, etc. Nor are we at all blind to the fact that the American manufacturer leans heavily today on the foreign market, has geared his cost up to it, and must have its income.

We are opposed to "compulsion" because it is utterly uneconomic. It invites disaster to the whole trade. It takes no cognizance of public demand and therefore of the exhibitor's interests, British and American exhibitors alike.

It is highly desirable, and obviously so, that reciprocal film relations between Europe and America be brought about—desirable in the interests of the European trade and the American trade, and in the interests of the motion picture and its continuing hold upon the public fancy. But the fundamental remedies must be economic ones. They involve capital, manufacturing ingenuity, market knowledge, sales, advertising—all the essentials of modern business progress, and development.

Britain Must Face Facts, Rowland Declares

"So there you are. The thing to do is to look the facts squarely in the face. If the public everywhere prefers American pictures, then the thing to do is to give the public the kind of goods it is buying. And to do that the thing to do is to stand up head and shoulders with American producing resources. Just so much as any foreign producer fails to do that, just so much will the public fail to respond to his efforts as against the American made picture.

"The British public would much rather have British pictures. But when people go seeking amusement they follow their whims, not their flag. They always will. The amusement business isn't a matter of patriotism, nor of theory. It is a plain matter of giving the people what they evidently want. If the public anywhere wants American pictures they will go to see them or else quit going. So I simply say give them the quality of entertainment—all of it, which the American producer provides."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Norma Talmadge, on her arrival at the Hotel Ambassador in New York City, was welcomed by this basket of seven varieties of orchids from Hiram Abrams, United Artists chief.

Florence Allen, Chicago winner in Universal's See America First contest, is greeted by Mary Philbin, also once a Chicago contest winner, on her arrival on the Coast.

FOUR FAVORED FEATURES

ALL of the shining asterisks distributed this week by the National Board of Review go to productions of feature length, and all of them seem thoroughly deserved. The first is awarded to "The King on Main Street," and the second goes to another Paramount picture, "Lord Jim," the screen version of what many think was Conrad's greatest novel. First National draws one with Bob Kane's "The New Commandment," and the fourth goes to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the latest Buster Keaton laughter special, "Go West," the story of a serious minded youth and a flock of contrary minded steers.

Since the Board did not see fit to award one, here is our own little asterisk (*) for Mr. and Mrs. Lou C. Hutt's "Wild Beasts of Borneo," released by Educational, and certainly an exceptional subject of its kind.

SURPRISE!

WHEN A. M. Botsford, soon to be advertising and publicity chief of the Famous Players theatres, and Russell Holman, his successor as Paramount advertising manager, set out to attend a Paramount cabinet meeting at the Hotel Roosevelt last Thursday evening, they little knew what was in store for them. For when they entered the hotel they found some seventy of their associates awaiting them, to say nothing of a surprise dinner, speeches and an elaborate program of entertainment.

The speakers included Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Sam Katz, Harold B. Franklin, Charles E. McCarthy, Phil Reisman, Vincent Trotta, and the two "victims." An elaborate program of specialties was arranged by Ed Olmstead of the Rialto and Rivoli theatre publicity department.

THE BIG EVENT

THRILLS of anticipation and excitement are running up and down the backbone of Broadway (whatever that is!) this week, prior to the third annual Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ball which takes place at the Hotel Astor on Saturday evening, October 31. This has come to be one of the real events of the year and preparations this year are more elaborate than ever. Numbers from Broadway shows will include "Holka Polka," "No, No, Nanette," and "When You Smile," in addition to which there will be selections from other musical comedies and performers from the leading night clubs. The dance music will be furnished by Vincent Lopez and his two orchestras. The list of stars who have already promised to be on hand includes nearly everyone in the East.

WINNING WITH TOLSTOI

AS announced last week, Mrs. Hazel Marie Bergh, the MOTION PICTURE NEWS' correspondent in Omaha, is winner of the $500 prize in First National's contest for story suggestions. According to a clipping from an Omaha daily, her winning suggestion was that one of Leo Tolstoi's novels be filmed.

Pretty heavy stuff, Tolstoi, but full of the sort of dramatic "meat" that should make great pictures if sympathetically and painstakingly adapted and filmed.

Director Sam Wood coaches Walter Goss and Josephine Dunn, students at the Paramount Picture School, in a love scene. (Let's do that lesson over, teacher!)

One of the most charming of the "new faces" of which we are hearing so much is Gwen Lee, a pleasing addition to the cast of Norma Shearer's "Free Lips" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

Both in pictures since the old Biograph days, Mary Pickford and C. Gardner Sullivan had never met until she commissioned him to assist with "Scraps" (United Artists).

F. Wynne-Jones, American representative, Major Alexander Grau, managing director of the educational and scientific department, Mrs. Grau, and Dr. Nicholas Kaufman, co-director of "Strength and Beauty," all with Ufa, leading German film concern, and photographed on their arrival here. PRAISE FROM SIR HUBERT

PEGGY HOPKINS JOYCE, who makes her debut as a film star in the much discussed Associated Exhibitors special, "The Sky Rocket," has received the stamp of approval of one who knows, and in no uncertain terms—Marshall Neilan, who is a keen judge of talent and doubly qualified to speak in this instance since he directed Miss Joyce in the picture in question.

Speaking of her work in this picture, which only a few persons have seen, Neilan said:

"When I commenced work on 'The Sky Rocket' several months ago it was with no idea that I was to have the surprise of my life and that Peggy Hopkins Joyce was to afford me that surprise.

"I found Miss Joyce to be a good actress—but to be perfectly honest she did not impress me as anything more than 'good' until we had gotten well under weigh.

"Perhaps it was due to the fact that I was so intensely absorbed in following the script that my first impression of Miss Joyce did not change until later. But when it commenced to change, it literally soared until I realized I had on my lot a true 'find'—a screen diamond of the purest water. As our work advanced and I became so familiar with the continuity that I could see the lines with my eyes closed, I began to watch very closely every movement made by Miss Joyce before the camera. It was then that I realized Associated Exhibitors had a 'find.' She has that definite something which lures and holds. Intelligence, kindly understanding, wit, charm and versatility, together with physical beauty make up that 'lure' of Peggy Hopkins Joyce."

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, star of the Associated Exhibitors special, "The Sky Rocket," snapped on the Bois du Boulogne in Paris, where she is taking a short rest before returning to this country to commence work on her next feature.

Another boost for Miss Joyce is contained in an article in the current issue of Photoplay Magazine, under the heading: "What is the Lure of Peggy Hopkins Joyce?" To quote one or two small portions:

"Peggy has that thin, frail, blonde breakableness of Lillian Gish. Wait till you see her on the screen. She photographs softly. And she has a charm that is reminiscent of Ethel Clayton when at her best.

"And above all, above everything, she is so feminine! She not only understands all the daintiness which allures a man more than anything in the world, but she understands that strange art of being a woman, which the females of today are parting with hourly. She breathes soft, sweet femininity. Nothing of the loud, wise-cracking, cigarette-smoking, cocktail-drinking flapper of today about Peggy Hopkins Joyce."

THAT PARAMOUNT SCHOOL

TALKING the other day with Jesse L. Lasky, after a visit to the Paramount Long Island studio and watching the Junior Stars at work, it was interesting to note the tremendous personal enthusiasm which Mr. Lasky has for the Paramount Picture School of acting, on the basis of results to date. He has unlimited confidence in the outcome and expresses the greatest satisfaction with the progress of the students.

"I may say," he went on, "that the first term of the school has been so satisfactory that we are already preparing for the second group, and have decided to make the school a permanent feature, gradually expanding its activities. Eventually, no doubt, we shall be able to teach all the branches of the craft, such as cinematography, continuity writing, setting and costume design, and so on, but that is, of course, in the future.

"We are getting splendid co-operation in preparing for the second group of students. Some persons were skeptical at first, but now they have seen that it is a bona fide, legitimate venture, and we are receiving every possible aid.

"We have engaged Sam Wood to direct the picture in which the students will appear and for the past few weeks he has been working with them, studying each carefully so as to bring the most out of them for this picture. I am confident that this will be one of the most interesting pictures of the year, since the students have shown so much promise, and will put so much sincerity and enthusiasm into this picture."

In watching the students at the Long Island studio put through their paces by Sam Wood, Mr. Lasky's statements were more than borne out. Having seen them shortly after they entered the school, one could not fail to note the remarkable improvement—the poise and self-confidence which they had acquired. Patiently various groups of them went through a scene on a set used by one of the units—lighted and photographed just as carefully as if it had been a regular production—and the following day they would see their "rushes" and study their own work on the screen. It will be surprising indeed if two or three of the students, at least, do not turn out brilliantly, for they give every promise of it now.

JUST BORN

NEWEST of the film publications, the first issue of the weekly fan paper published by Lichtbild-Buehne, Berlin, has just reached this desk. Called "Der Filmspiegel" (The Film Mirror), the first copy promises well for the future. The cover bears an attractive portrait of Lil Dagover, one of Germany's most popular, beautiful and talented feminine players, and the contents are divided between American and German productions. A translation of the fiction version of "The Sea Hawk" is started, and the center spread features equally photos of "Goldrausch" (none other than "The Gold Rush!"), and "Der Rosenkavalier," a Viennese picturization of the Strauss opera. Several highly readable feature articles are also included. Photos from American companies will be handled by Wolff M. Henius, New York representative of the publishing firm, who is located in the Candler building.

AMPAS HIGH JINKS

THE A. M. P. A. is giving its Western brother, the Wampas, strong competition these days, socially as well as professionally. Last week's meeting proved one of the best to date, with a program of entertainment that included Milt Gross, the fastest rising humorist on the comedy horizon (wonder why somebody doesn't get him to title a suitable picture in his unique vernacular?), Harry Hirschfield, cartoonist and president of the Cheese club, Hal Shubert, playing in "Abie's Irish Rose" (flops may come and flops may go, but this goes on forever!), and Wade Booth, a Keith vaudeville songster.

This week's meeting promises to be an unusual one. It is to be one of a series of twelve presided over by the men selected as the leaders of the industry, the first being Adolph Zukor. Mr. Zukor's talk promises to be an interesting event.

Under the leadership of Glen Allvine, the A. M. P. A. is doing very nicely. Of course, as Harry Wilson remarked this week, the Wampas has one big advantage over the Manhattan chapter of the Read Men (pretty bad, that one!), in that it can hold its meetings evenings at the Writers' club, which permits of more extended affairs than the noontime luncheons of the A. M. P. A. with everyone keeping one eye on the clock and the other on the appointment list. However, Harry is becoming more of a native son every day, and his enthusiasm for all things that grow under the California sun can be readily understood, if not so readily forgiven. Perhaps a long distance checker tournament would be in order, to decide the relative merits of the two thriving organizations—and may the best clan win!

OPPORTUNITY? YES!

MACK SENNETT, the comedy producer, takes a healthy swing this week at the pessimistic individuals who say that the studio door is closed to newcomers and that the field is overcrowded.

"If you think the field is overcrowded, just try casting a picture," advises the comedy veteran. "The other day we interviewed a hundred girls to find one of the type we wanted—something on the order of Alice Day. I was astonished to find what a scarcity there is of this type of girl. Nine out of ten today look alike. They have their hair cut in the same fashion; their clothes are similar in style and color; they even carry themselves in some manner that is strangely standardized.

"Out of the hundred girls, only one answered our requirements. This was a little girl of whom I had never heard, who has youth, vivacity, refinement and a natural talent for acting—Ruth Taylor. Naturally, we signed her to a contract at once.

"The field for new faces in pictures is wide open, but there are too many rubber-stamps and too few real personalities."

Evidently, then, the formula for screen success is to "be yourself." At that, the past year has seen a remarkable number of new faces on the screen, of various individual types, bearing out Mr. Sennett's contention.

THRESHING IT OUT

TEN years ago Roy Carpenter was chauffeur to a threshing machine in the wheat fields of Kansas. This week First National appointed him head cameraman for "Men of Steel." A decade ago, when he tired of separating the wheat from the chaff, he went to Hollywood, where he decided that the life of a cinematographer was much to be preferred. So he became an assistant and finally a full fledged cameraman. Earl Hudson brought him to New York, where he has photographed three Sills pictures.

You wouldn't imagine that a threshing machine was the best training school for a future cinematographer, but if you've seen Carpenter's photography in the recent Sills vehicles, you may decide otherwise.

ARRIVING AND DEPARTING

TOM MOORE, after finishing the title role in "The Song and Dance Man," sailed for Europe on Wednesday of this week. Bessie Love, of the same cast, sailed last Saturday, also for a brief vacation. Meanwhile, Alice Joyce has arrived in New York to prepare for the leading role in "Dancing Mothers," following Conway Tearle and Betty Bronson, who preceded her for the same cast.

Some of the members of the large First National party which arrived in New York from the Coast last week; left to right: Mrs. E. M. Asher, Mr. Asher, producer of the Corinne Griffith vehicles, Anna Q. Nilsson, John E. McCormick, general manager of production on the West Coast, Mrs. M. C. Levee and Mr. Levee, head of the United Studios.

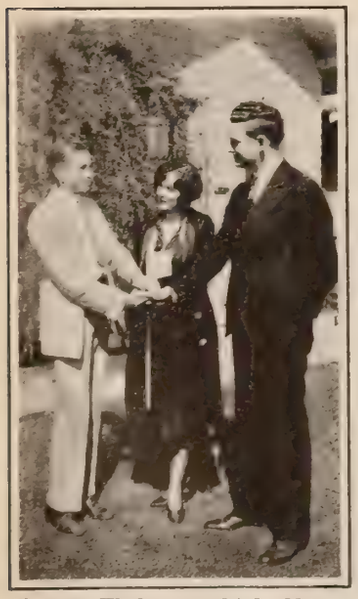
"STELLA" ARRIVES

BELLE BENNETT, selected by Samuel Goldwyn for the title role of "Stella Dallas" after tests had been made of 72 other candidates, arrived in New York on Thursday of this week to appear in a picture and to be present at the premiere of the Henry King production when it opens at the Apollo theatre, Monday, November 16.

It is said by those who have seen the picture on the Coast that her performance is one of the outstanding characterizations of screen history. She appeared on the legitimate stage in New York, headed two successful stock companies, and played minor roles in "In Hollywood with Potash and Perlmutter" and "His Supreme Moment" before essaying "Stella Dallas."

AMONG THOSE PRESENT—

AN elaborate party in honor of the Talmadge sisters was given last week by Pearl Doles Bell, the novelist and screen writer, at the Lido-Venice. Among the guests were numbered many screen favorites, leading stage players and prominent society people. Later the party adjourned to the roof-garden apartment of Robert M. Catts for a late supper and dancing.



Al Boasberg of the home office of F. B. O. visits the West Coast studios; where he is snapped by the still man with Larry Kent and Kit Guard, two of the funmakers in "The Adventures of Mazie," now in production.

Vilma Banky, one of the newest screen luminaries, was met by Acting Mayor Edward Rainey when she went to San Francisco to appear with "The Dark Angel" (First Nat'l) at Loew's Warfield.

Ivene Whipple of Freeport, Maine, first prize winner in Pathe's "Sunken Silver" contest, who has been offered a chance to appear in a future Pathe serial.

Horace Wade, youthful Chicago reporter, meets charming Jacqueline Logan and her husband, Ralph Gillespie, at the William Fox West Coast studios

A VALUABLE VOLUME

ALTHOUGH this is not a book review department, mention should certainly be made of a volume received this week from the publishers in Paris, "Histoire du Cinematographe," or "History of the Motion Picture," which is certain to interest any of the more studious minded persons of the industry, even though they have only a slight knowledge of French. Containing some 650 pages and 133 illustrations, it sets forth the history of the motion picture more completely than has ever been done here.

The first section is devoted to the various early devices which foreshadowed the motion picture. The second part sets forth the actual invention and development of the camera and projector. The third deals with the French industry as organized today, while the fourth covers the applications of the motion picture to education, and the like.

An interesting section of the book deals with the Edison-Armat-Jenkins-Lumiere controversy as to just who did actually invent the motion picture projector as we have it today. A considerable mass of documentary evidence is set forth bearing on this, and while one may not agree with the conclusion drawn—to wit, that the Lumiere Brothers deserve the lion's share of the glory—the data presented is valuable and not a little bit convincing.

It would seem that this controversy should be settled, if at all possible, while most of the men concerned are still living. It is only fair that posterity should place the credit where it belongs, and it will be much more difficult for another generation to determine this. The Society of Motion Picture Engineers, in this country, has obtained statements from Jenkins, from Edison and from George Eastman bearing on this, and if all the data were carefully sifted some of the apparent contradiction, at least, might be removed.

RESEARCH BY U. S.

DIRECTED by Victor Schertzinger; assisted by Billy Tummel; story by Peter B. Kyne; research by the United States Government—is the way the credit titles may (or might) appear on "The Golden Strain," the Fox film version of "Thoroughbreds."

Before starting actual work, the director and his assistant visited old Fort Huachuca in Arizona, where they conferred with Colonel J. H. Rhea, in charge, and with many Indian chiefs.

Then, upon returning to Hollywood, they wired the War Department at Washington, asking for data on the uniforms, insignia, rifles, revolvers and salutes of the period covered by the Kyne story. The result was more than gratifying, for the government responded with a generous collection of documents, old army manuals, and the like, covering every possible point in connection with the troops of that day.

And, at that, some critic who never saw a mess-kit will probably rise up and assert that the uniforms are wrong, that soldiers never saluted in that fashion, and that the colonel is wearing sergeant's insignia—but Director Schertzinger will have the satisfaction of knowing that he is right and that the picture is right.

PARAMOUNT'S BIGGEST

FILMING Paramount's largest and most expensive production is the task assigned William Steiner of the Long Island Studio camera staff—a production to be 18 months in the making and which will cost $13,600,000.

Just a moment, please—don't shoot! It's really true. Every morning Steiner goes to the roof of the Criterion theatre and cranks off 25 or 30 feet of film of the work being done on the site of the Putnam building, which will make way for the Paramount building. He will continue this right through the entire construction, and when it is completed the assembled film will show in a few minutes the work of a score of months.

ANOTHER FOREIGN VISITOR

PHILIPP BRAND, treasurer of Althoff & Co., of Berlin, is an addition to the considerable group of European producers and distributors who have visited here recently. He is here to study conditions and to open an office in New York. He has brought with him "Wallenstein," an elaborate historical production, and his company expects to bring three others to these shores.

An alluring pose of Natalie Joyce, one of the reasons why Christie comedies, released by Educational, are mighty easy on the eyes.

Capt. Roald Amundsen, the distinguished Norwegian explorer, as he appears in "The Amundsen Polar Flight," to be released by Pathe.

Charles Ray, signed to a long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, after his work in "A Little Bit of Broadway," recently filmed at the M-G-M studios.

Admission Tax Repeal Urged by Industry's Representatives

Pettijohn, Brylawski and Others Before Committee

By Clarence Linz

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Box office psychology literally was the theme of the discussions before the House Ways and Means Committee by representatives of the motion picture, vaudeville and other amusement interests in their plea for the elimination of the admission tax prescribed by the revenue act of 1924. State Senator J. Henry Walters, of New York, representing the B. F. Keith interests; A. Julian Brylawski, of Washington, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Administrative Committee; Charles C. Pettijohn of New York, representing the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; M. J. O'Toole, of Scranton, Pa.; and Charles J. Kaffler, of the "101 Ranch" circus. The delegation of theatre men was headed by Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the Hays organization.

Briefly outlined, it was declared that the tax on popular-priced amusement is a deterrent to business and that while the Government does secure more than $30,000,000 a year in the levies on admissions and dues, the incomes of the purveyors of amusement are curtailed so that losses are sustained by the Government in lowered payments under the surtax and normal tax provisions of the same law that imposes the admission tax. The amusement interests have resorted to the building of larger houses with a view to inducing greater patronage and thus to meet the ever-increasing costs of operation. The peak of prices has long since been reached and the impossibility of getting greater returns by increasing admissions realized. Repeal of the tax will be immediately followed by the cutting of prices in most instances slightly more than the amount of the tax relief, the Committee was assured.

Assurances by Mr. Connolly that the theatre men would make their statements as brief as possible and that they were willing to relinquish some of the time that had been allotted to them, met with the approval of the Committee and created an excellent impression. The theatre men stuck to their text, not engaging in any spread of oratory or flag waving in relating what the industry had done during the war. On the basis of today's situation governing the proposed reduction of taxes it would appear as though further relief would be afforded the amusement industry to the extent possibly that admissions of $1 and under would be exempt from the tax. This is not to be taken as a prediction of what finally may be the action of Congress for it is too early yet for any one to make a definite statement of prospects.

Admitting that there are certain economic questions that must be considered by the Ways and Means Committee before it can definitely arrive at a plan for equitably reducing the burden of taxation, Mr. Pettijohn expressed the hope that the question of the amusement tax would not be forgotten. He stressed the popular-priced amusements. These, he said, are closer to the people and represent a preserver of good order and a guarantee of public safety.

Mr. Pettijohn made no effort to go into statistics as to how much money would be lost to the Government through changes in the tax, pointing out that all such information naturally could be better obtained through the Treasury Department. Some consideration at this time should be given to the removal of the tax on popular amusement, including motion pictures, vaudeville, and baseball, he declared.

Asked by Representative Treadway, of Mass., if there has been any decrease in attendance because of the tax on admissions, Mr. Pettijohn replied that he had never seen any segregation of the admission tax figures and would not want to say there has been any appreciable decrease in attendance. He made the observation, however, that the payment of the admission tax is irksome to the taxpayer.

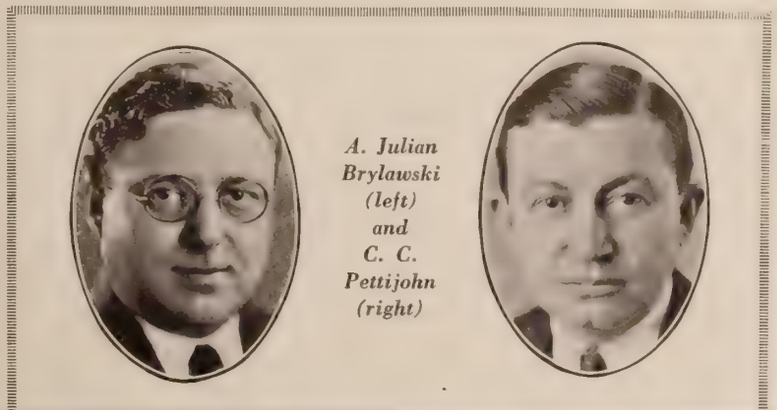
He explained that when he goes to theatre with his wife, when the admission is $1, ment for two tickets he has to lay down three bills before the ticket seller and receive the tickets and 80 cents in change.

"I feel that three bills have gone instead of two, and the matter of the tax is called to my attention every time I pay for admission to a place of amusement," he added. "And it is held up in front of the average man and woman several times each week. It is a small amount, generally, but aggravating and I believe that this form of tax should be eliminated as soon as some of the others that are being recommended for repeal."

Representative Garner, of Texas, suggested that this is one of the "nuisance taxes". Representative Treadway referred to the profits taken by the scalpers, but Mr. Pettijohn said he was not before the Committee upholding that class of ticket sellers.

The prepared statement of Mr. Pettijohn was as follows:

"Congress, at its last session, abolished the tax on admissions up to and including fifty cents. This was a tremendous relief to the theatre going public, and especially to the smaller theatre owners of the country. It saved hundreds of them going out of business. Careful canvass shows that when the tax was removed that more than 85 per cent of the exhibitors of the country reduced their admission prices. In other words, they gave their patrons the benefit of the reduction of the tax.



"While the tax collected on admissions to places of entertainment may be an amusement tax, it is far from being in any sense a luxury tax. Entertainment is recreation and wholesome recreation is a necessity, if tolerable living is considered something more than a mere drab, mechanical existence. The amusement tax is in a very real sense a tax on a necessity.

"Mankind must have something with which to fill in leisure hours and relieve the tension of civilized life if he is not to resort to injurious mischief. The amusement tax is, therefore, a tax on a preservative of good order and public safety.

"The amusement tax was excusable in the beginning only because it was an emergency war measure. The conditions which made it a necessity are now definitely things of the past and it ought to be abolished as soon as conditions will permit.

"While the greatest of our magazines boasts of circulation of 2,500,000, the movies reach 70,000,000 weekly. The motion picture theatre occupies a place in its community second only, if second, to the newspaper itself for the building of public opinion. Its power for good should not be hampered by excessive taxation.

"It may not be possible, at this time, to abolish all of the tax on admissions and it now becomes a question for your Committee to decide as to what taxes can and should be removed. I do not want to suggest up to what amount taxes on admissions should be repealed because your Committee, in the last analysis, will have before you actual figures from the Treasury Department showing how much revenue would be lost to the Government in exemptions of 50 cents to $1.00, $1.00 to $1.50 and $1.50 to $2.00 and so on up. I firmly believe that this tax, which hits the great mass of the American Public from one to four times a week, should be repealed in its entirety. However, if this can not be done, this great burden should be lifted as much as possible in view of existing conditions in the Treasury."

The effect of the tax is felt at the box office of the theatre in many ways, according to Mr. Brylawski. He stated he appeared before the Committee here as Executive Chairman of the motion picture theatre owners of America and representing them in their appeal to this Committee and to Congress for the repeal on the present tax on theatre admissions.

"This tax was called from its very inception a 'War Tax' and as a 'War Tax' it still remains in the minds of the Public although we have been most careful to eliminate the words 'war' from our tickets and price lists," he said. "Now the first point that I wish to bring out in my statement which I can assure you will be very brief, is the resentment of the public to this tax—truly one of the so called 'nuisance taxes'. No body of men on earth are closer to the public than the theatre men— our box offices are a medium of contact sensitive in the extreme to every fluctuation of public taste and sentiment. This contact is a necessary, vital part of our business, without it we can not exist for in the amusement field 'The Public must be served'—so therefore I think we are well qualified to testify to the strenuous, unfavorable reaction that this tax has and is causing throughout the country. It is a burden that draws resentment from the purchaser of the ticket and a patron that feels resentment at the Box Office is not a good audience for us. So strong has this feeling been apparent that in many sections of the country theatre owners have taken what to them is the wiser course and have at their own expense absorbed the tax. This however is something that but few theatres can afford and so it has been worked out to the detriment of the average theatre whose earnings do not permit of this additional burden. But in the vast majority of cases the tax is passed on to the public as was intended and the public do not like it.

"Amusements today are as much a part of the life of a community as any other primary necessity. They are a necessity, not a luxury and are of the greatest value to the health, happiness and morale of the people. Like everything else, the cost of amusement is constantly advancing—I mean primarily the cost of production, actors, stage hands, musicians, stories, material, reach a new level each year. The cost of films, acts, plays are constantly on an upward trend. You will say that we pass these things on to the public and of course that is sometimes possible, but I call your attention to the constant level of theatre prices in the last three years. Theatre owners can not raise or lower prices at will—they are normally constant. The bureau of statistics of our organization whose duty it is to collect this data reports that the average price of theatre admissions throughout the country has advanced but 3⅓ per cent since 1922, this, despite vastly greater increased costs. The fact of the matter is that theatre admissions have reached a "high" that does not admit of profitable advance. By that I mean that a higher admission charge will not bring increased revenue at the box office, as the falling off in the number of admissions is directly relative to the increase in price. Of course I am not speaking of occasional, exceptional attractions, but of conditions everywhere on a general average.

"The only answer to increased cost of shows today with us is increased capacity—not higher prices but more admissions. This is the natural law that is building the great large capacity theatres of to day—with their appeal of bigger shows for the same money. But the great number of theatres throughout the country built in normal times and with relatively small capacities feel the burden of this tax keenly. To them the increased cost of the ticket by reason of this tax cuts down the number of admissions and the revenues. To the public the removal of this tax means lower theatre prices—to the theatre owner it means larger theatre audiences and I am sure gentlemen that if you can see your way to remove this burden from off our shoulders, we will all thank you from the bottom of our hearts."

The value of motion pictures as an educational medium was stressed by M. J. OToole, of Scranton, Pa., who spoke on the motion picture as the screen press, contending that the theatres should no more be assessed with an admission tax than the newspapers of the country should be taxed with a special levy. Mr. O'Toole referred to letters which he had received from the Secretaries of the Treasury, Agriculture and War and the Postmaster General setting forth what motion pictures have been doing to aid the government in its various activities. He referred also to statements made by President Coolidge as to the great value of the screen.

He was unaware of the fact that although Secretary Mellon and Undersecretary Winston had spoken most highly of the value of the motion picture screen, the former expressed his opposition to the repeal of the tax on the occasion of his opening address to the Ways and Means Committee. His brief remarks on the subject were read for the benefit of the Committee and the theatre men by Representative Garner.

"Admissions and dues brought in $31,000,000 last year, and are estimated to bring in $33,000,000 this year," said Mr. Mellon. "The tax applies only to admissions sold in excess of 50 cents. It does not seem that this tax is any particular burden and in the interests of the revenue it produces it ought to be retained."

Mr. O'Toole stated he was not aware that Mr. Mellon had changed his opinion expressed last year that the admission taxes should be repealed, but after discussing the matter briefly with Mr. Garner he expressed the thought that the Mellon suggestion does not necessarily bind the Committee and his point seemed well taken for it amused the Committee members.

The witness was asked by Representative Crowther, of New York, as to whether or not the "legitimate" theatre interests were satisfied with the existing tax inasmuch as there seemed to be no one present to represent them, but Mr. O'Toole stated he was without information on that score and that he would like to confine himself to the subject of motion pictures and popular priced vaudeville.

A. J. Kleist, New President of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan

Representative Kearns, of Ohio, wanted to know how much actually was paid the actors and actresses in the movies, intimating that if the salaries were lowered, the films would not cost so much and the troubles of the exhibitors would be lessened. Mr. O'Toole stated he would like to know the true figures himself, whereupon Mr. Connolly interposing, General Counsel Pettijohn was called into the argument.

Mr. Pettijohn assured the committee that the stars were not paid one-fifth or one-tenth of what the public was led to believe they received. He declared he never knew of one getting more than $2,500 a week.

"It is all publicity," he declared. "If I had my way, the publicity men who send out these wild statements of actors' and actresses' salaries would be sent down here to appear before your Committees of Congress. I believe those press statements are the most damaging things possible to the business."

Receiver Appointed For S. J. Gregory

Upon application of four Hammond banks and William Kleighe acting personally and as president of the Hammond Amusement Company, S. J. Gregory Theatrical company and the East Chicago Amusement company, a receiver was appointed for S. J. Gregory. Receiver Chas. L. Surprise, it is understood, has taken charge of Mr. Gregory's real estate, bank accounts, leases, etc. It was also claimed by Mr. Kleighe that there had been an overcharge of one hundred thousand dollars more than actually spent in the construction of the Parthenon theatre in Hammond.

Mr. Gregory has been a very prominent theatre man, having organized the Hammond Amusement, S. J. Gregory Theatrical and the East Chicago Amusement companies, which own and operate the Parthenon, Deluxe and Orpheum theatres in Hammond and the Forsythe and Lyric theatres in East Chicago. Other theatres in which Mr. Gregory is interested include the Parthenon, Berwyn; Lagrange at Lagrange, and the Crown point at Crown Point, Indiana, the latter three theatres not being involved in the present receivership action.

The application for receivership came shortly following a directors' meeting of the three companies operating the Hammond and East Chicago theatres in which Mr. Gregory was deposed as president and director and William Kleighe, who owns the majority of the stock in the companies, elected to fill his place. It is also understood that at this time Mr. Gregory was forced to return all stock which he held in these companies.

Circuit Expansion Continues Lively During Week

Mark-Robbins, Famous-B. & K.-Shea Deals Set

RECENT unprecedented expansion among leading theatre circuits continued unabated this week, with important deals consummated which enlarge the holdings of national distributors in the theatre field and others which mean a wider field of activity for leading circuits.

One of the outstanding deals of the week was closed when the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corporation, operating theatres in New York City, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Albany, Troy and Syracuse, took over the Nathan Robbins chain of houses in Watertown, Utica and Syracuse. This gives the Mark company twenty large houses in New York State.

In Buffalo it was announced that Famous Players-Lasky and Balaban & Katz have closed a deal whereby they replace all outside interests, excepting Michael Shea, in the company operating the Shea theatres. Shea will continue to operate the houses. The deal also calls for an important new theatre in Buffalo.

Famous-B. & K. also purchased the Hi-Art theatre in Lockport, N. Y., this week, after extended negotiations. Famous was already operating the Palace theatre in the Lock City.

Announcement is anticipated momentarily in St. Louis of expansion plans of the St. Louis Amusement Company calling for the acquisition of some fifteen leading neighborhood and suburban theatres, further strengthening the Skouras chain.

Reports in Detroit indicated that the Kunsky-B. & K. interests would erect three large and costly neighborhood houses in Detroit, a site having been already obtained for the first, to seat 3,000, in the North Woodward section, it is said. Two second and third are to follow within two years.

The Mitchell H. Mark Realty corporation, operating theatres in Albany, New York, Brooklyn, Troy, Syracuse and Buffalo, took over the chain of houses this week that have been owned and operated by Nathan Robbins, of Utica, including theatres in Watertown, Utica and Syracuse. The deal will give the Mitchell H. Mark company twenty large motion picture theatres in New York State. Announcement of the deal made in Albany on Tuesday came as a distinct surprise although it has been known for sometime past that the company has been in the field for additional theatres. Sometime ago, an announcement was made to the effect that Robbins was negotiating with Famous Players-Lasky, but this deal fell through some weeks ago.

Robbins Becomes Officer

Robbins, who is one of the best known men in the motion picture business in central New York, will become one of the vice-presidents of the Mitchell H. Mark company, and in that capacity will be associated with Moe Mark, of New York; Walter Hays, of Buffalo; Eugene Falk, and others.

The Mitchell H. Mark company has been expanding rapidly of late in both Albany and Troy. Starting with the Mark Strand in Albany, as the original house in that part of the state, the company acquired the Albany and the Regent theatres from the Suckno estate about two months ago, and is operating these houses following a brief closing, during which considerable money was spent in improvements.

The same company is also erecting a quarter of a million dollar theatre in Albany which will be in readiness for opening early next spring. All four houses are located in the business center of Albany, with the Buckley theatres the only competing houses.

In the neighboring city of Troy the company operates the Troy theatre as well as the American and the Lincoln, all located in the downtown section. The Lincoln theatre was taken over several months ago from Symnasky brothers, and the American was acquired last spring but remained closed until a month or so ago.

In Watertown, the company now commands the situation with the Olympic as the largest of the group. In Syracuse, by acquiring the Eckel, a down-town house, the company also takes over a business block in which the theatre is located. The amount of the deal has not been made public.

Buffalo Deal

Famous Players-Lasky and Balaban & Katz have closed a deal with the McNaughton Realty company of Buffalo through which the former corporation takes the place of all outside interests in the Buffalo company, except Michael Shea who remains as heretofore. The deal also provides for the erection of a new theatre on the Root site at 622 Main street. Shea will continue to operate the houses involved, which include Shea's new Buffalo theatre, Shea's Hippodrome, Shea's North Park and Shea's Court street, the latter being the vaudeville house playing Keith attractions.

Negotiations have been underway for several weeks with meetings between the parties involved taking place in Buffalo, New York and Chicago. Harold B. Franklin, who graduated from the managing directorship of Shea's Hippodrome to the Paramount theatre department, took a leading part in consummating the deal. The new Shea Buffalo theatre is one of the finest houses in the country. It is expected to be ready for the public the middle of January. It will have a seating capacity of 4,000 and will be gorgeous in interior decoration and unusually complete in modern equipment.

The name of Shea has been synonomous with the best in entertainment in Buffalo for over a quarter century. Buffalonians have always responded to Shea's efforts to give them the best obtainable in motion pictures and vaudeville. Every house in the chain today is enjoying great prosperity.

With the new Comerford-Fox theatre at Main and Chippewa, the new Shea Buffalo a few steps away up the block, the new F. P.-L.-B. & K. house in between these two and the Hippodrome just below the trio, Buffalo will have four big theatres in a row. With Paramount interested in the Shea company, the city undoubtedly will get the attractions, pictures and prologues which will be sent over the circuit.

Skouras Expansion

Spyros Skouras, president of Skouras Brothers Enterprises and also of the St. Louis Amusement company is due back in St. Louis from New York City. It is anticipated that important official announcements affecting both of the companies will be made shortly upon his return to that city.

The deal involving the Missouri and new Ambassador theatre with Paramount was scheduled to go through the past week, and it is believed that Skouras will announce that the necessary papers have been signed.

It is also expected that another big deal will be consummated whereby some fifteen leading neighborhood and suburban theatres will pass under control of the St. Louis Amusement company. Preliminary steps toward this move have already been taken and but a few minor details remain to be straightened out.

A third deal involving the Skouras interests was the recording of the agreement with William Goldman affecting the Grand Central, West End Lyric, Lyric Skydome and the Kings Theatre and Garden.

As is known, that merger will not become effective until thirty days after the new ambassador has been completed and in operation. However, several weeks ago Skouras Brothers and Goldman perfected a booking arrangement whereby the Kings has played day and date with Skouras houses on several big pictures. That arrangement also included the Rivoli, Sixth street near Olive, operated by Goldman.

PARAMOUNT SIGNS SCHULBERG

Goes to Production Department

B. P. SCHULBERG has joined the production department of Famous Players-Lasky under a long term contract, according to announcement by Jesse L. Lasky. By the arrangement Famous also takes over four players and one director whom Schulberg had under contract. The four players who will be added to the Paramount Stock company are Clara Bow, Donald Keith, Alyce Mills and Gilbert Rowland. The director is William Wellman.

In announcing the signing of Schulberg, Jesse Lasky said:

"In embarking on the greatest production program in our history, it gives me great pleasure to announce the addition of Mr. Schulberg to our producing forces. Mr. Schulberg will produce pictures in the Lasky studio and we expect that his coming will be of immense help in the ambitious program we have prepared for ourselves.

"I wish to emphasize that Mr. Schulberg's coming to the Lasky studio is an addition to our forces and does not mean in any sense that there will be any change in the producing personnel of the production department. By adding Mr. Schulberg to our forces we will be able to devote even greater care and attention to each individual picture. We have just finished our schedule of Fall releases—the Greater Forty. Great as these pictures have been it is our purpose to make our Spring product even bigger in individual production values. I know Mr. Schulberg will be of material assistance to us in this direction."

FamousLtd.'sFinancial Report

Net Profits for Fiscal Year Amount to $413,168; Company's Assets are $15,416,063

LARGER net profits, an increase in the number of theatres controlled, a greater net surplus brought forward, dividends paid on first preference stock and other highly favorable features were noted in the annual financial statement of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, for the fiscal year ending August 29, 1925, which has just been released from the Toronto head office.

Net profits for the 12 months amounted to $413,168, before providing for income taxes for 1925, as compared with $304,362 for the preceding fiscal year. The surplus brought forward from August 29, not providing for the 1925 income ta es, was $243,-325, while the net surplus at the same date one year before was $187,146. It is pointed out that the 1924 income taxes amounted to $33,182.

The company's total assets are shown at $15,416,063. Dividends paid on the first preference stock totalled $332,000. Theatre properties are carried on the books at a net valuation of $5,237,205 and investments in various affiliated companies are recorded at $449,685. Advances to affiliated companies secured by mortgages amounted to $216,612. Cash in the banks and on hand amounted to $264,672 and the accounts receivable are shown at $156,401.

Interest paid on bonds and mortgages reached the total of $90,369. The proportion of deferred charges met during the year was $47,069 and property depreciation was placed at $180,000. Total deductions, including these several items, amounted to $317,438.

An increase of $120,000 was shown in the mortgages on theatre properties during the 12 months but this was due to a transaction at Ottawa, Ontario, in which a mortgage was assumed on a large downtown property adjacent to the site now being held for a theatre. Not including this property purchase, the outstanding mortgages on other theatre properties throughout Canada were reduced by $73,000 during the year.

Famous Players Canadian Corp. now controls more than 80 theatres in Canada, it is pointed out, the largest development during the year being the acquisition of the Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, holdings.

The president of the Canadian Company is Adolph Zukor of New York City, N. L. Nathanson of Toronto is the managing director of the corporation and subsidiary companies.

Tax Appeals Board Decides for Central Amuse. Co.

The United States Board of Tax Appeals meeting at Washington, D. C., has reversed a decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, levying additional taxes of $4,199 against the Central Amusement Company, operators of motion pictures and vaudeville theatres in Indianapolis.

The case arose out of the formation by the company of the Alhambra Realty Company for the purpose of purchasing the land upon which its Alhambra Theatre was located. The commissioner held that the two companies should be considered as separate entities for the entire year of 1920, whereas the Central Amusement Company claimed that they were affiliated during the first six months of the year. The board upheld the company's contention.

Circuit Expansion Lively During Week

Skouras Brothers and Harry Koplar, who jointly control the St. Louis Amusement company, have also had a complete understanding on some points of controversy and that company is prepared to go through with a program of major construction of houses and acquisition of existing theatres.

The first step in this direction was the purchase of the Hamilton Airdome as the site for a $1,000,000 motion picture theatre and apartment and store building. This house will seat 3,000 and play day and date with the Grand Central and other Skouras first run houses on big pictures.

It is also known that plans are under consideration for a $1,000,000 house in the Gravois District and another big house for the southwestern section of the city. The Skouras Brothers are also interested in the new Cascade theatre at Southwest avenue and Edwards street.

The public response to the announcement of the agreement between Goldman and Skouras Brothers and also of the deal involving the Missouri and Ambassador has been spectacular. The stocks of the St. Louis Amusement company and Skouras Brothers A stock were two of the lively spots on the St. Louis stock exchange during the past week and sold at high prices throughout.

During the week the Board of Directors of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., declared a dividend of 75 cents a share on Class A stock and 30 cents per share on Class B stock, payable on November 2 to stockholders of record October 24th. The stock books were closed on October 24th and will not be re-opened until November 2.

The Goldman-Skouras agreement provides that a new corporation shall be formed to operate the Grand Central, West End Lyric, Lyric Skydome and Kings. Goldman and Spyros and Charles Skouras will manage the four houses. Goldman will be paid on annual salary of $12,500 and the Skouras Brothers $8,750 each. Skouras Brothers will hold 55 per cent of the stock of the new company and Goldman the balance. There will be 1,000 shares of no par value stock.

Skouras Brothers will receive $15,000 annual rent for the West End Lyric and $10,-000 for the Lyric Skydome plus 18 per cent of the gross receipts above $55,500. Goldman will be paid $20,000 annually for the Kings.

Famous Players Planning Short Subject Dept.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY has been considering the establishment of a Short Subject Department, according to authoritative information this week. It is said that plans have not yet been matured.

A published report that some of the subjects would be made by the Harold Lloyd corporation, but not starring Lloyd, was denied by William R. Fraser, executive of that company, in a telegram to MOTION PICTURE NEWS from Los Angeles. He branded the story as a wild rumor.

Riesenfeld Resigns Theatre Post

Sees Period of Sharp Competition Looming, With Individual Personalities Temporarily Submerged by Machine

CONSIDERABLE surprise was occasioned in Broadway film circles this week by the announcement that Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld had resigned his post as managing director of the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion theatres, the Famous Players New York first run houses. This will take effect at the end of this year, at which time he will probably take a well earned rest before determining his future plans.

It is known that he is leaving the theatres on the friendliest of terms with Adolph Zukor and other Paramount officials, and the move does not constiute a "break" between Dr. Riesenfeld and Famous Players. Strongest of all, perhaps, is the fact that he has labored unceasingly for nearly ten years, with a steady growing burden of detail and routine, and, as he expresses it, wants to arrange a connection where he can find a little time to enjoy life.

"Of course I will be back on Broadway," he said, with a smile. "My life has become so closely bound up with motion pictures that I probably could not stay away if I wanted to. Just when and where this will be, I am not prepared to say at the moment, but I hope that I can arrange it so thatI can devote a little more time to my family, my friends, my books—all of the things which make life worth the living, and which I have had to neglect so sadly during these busy years."

Several Offers Made

It is understood that within an hour of the announcement of his withdrawal from the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion, he received offers from several of the leading theatre firms. Conjectures along Broadway were to the effect that he might follow S. L. Rothafel's example in the construction of a theatre where he could give free expression to his own ideas of presentation and management. No statement has been made which would confirm this, but Dr. Riesenfeld has expressed the ambition to have a house of vast seating capacity, in one of the poorer neighborhoods, where the best music, pictures and presentations could be brought to the real "masses" at a popular price, the large seating capacity and lower real estate value making possible the low admission price. This, however, he has merely expressed as an ideal, and it may have no bearing on his present plans.

He expressed the belief, however, that New York theatre construction would have to follow the example of Chicago in the building of palatial neighborhood houses away from the present theatrical centre. The congestion of traffic, he pointed out, is becoming so great around Times Square that it handicaps a theatre located in that district. Suitable neighborhood houses, he believes, will keep people at home in their own districts, where they can reach the theatres more easily. The Martin Beck theatre, a legitimate house which opened last year, has a considerable advantage in that respect, in Dr. Riesenfeld's opinion, in that it is west of Eighth avenue and can be reached with much less annoyance and delay than those in the congested Broadway area.

As a well informed and intelligent observer of film conditions, Dr. Diesenfeld expressed some interesting views concerning the next period in the motion picture industry.

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld.

Era of Competition

"The coming era, as I see it," he said, "will be a period of sharp competition and struggle—one big combination against another big combination—one group of banking interests against another powerful group of banking interests—circuit against circuit—machine against machine—and for the time being, the individual will probably be more or less lost sight of.

"We are living in the day of the machine. This is true not only of the picture industry but of life itself. The same thing applies in any line of business. The individual does not count greatly at the moment.

"But this will all change. It cannot go on indefinitely. However powerful the machine, it is the individual mind, the exceptional personality, that counts. You cannot do without the individual, and in the end, the individual will come into his rightful place."

Dr. Riesenfeld's first connection with motion pictures dates back a decade to the period when the old Triangle company engaged the Knickerbocker theatre as a Broadway first run house. Here he made important contributions to the then infant art of musical accompaniment to motion pictures. Prior to the Knickerbocker engagement, he was a composer and conductor here and in Europe, have written the score for two produced musical comedies, as well as a large number of overtures, symphonies, and other orchestral music.

He has been with the three Famous Players houses since their inception, his connection dating back some nine and a half years. He was a pioneer in the welding of the best music, the best photoplays and high class dance divertisements and vocal and instrumental specialties into a unified presentation, and he is one of the small group of men recognized as leaders in the field of artistic program building.

With F. P.-L. Ten Years

During his long term of service with Famous Players he has launched many of the outstanding productions which have made screen history, creating presentations for them and arranging music scores which have later played an important part in their success. His name has become virt. ally synonomous with the three Broadway houses under his direction, and news of his forthcoming plans will be awaited with interest.

Seattle Loses Another First Run House

Seattle, Washington, once a city of 300,000 with eight first run motion picture houses, is now a city of 400,000 with but five first run theatres to its credit. This was the situation that became effective the latter part of October, when the Heilig Theatre was suddenly bought by the Henry Duffy Stock Company of San Francisco and Los Angeles, thus eliminating what has been for the last year an active, although unsuccessful, first run picture theatre.

The Duffy Players, after appearing at the Metropolitan Theatre in Seattle for the summer, have just obtained a ten year lease on the Heilig, and will reopen it as a stock house under a new name the middle of November. The seating capacity of the house will be decreased from 1,900 to 1,300, and $50,000 worth of repairs and renovations will be made before the opening.

The purchase of the Heilig leaves several of the leading film producers "out in the cold" as far as their 1925-26 product is concerned.

Junior Movies Approved In N. Y. State

Junior movies at the Troy, New York, theatre last Saturday attracted a record breaking crowd that completely filled the theatre. The movies are being held under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers association of the city, with Boy Scouts assisting as ushers.

Mrs. Wilson A. Mark has suggested that the Parent-Teacher association of Batavia, N. Y., sponsor a juvenile motion picture project. A committee has been appointed to act on the project and to report at the next meeting. The idea is to support such performances as special Saturday morning shows for the children.

The Star theatre on William street, Buffalo, operated by James Cooban, is trying out five cent matinees for children on Saturdays. The proposition to date is a big success and all the kids in the neighborhood forego their ice cream cones that day and enjoy "de movies."

F. B. O. SIGNS MRS. VALENTINO
Will Star in Gold Bond Special

F. B. O. has signed Mrs. Rudolph Valentino to star in an F. B. O. Gold Bond production, which will be one of the company's most pretentious offerings in the 1926-27 program. The deal was consummated by F. B. O. through Harry J. Cohen, manager of Mrs. Valentino. The picture is scheduled to go into production in the east about November 15th, with Harry O. Hoyt directing.

Mrs. Valentino is now in Paris busily engaged in the purchase of an extensive and gorgeous wardrobe for the production. She is scheduled to sail for America on the Steamship Leviathan on November 3rd.

The career of Mrs. Valentino as a professional is an interesting one. Her real name is Winifred Shaughnessy. Unusually talented as a designer and dancer, she became associated with Theodore Kosloff and taught in his dancing school in Los Angeles. There she met Mme. Nazimova and became associated with her as art director. She met her future husband on the "Camille" set, which she designed. Their subsequent marriage and separation is now screen history.

WHEREAS, this action by the national organizations of the motion picture industry indicates a desire to meet and defer to Humane public opinion in the treatment of animals, and a willingness to cooperate with accredited and responsible Humane societies, now, therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, that the American Humane Association in annual meeting assembled does heartily commend and congratulate the producers in the motion picture industry who have taken this enlightened attitude which is strongly approved by all humanitarians and which should serve as a guide and example to other interests and organizations responsible for the care, safety, and humane treatment of animals.

Rowland's Resignation from First National is Reported, But Not Confirmed

A REPORT was published in New York on Thursday morning that Richard A Rowland had tendered his resignation as general manager of First National Pictures, Inc., effective this week Saturday.

On Wednesday a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS interviewed Mr. Rowland on the foreign situation following his return from Europe. At that time, no mention was made of a withdrawal by Mr. Rowland from First National.

When the printed report of Mr. Rowland's alleged resignation appeared on Thursday morning, MOTION PICTURE NEWS at once got in touch with E. V. Richards, Jr., one of the most prominent members of the First National executive committee. Richards, in response to a query, said he had had no intimation of any such step by Mr. Rowland.

When the question was put direct to Mr. Rowland, he laughed and replied: "Well, I quit every Saturday, don't I? I will be here Saturday and probably for a good many Saturdays to come."

Fox Buys Rights to 'What Price Glory'

Acquisition Of Eight Belasco Plays, "Cradle Snatchers" And New Hutchinson Novel Also Announced By Company

SCREEN rights to "What Price Glory," written by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson and one of the outstanding successes among stage productions of recent seasons, have been acquired by Fox Film Corporation for presentation in photoplay form next season. The company this week also announced that six of the David Belasco stage successes, including "The Music Master," "The Auctioneer," "The Grand Army Man," in which David Warfield was starred; "The Lily" and "The Comedian," as well as "Cradle Snatchers," a current Broadway success. and "One Increasing Purpose," A. S. M. Hutchinson's latest novel, would be produced on the screen by Fox.

"What Price Glory," produced by Arthur Hopkins, ran for more than a year as the dramatic hit of Broadway. It closed recently, when four companies took the play out on tour. Because of its intense realism "What Price Glory" caused more controversy than any other production of the season. Louis Wolheim and William Boyd were the hardboiled captain and first sergeant whose battle for the affections of a pretty French girl formed the triangle of the play.

David Warfield's portrayal of "The Music Master" in 1901 established his reputation as a character actor of outstanding ability. The play ran for a record-breaking year in the old Belasco Theatre on 42nd Street, and then went on tour for two more years. It was revived successfully three times.

In 1904 came the production of "The Auctioneer," in 1907 came "The Grand Army Man," and in 1910 "The Return of Peter Grim," each of which brought Warfield new laurels. Each of the four plays ran for three years, one year on Broadway and two years on the road.

"The Lily" was produced on the stage with Nance O'Neill in the name role. Mr. Belasco wrote the English version of the play from the French of the original.

"The Comedian" is the story of a beautiful young girl who falls in love with a matinee idol. This role considerably enhanced the reputation of Lionel Atwill, who created the part.

"Cradle Snatchers," produced this season by Sam H. Harris with the assistance of Hazzard Short, is one of the reigning dramatic triumphs on Broadway. It is playing at the Music Box.

"One Increasing Purpose" is the third Hutchinson novel to be brought to the screen by Fox Films. "If Winter Comes" and "This Freedom" were presented with considerable success two seasons ago. This latest Hutchinson novel has just been published in the United States and has already attained wide popularity.

Supreme Court to Hear Eastman Case

Grants Petition of Federal Trade Commission For Review of the Decision of Circuit Court of Appeals

THE United States Supreme Court on October 26 granted the petition of the Federal Trade Commission for a writ of certiorari in the Eastman Kodak Case, and will review the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals holding that the Federal Trade Commission act did not confer upon the commission the power to require a citizen to sell property acquired in the course of business; and that as the Eastman Company had the unquestioned right to equip itself to enter the laboratory business, no court could require the sale by the company of the laboratories.

The commission's investigation of the use of alleged methods of unfair competition by the Eastman Company led to the issuance of an order requiring the company to dissolve its agreement with independent laboratories under which the former would refrain from operating its three laboratories so long as the latter used only American-made film and also calling upon the company to dispose of the laboratories in question.

The Eastman Kodak Company carried the case to the courts, where a decision was rendered upholding that part of the commission's order requiring discontinuance of the agreement, but declaring invalid the requirement for disposition of the laboratories.

The commission appealed to the Supreme Court for a review of the decision, declaring that the law gave it authority to order the disposal of facilities which of themselves might become unfair methods of competition, and asserting that as long as the Eastman Company is permitted to continue to own the three laboratories the restraint upon interstate and foreign commerce will not be removed. "It was the threat of the operation of these laboratories which compelled the agreement on the part of the Eastman Company's customers not to use foreign made film," it is declared in the commission's brief. "This threat will be as potent to compel the laboratories to refrain from purchasing foreign film, regardless of the abrogation of the agreement, as it was to induce the agreement. Unless this court affirms that part of the commission's order which compels the sale of the laboratories by the Eastman Company the commission's order and the decree of the court below will be ineffective."

The three questions to be decided by the Supreme Court are: (1) Did the Eastman Company purchase the three laboratories for the express purpose of using them to compel its customers to refrain from purchasing foreign film, as found by the commission, or for the bona fide purpose of entering the business of making positive prints, as found by the courts; (2) was the commission's finding that the Eastman Company purchased the laboratories with the intention of using them to restrain trade and buttress its monopoly conclusive upon the court; and (3) does the Federal Trade Commission act confer upon the commission power, in a proper case, to require a corporation to dispose of property purchased for the purpose of using it to restrain trade and maintain a monopoly by closing the market to competitors.

Kansas-Missouri Abandons Semi-Annual Session

At the meeting of the board of directors of the M.P.T.O.A. Kansas-Missouri it was agreed to call off the semi annual convention and to bend all effort upon making the annual meeting larger.

While this plan met with some dissent the majority of opinion was that one big annual meeting would amply fill the bill; that the semi-annual meetings never were as well attended nor as enthusiastic as the yearly affair. Supporters of the plan held there would be more genuine interest at an annual confab.

Zukor Brands Rumored Resignation of Lasky as Malicious Falsehood

THE published report that Jesse L. Lasky is to resign from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is a malicious falsehood, circulated for selfish reasons, it was declared by Adolph Zukor.

"I see no reason why anybody should circulate this report, or why any reputable newspaper should publish it," said Mr. Zukor. "No doubt somebody who would profit by Mr. Lasky's departure from this company is busy spreading this story, which is a lie made of whole cloth. Mr. Lasky has no intention of leaving this company."

"I would call the story of my resignation a joke," said Mr. Lasky, "if it had not been given much widespread publication in the last few days. Let me say this, once and for all. I have no intention of leaving Famous Players. I have been here for years and I intend to remain. The report that I am about to resign is false, utterly and absolutely."

Petitions Ask Carnival Ban

East Penn., So. New Jersey Urge Many Reforms at Their Monthly Meeting

CONCERTED action on the part of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey against carnivals, bazaars, block parties and street fairs was taken at the October meeting of the organization, when petitions were placed in the hands of the members for signatures to be secured through the agency of neighborhood stores. The meeting took the form of a dinner and rally in the Hotel Vendig.

President H. J. Schad, of Reading, was in the chair.

The organization also endorsed the use of Welfare reels during the Federation Drive in Philadelphia, but left the matter of collections and speeches to the discretion of the individual exhibitors.

Geo. P. Aarons, Secretary of the M. P. T. O. A. requested that the meeting go on record as desiring that the Film Board of Trade supply the Secretary of the Exhibitors' League with a copy of complaints filed by exchanges against exhibitors which are to be heard before the Arbitration Board. Mr. Aarons said that as counsel for the League, he could see no reason why the F. B. T. should not supply him with this information.

The body also went on record for the seventh time as being strenuously opposed to signing percentage contracts and several speeches were made in this connection. One of the officers stated that the playing of double features being introduced in some sections of the city is detrimental to the best interests of the industry and urged that the organization pass a resolution for the abolishment of double features. Such a resolution was presented and unanimously passed.

A report submitted by the secretary showed that the organization is in a flourishing financial condition, with more than $2,000 in the treasury.

J. Epstein, of the Bell Theatre, and Nathan Appell, of the Appell Amusement Enterprises, operating theatres in York, Lebanon and upstate cities, were admitted to membership in the M. P. T. O.

Famous Won't Arbitrate Case

Refuses Re-hearing In Minneapolis Case And Files Complaint In Federal Court

FAMOUS PLAYERS has refused to be a party to further proceedings in arbitration before the Minneapolis Board in the complaint brought against the company by George Legeros, a warded a decision of the $2,667.60, and has filed a complaint in the district court to set aside the decision of the Arbitration Board and asking "such relief as the court may deem just."

In the complaint Legeros alleged that Famous failed to furnish him pictures for which he had contracted for use in a ball park at Watertown, Minn., on a 50-50 basis. Legeros claimed that Representative Tucker induced him to rent the park. Tucker, who furnished the projection machine, was to receive a one-third interest in the enterprise.

The case was heard by the Arbitration Board in Minneapolis and a decision rendered in favor of Legeros. Famous asked for a re-hearing. The petition was granted, and when the case came before the board for a re-hearing Famous revoked submission to arbitration in the case and took the court action. It is alleged that the company attempted to settle with Legeros out of court, offering, it is said, the sum of $1,000 as the settlement basis.

Increased Studio Efficiency Seen

John E. McCormick, Western General Production Manager for First National, Says Cutting is Done on Script

DESPITE continued advance in the cost of practically everything entering into film production, costs are being held at substantially the same level as last year by the First National units on the West Coast through increased production efficiency and the application of greater advance preparation to the script, according to John E. McCormick, general manager of production for First National on the West Coast.

McCormick arrived in New York on Thursday of last week with a party of First National producers, stars and special representatives, and returned to the Coast on Wednesday. While here he conferred with executives and officials of the organization in regard to production, stories and plays.

He hinted at some important announcements which may be forthcoming shortly from the West Coast in regard to possible new units and an interesting new procedure in production technique. This latter, however, is still in a rather nebulous stage.

"The big thing," he said, "is that business methods are being applied to production. The most important accomplishment is the limiting of 'over-shooting' through more lengthy and practical planning in advance. We are trying to keep our schedule lined up so that eight weeks of advance preparation can be put on each picture. As far as possible, we try to have at least two weeks between the completion of the script and the commencement of actual shooting.

Less Waste Footage

"Results have proved that this works out in actual practice, and that it pays. It has been no uncommon thing for the rough assembly of a feature to total 14,000 feet or thereabouts. On 'We Moderns,' just completed, the first assembly of the work print was only some 10,000 feet. That means a great saving, for under the old system whole sequences had to be cut—sequences which should never had been shot.

"Any competent production executive can look at a script and guage within reasonable limits the footage it will fill when filmed. In the past, production managers have known that a certain script would run twelve or fifteen thousand feet, but they lacked the confidence in their judgment to cut it out until they saw it on the screen.. Sets were built and actors engaged for costly sequences which could never, in the nature of things, appear on the screen.

"If a continuity writer is really creative, it is easy and natural for them to overstep the limits of length. If they start out to write a script with 400 scenes, they become inspired with new ideas and enthusiasm and deliver one with 620. That is perfectly natural and not to be blamed. But right there, before filming starts, the production department should bring it down to the amount of material which will actually go into the finished picture—and that is just what we are doing.

"It is not easy. Everyone concerned has some pet sequence, and they are willing that anything should be cut—except that. But with co-operation all around, it can be done, as we have proved. By this means, we are largely offsetting the gradual and steady rise in the cost of every item. By spending more time in advance, the actual time of filming, cost of set construction, payroll, and so on, can and are being held down materially."

John E. McCormick, Western General Production Manager for First National.

Referance was also made by Mr. McCormick to the announcement this week that Frank Lloyd, producer-director for First National, was leaving for a five months' vacation in the Orient before starting any further production.

Lloyd's Illness

"Mr. Lloyd has been working unceasingly for some three years without a rest," he explained, "and the strain has been great." Recently, following an illness, he started work before completely convalescing, and this, too, has told on him.

"Also, there is the very pressing problem of story material. After 'The Sea Hawk' and such pictures, it would be unwise and ridiculous for Lloyd to film anything but the very biggest type of story. The public expects a certain sort of thing from him, and it is not easy to find such stories. He is taking a number of stories with him to read during his vacation, and will undoubtedly have some interesting plans to announce upon his return."

Substantially the same information was contained in an announcement from the office of Frank Lloyd Productions in Hollywood.

Other members of the First National which came east included: E. M. Asher, producer of the Corinne Griffith pictures; M. C. Levee, president of the United Studios; Barney Lubin of Sawyer-Lubin; Anna Q. Nilsson, here to make a picture; Cleve Moore, brother of Colleen; Arthur Bernstein, general manager for Jackie Coogan; Harry Lichtig, personal representative for stars and producers; Larry Weingarten, Coogan's press representative; Joseph Hubbell of International News; and Harry D. Wilson, publicity director for First National West Coast Productions. Mrs. Levee, Mrs. Bernstein and Mrs. Asher were also members of the party. McCormick, Hubbell, Moore and Wilson returned together to the Coast on Wednesday of this week.

Long-Waited Seattle Tax Suit Under Way

After a long list of continuations and postponements on technicalities that have delayed action for more than a year, trial of the suit of Danz and Cohen, operating a string of second run downtown houses in Seattle, against Burns Poe, collector of Internal Revenue for the state of Washington, got actively under way in the federal courts in Tacoma last week. The action is to recover extra income taxes claimed by Danz and Cohen to have been paid during the period of the war.

Danz and Cohen are asking judgment to collect $6,871.89 from the department of Revenue. The United States Government, through Mr. Poe, denies having received the additional taxes represented, and also questions whether the Seattle company paid the full amount of income tax that it should have paid during the period involved.

Bullock Discusses Film Situation Abroad

Sam Bullock, just returned from a three months' trip to Great Britain and the continent, gave his impressions of the film situation abroad before the members of the motion picture committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs at the Hotel Statler, Cleveland, last Friday morning. Bullock spoke particularly of the feeling in Britain against what they term the effort of the American films to Americanize the world.

"American slang is heard all over England," Bullock stated. "The youngsters get it from the American films. The British fear that the modern breezy American film, distributed internationally, will break down the generations of old world culture, which is so fundamental in the life of the European." Mrs. Elmer G. Derr, chairman of the committee presided at the meeting.

Rochester to Make Peace With Musicians

An agreement is expected to be reached between the Rochester Musicians' Protective Association and the Rochester Theatre Managers' Association, following a meeting to be called in a few days by William A. Calihan, president of the latter organization. Under an offer of the theatre managers, which is in the nature of a compromise, the musicians would get a boost of $2 a week this year and another $1 raise next year. The music makers asked for an increase of $10 for a seven day week and a $6 raise for a six day week, to effect all theatre musicians in the city, outside the Eastman.

Report Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks May Co-Star in Production

MARY PICKFORD and Douglas Fairbanks soon may co-star in a series of pictures to follow their 1926 feature releases.

This statement was made recently by Miss Pickford in discussing her plans for the future. She expects to follow her "Scraps," now in course of production, with a third, the first of the year having been "Little Annie Rooney, now having runs in many of the larger cities.

So the oft-repeated rumor that the two stars will combine their efforts may come true at last.

Miss Pickford, it is said, has not as yet decided on a story for her third production of this year, but is said to be considering several. In the meantime she is working in mud and ooze on the swamp at her Hollywood studio completing the "chase" scenes in "Scraps," in which she pilots a band of youngsters to safety through the bogs.

Cooperative Plan Is Arranged

Kansas-Missouri Body Will Divide December Receipts with Prod. Dist. Corp.

A FINE spirit of cooperation is being exhibited between the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri and the Producers Distributing Corporation for "Exhibitors Month," set for December. The exhibitors and the distributing company have entered into an agreement whereby the exhibitor body will receive a share of the receipts collected by Producers Distributing Corporation for December playing dates. The funds are to be used in the furtherance of the drive for members of the exhibitors association.

R. R. Biechele, President of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri conceived the idea of securing the cooperation of Producers Distributing Corporation and concluded his arrangements with W. J. Morgan, sales manager of the distributing company. In discussing the agreement Morgan said:

"We are working with and for the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri in a desire to see their membership increased and their organization strengthened to maximum possibilities for the general good of the industry. This plan calls for a percentage on the receipts from each playing date in the Kansas and Missouri territory set by representatives of the M. P. T. O. for the month of December. The M. P. T. O. representatives are not out to secure contracts nor induce the booking of our releases, but in all instances where we have closed contracts for our pictures without playing dates, the M. P. T. O. representatives are at liberty to secure definite playing dates for the month of December and a percentage of these receipts will be turned over to the M. P. T. O."

The funds which will be turned over to the exhibitor body will be used to secure new members and to carry out the progressive plans of the organization which are now held in abeyance for lack of working capital.

On the basis of anticipated results for the year ending December 31st, 1925, it is assumed First National will declare a participating dividend of $3 on April 1st. 1926, which would mean a return to stockholders at the rate of $11 a share.

H. M. Warner told the managers that while this had been a growing year for the firm next season would find everything on an even keel and the organization functioning at top speed with new big plans in view. Sam Morris and Myer Lesser also talked to the visitors.

Foreign Reel Wins Riesenfeld Medal

"The Voice of the Nightingale," Released by Educational, Chosen by Judges in Competition

THE Riesenfeld Gold Medal, offered for the most novel short subject produced within the year ending September 1, 1925, has been awarded to L. Starevitch, a Pole, who made "The Voice of the Nightingale," the winning short subject, for Pathe Consortium of Paris and which is released through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. Will Hays will make the presentation.

"The Voice of the Nightingale" received four first and one second vote from the exhibitor jury chosen to decide the winner. The jury consisted of Harold B. Franklin, of Famous Players-Lasky, Joseph Plunkett of the Strand theatre, New York, Jack Partington of the Rothschild houses, San Francisco, Frank L. Newman, who was located in Kansas City when asked to serve on the jury, but now of the Paramount houses in Los Angeles; Harry C. Arthur, formerly of West Coast Theatres, Inc., now with the Motion Picture Capital Corp., and Fred Meyer of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.

Dr. Riesenfeld, who inaugurated the idea with, as he announced at the start, the hope of developing "a spirit of competition among the producers of short subjects which will result in the general welfare of the industry," declared he was more than satisfied with the choice of the judges. Though not generally known Riesenfeld was responsible for bringing "The Voice of the Nightingale" to this country. He saw it in a theatre in Paris several years ago, found that no one had the American rights, so secured it for his own houses and later arrangements were made for the picture's distribution through Educational.

Among other subjects also mentioned by the judges were "Evolution," a Red Seal release, shown, in some instances as a full length feature, and "Through Three Reigns," also distributed by Red Seal. Jack Partington declared himself in favor of the Stereoskopics series which he regarded as highly valuable as entertainment.

The jury, however, was almost unanimously in favor of "The Voice of the Nightingale" as the most excellent of the short subjects under consideration; also stating it as the most beautiful.

Fred Meyer, who represented the small-town exhibitors said: "It is the most unusual, beautiful and outstanding short subject of the current season. If ever a release was meritorious, this one is it."

Harold B. Franklin regards it as "a beautiful and unusual novelty" . . . "I think it is one of the most wonderful short subject reels that I have ever seen" was Frank Newman's comment.

Motion Picture News contributed its pæan of praise in a review of the subject contained in its issue of March 28, 1925. The review, by Chester J. Smith, of the editorial staff, says in part: "Here is a distinct novelty and one of the best short subjects that has been on display for a long, long time. . . . There is no theatre of any class at which this picture will not be thoroughly appreciated."

The daily newspapers devoted considerable space in praise of the subject, the Philadelphia Record in its editorial columns said: "It typifies what our idea of motion pictures for children ought to be. . . . We cheerfully contribute this much of free advertising to a picture that ought to succeed." The "this much" was quite a lengthy editorial.

The Dayton, Ohio, Herald also commented editorially on the Starevitch production, and the New York Evening World was profuse in its comment.

Starevitch is being looked up in Paris in an effort to ascertain his present employment.

Fall Production Booming on Coast

Leading Companies Announce Heavy Schedule of Production Activities for Immediate Future

THAT there will be no slump in Fall production is evidenced by the announcements of leading producing companies as their proposed activities for the next few months. Every leading company in Los Angeles declares an extensive program. Indications are that fourteen of the leading companies will start work at once on approximately sixty pictures, while nearly fifty others are in production at present.

Just what the value of these pictures will be is hard to figure, but it is conservatively estimated that it will be between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, exclusive of "Ben Hur", which is still under production and which it is said will cost between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

Famous, Universal, Warners, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, F. B. O., and others are preparing to launch production on new features. Famous is busily engaged preparing a new series. Universal has lined up five productions that will go into work almost at once. Fox also has five which will be in production within the next few days. Cecil B. De Mille still has one to produce and Warners are going at full blast to complete the remaining fifteen on the 1925-1926 schedule, as well as six features scheduled for the 1926-1927 season.

Joseph M. Schenck is laying his plans to start two by November 1st and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announces eleven to go into production at once. Among others that are all set to start shooting are F.B.O. with six, Christie with three, Mack Sennett with one, and John Ince with one.

In addition to those about to be produced many others are in various stages of production. Lasky has eight in final preparation with two still being shot. Two are also under production at the Pickford- Fairbanks studio, six at Universal, three at Fox, three Metropolitans, one by Harold Lloyd, five by Hal Roach, three at Warners, five at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, three at Christies, three at Sennetts and eight at the California studios.

He was a good sailor but not on matrimonial seas.

He was used to all waves save those which were permanently stormy.

He located a bride through a Matrimonial Agency, and when he had got hitched found that he was supposed to assume the alimony she was paying to her first husband; that the first husband was to be their boarder and proposed to personally see that the alimony was paid.

The fun in this one is side-splitting. The laughs come fast and furious. It is one of those pictures that your audience thank you for showing, even those with ribs fractured from laughing.

It would make a dog laugh.

The Hardest Dollar This Little Girl Ever Made IS Your Easiest If You Advertise

"Our Gang"

"A little girl by the name of Katherine Bourg, 7 years old, who never misses an "Our Gang" comedy, won $1.00 from me. I bet her a dollar she could not see this comedy ("Shootin' Injuns") all the way through without a laugh or a smile. The joke cost me a dollar. She sat all the way through without laughing or smiling. Her parents sat with her, as well as my wife, to watch her, and they had ten dollars worth of fun trying to make her lose her dollar, but I had to come across. The rest of the house was roaring with laughter at the kiddies, while little Katherine sat serious and saw it through. Dr. Bourg, her father, claims this was the hardest dollar she ever made."

Rork-Fairfax Have New Plan

Independent Producers Claim "Dual System" Eliminates Waste and Overhead

SAM RORK and Marion Fairfax, have hit upon a plan to cut production costs for two producers working together without impairing the quality of the picture. The plan, in brief, calls for sharing of a technical staff by the arrangement of a production schedule that will allow the one producer to utilize the organization in the preparation of productions while the other is cutting a picture or preparing for another. One technical organization permanently maintained serves for both producers.

In the case of the two producers mentioned this plan has already passed the experimental stage and proved feasible, say its sponsors. "By our dual production plan independent producers can carry a permanent technical organization which they could not afford individually, and by sharing the expense can engage the best brains and talent in the industry."

This arrangement was used in connection with Rork's latest comedy "Clothes Make the Pirate." This picture was produced in New York but the same production staff will accompany the producers to Hollywood where Miss Fairfax's first production "The Desert Healer" will be filmed.

This system, says Rork, is perfect for two producers, but would not work with a larger number without conflict. "Aftr seven years of struggling against the difficulties which independent producers must overcome, I believe I have found the solution in the dual plan," said Rork. "No picture is stronger or better than the organization behind it, and unless he is a Schenck or a Goldwyn making several pictures a year, an individual producer can hardly afford to carry along the organization he builds up for a single picture."

The dual system in no way impairs the individuality of the separate producers, according to Miss Fairfax.

"To my mind it is not a question of an independent producer having a large sum of money to spend on a picture. The whole question is having an organization that will make the most of the production appropriation and at the same time keep the expenditure down to a minimum. If a producer has to engage a new producing staff from picture to picture, there must be waste, both in money and efficiency.

"Of course there are some details yet to be worked out. In building up an organization it is necessary to have just the right man for the place, which means changes and eliminations. In filming 'Clothes Make the Pirate' we had with a few exceptions, the same staff that served for 'The Talker.' Changes will be made before we can say the organization is permanently arranged."

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Prize "Charlie's Aunt" Drive

Frank Miller's Campaign Selected As Best Developed For Syd Chaplin Comedy

FRANK MILLER, manager of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., has been awarded first prize for his "Charlie's Aunt" campaign in the contest conducted with that picture by Producers Distributing Corporation in conjunction with Famous Players Theatre Division. The prize was offered by Paul C. Mooney, vice president of Producers Distributing, for the most original campaign, obtaining the best results at the smallest possible cost, for the Syd Chaplin comedy. The prize consisted of a cigarette and match case valued at one hundred dollars, to which Pat Dowling, publicity director of the Christie company, producers of the picture, added a hand carved chest, and Mark Lickter, a Hollywood tobacconist, increased the value of the prize by contributing 100 initialed cigarettes to the award.

The judges were Harold Franklin and Lem Stewart. Warren Irvin of the Imperial, Charlotte, N. C., was second, Clifford B. Stiff, Imperial, Columbia, S. C., third, and Guy Kenimer, Arcade, Jacksonville, Fla., was awarded honorable mention.

The outstanding feature of Miller's campaign was a female impersonator, dressed as the "Aunt." He "worked" the town during the three days before the opening. "Charlie's Aunt" was seen in all of Augusta's stores, on the street, in school and "she" even crashed the gate at the local ball park, having "her" photo taken with the team. A comfortable rocking chair in the lobby served as "her" harbor each evening.

Black cat window displays were arranged. The unusual parts of these animals were their heads and tails. By means of an ingenious mechanical contrivance, these two parts of the anatomy were continually on the go.

The lobby was enclosed with just enough room for a single entrance in the center. Lettered across this opening was "Leave Behind All Your Troubles All Ye Who Enter Here." A shadow box with kitten cut-outs was on view in the lobby.

The building's front was used as a panel for two huge beaver-board cats. In the mouths of each, a magnavox loud speaker was placed. These were attached to Victrolas from which came the shrieks of a laughing record.

As a final touch, Miller procured a live black cat with six tiny kittens. These were placed out on the sidewalk each day and they blocked traffic. The little boy who kept them from harm carried a sign which read "I'm going to see 'Charlie's Aunt' at the Modjeska—Enough to make a cat laugh."

Uses Conservative Methods in "Graustark" Campaign

Walter Lindlar, exploitation representative, assigned to assist the American theatre, Salt Lake City, to put over the engagement of "Graustark," found that window tieups are still remarkably effective when done with leading stores on a dignified basis.

Eight of the principal stores of the city assigned windows to displays of stills and artistically mounted cutouts for two consecutive weeks, the week prior to the opening and concurrently with the engagement, the captions being changed each week.

Walker Brothers, a leading department store of Salt Lake City, capitalized Norma's reputation as one of the screen's best dressed women, by advertising in their newspaper announcements and in their windows the fact that their new Fall Opening contained apparel varied enough in beauty and style to have—"even supplied Norma Talmadge with her entire wardrobe were she in Salt Lake City."

All the windows were dressed with dignity and restraint. The theatre's advertising was done in the same key, including the house dressing of the lobby and the marquee. The deliberate abstinence from everything that savored of the usual methods heightened the importance of the attraction which was the effect that it was intended to achieve.

Crashes Comic Page With "Charley's Aunt" Stunt

A truck page tieup for "Charley's Aunt" having fallen down at the last moment, Manager E. R. Rogers of the Tivoli, Chattanooga, succeeded in getting into the Children's Coloring Contest page gratis. Generous space was allowed for a good sized theatre ad carrying clever comedy copy with title, star's name and playhouse. Cash prizes and Tivoli passes being awarded weekly, this page is a popular one with the kiddies and therefore proved an excellent advertising medium for the picture.

An unusual unit of the campaign was the placing of special banners featuring a large black laughing cat on prominent downtown buildings, and on lawns along the main residential streets.

The regular campaign was preceded by an advance teaser campaign in the newspapers and a special trailer on the screen of the Tivoli.

Movie Ball Chief Move in "Coast of Folly" Drive

In exploiting "The Coast of Folly," Manager E. B. Roberts of the Majestic, Austin, Texas, concentrated on a Movie Ball, which in co-operation with a well-known dance orchestra, was held on the roof garden of Austin's leading hotel. An impersonation contest of screen stars was a feature of the ball, the winners receiving cash prizes and theatre passes to see the current attraction.

The only expense incurred by theatre, was for advertising, the orchestra renting the ballroom. The Movie Ball, the first of its kind to be held in Austin, was given valuable advance publicity in the newspapers.

Manager Roberts also found it expedient to give a midnight matinee on the Sunday preceding picture's opening.

Camp Fire Prologue for "Wild Horse Mesa"

When showing "Wild Horse Mesa" at the Palace, Lockport, Manager Geo. T. Cruzen staged an atmospheric prologue which vividly expressed the spirit of the photoplay.

Setting occupied full stage, with wood drop as background. Small tent on upper right, tripod and fire on left center. Fire effect was obtained by constructing small logs and using jagged red silkalene tacked under each. Behind and beneath this three 10-watt lamps, two red and one white, were used, with small electric fan. Punk was used in kettle on fire to create steam and smoke effect. On backdrop a cloud and moon effect was produced with a stereopticon, blocking out all portions of the setting excepting the skyline of the drop down to the horizon. Logs and branches, strewn about the stage, gave a forest effect.

The scene opened with a cowboy sitting in front of a fire in a straw colored spot. Inside tent, with a light behind her, sat a girl dressed in western attire, her silhouette sharply outlined through the canvas. To the soft accompaniment of the organ, man sang "At Dawning." During his song lights were gradually brought up to "sunrise." At finish of song girl emerged from tent and sang "I Love You" with organ and violin accompaniment. Male singer then picked up third number "Down the Sunset Trail" in which he was joined by girl. During last number lights were brought up to soft white, and at finish gradually dimmed until stage was in darkness, after which screen was lowered and picture flashed.

Ties Up With Animal Shop to Exploit Jungle Film

A quite obvious tie-up was in sight for House Manager Cherry of the Victoria Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., when he played the Educational film titled "Wild Beasts of Borneo." The co-operation of the Biddle Pet Shop, a dealer in pet animals of all kinds, was sought and obtained, with the result that the Victoria was presented with excellent material for a lobby display consisting of wild birds, chimpanzees, mandril monkeys, and other creatures all nicely caged and quite easily arranged into a striking attractor for the lobby of the theatre.

The stunt resulted in much publicity for the theatre and proved a profitable enterprise for a house whose manager did the unusual thing by giving proper prominence and exploitation to a short subject readily lending itself to stunt publicity.

Revives Venerable Hanger for "Not So Long Ago"

Illustrating that an old stunt can be revived and made to work like brand new, Manager Rodney Bush, of the Galax theatre, Birmingham, dug up the ancient "One piece coat hanger," consisting of a nail, and with it made quite a hit as exploitation for "Not So Long Ago."

The nails were distributed in envelopes on which the following was printed: This one piece combination coat hanger was used in New York "Not So Long Ago." See the Paramount picture with Betty Bronson & Ricardo Cortez.

The Clemmer theatre, Spokane, Wash., was the recipient of some excellent publicity as a result of the big window flash shown above, which was tied up with the Buster Brown Comedies, produced by Century and released by Universal. The display was based on the national tie-up which "U" has arranged with the manufacturers of "Buster Brown" shoes. An instance which proves that big exploitation can be worked out with short subject attractions.

City-Wide Drive for "Phantom"

Washington And Philadelphia Campaigns Featured By Extensive Use of Publicity

TWO recent campaigns for "The Phantom of the Opera" in Washington, D. C., and Philadelphia, covered the wide range of publicity stunts suggested in advance for this production and developed many practical exploitation measures which may be applicable elsewhere with this and other attractions.

The drives for the "Phantom" in these two cities are particularly notable for the thoroughness with which they were planned and executed. In Washington for example, the drive used a variety of ideas running from teaser advertising, started three weeks in advance of the opening at the Rialto, to window displays and exterior house decorations. One of the most important tie-ups was that which Manager J. V. Carney and his staff successfully negotiated with the Washington Herald. Under this arrangement the newspaper distributed 60,000 "Phantom" rotogravure heralds, prepared by Universal, to all their local readers the week-end before the opening. In addition a "Ghost Story Contest" was run by the paper. The "Phantom Red" vogue was used to induce merchants, including druggists, radio dealers, shoe shops, department stores and others, to furnish window displays which tied in with the advertising which was being conducted for "The Phantom."

One of the outstanding stunts in the Philadelphia drive, conducted by the Aldine Theatre, was the radio event in which an opera singer, billed as "The Phantom of the Opera" rendered the aria from "Faust" from the broadcasting station of WIP. This performer appeared several times on programs broadcast by the station and aroused keen curiosity and interest. The tie-up with the picture was obtained when the announcer, who gives regular talks about motion pictures, made repeated mention to the fact that "Phantom of the Opera" would soon open its Philadelphia engagement at the Aldine. A review of the picture was also broadcast from station WLIT. In addition to this radio publicity, the Aldine obtained a tie-up with the Philadelphia News on a dramatic critic's competition in which prizes were offered for the best articles written about "The Phantom of the Opera."

Man Pushing Baby Carriage Ballyhoos "Unholy Three"

A man dressed up as an old lady, pushing a baby carriage with a large doll in it and wearing a sign on his back announcing the showing of "The Unholy Three" at the Academy Theatre in Haverhill, Mass., recently attracted enormous attention. In addition to the sign on his back there was an announcement on the baby buggy bearing a still showing Lon Chaney made up as the old crone in "The Unholy Three" pushing the dwarf in a similar baby carriage.

An especially fine lobby display for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Tower of Lies" was that, illustrated above, used by the Imperial theatre, Asheville. Manager Ernest Morrison used grass mats and some evergreen boughs as finishing touches to this tower, the windows of which were illustrated from within.

Newspaper "Classified" Tie-Up

Pictures Made Basis for Small "House Ads" in Classified Depts.

Exhibitors in several cities have obtained valuable publicity for their showings of "Classified" through tie ups with newspapers. The picture is made the basis for series of small "house ads" in the newspapers for their classified departments. In Indianapolis the stunt was used by the Circle theatre. It was arranged by Arthur Schmidt, assistant to Ace Berry, general manager of the house, with the Indianapolis News. It was in the form of a contest conducted for five days with tickets to the Circle as prizes for the best individual classified ads written for the News.

The News gave an advertisement over four columns on an inside page and a box on page one, calling attention to it. In addition to this the paper also carried a news story on the contest and scattered half a dozen ads through the classified section. E amples of these follow:

Take Advantage-Of the classified columns of The News and don't fail to see Corinne Griffith in "Classified," at the Circle next week.

Lloyd Whiting sold his garage and got a wife from one want adv in "Classified" at the Circle next week. These columns can't promise you a wife but will sell or rent your garage just as effectively.

An Hour and a Half-Of the best laughs you ever had in exchange for your time and one ticket to the Circle next week to see Corinne Griffith in "Classified."

St. Paul and Minneapolis newspapers set a record in newspaper cooperation in their handling of the tie-up engineered by First National on "Classified" a film story of the newspaper's want-ad office.

The Pioneer Press-Dispatch in St. Paul went into the thing big with a full campaign to boost the want-ad business. There was extra space on the dramatic page, display advertisements on the classified pages, rotogravure pictures of Corinne Griffith (the first dramatic pictures used on the Pioneer roto page), display ads on forty of the paper's trucks, several contests and 20,000 copies of a song named after the film.

The Minneapolis Journal did the thing up even better, using two full page ads, two 3 x 20 ads, a portrait on the Sunday classified page, display on the classified page, contests, 600 street car cards and 50,000 dummy newspapers.

Sights of the Town Related in Tieup With 'U' Feature

A new version of the "I'll Show You the Town," newspaper tie-up has been developed by F. Raoul Cleaver, exploitation man in Universal's Detroit Exchange, who arranged with the Holland, Mich., Sentinel to run a series of stories on Holland points of interest under the general head of "I'll Show You the Town."

This feature was introduced with a big spread and a contest for children up to the eighth grade for the 500 best essays on the subject. The prizes were tickets.

"Light of Western Stars" Given Encased Lobby

Lobby displays being a rare sight at the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, the one on "The Light of Western Stars," an artistic achievement of the theatre's staff artist, created a world of attention.

The entire lobby was encased with beaverboard painted to depict scenes from the photoplay. One side showed Jack Holt on horseback with Billie Dove in his arms, being chased by bandits. The other showed the heroine on horseback boldly outlined on a mountain top overlooking the valley below.

The colorful display arrested the attention of everyone who passed and not only drew the theatre's regular patrons, but the regular crowd of Western house devotees.

Throws Spot Light on Book Display for Grey Story

In his lobby display on "Light of the Western Stars," at the Galax, Birmingham, Manager Rodney Bush effectively conveyed the picture's adaptation by placing a specially constructed book in the center of the lobby.

The book stood upright and closed. Three stars were cut out of the front panel, in back of which were placed two stills and a cutout from the three-sheet. The interior of the display was lighted from above. the stills and cutout standing out in bold relief. In addition a light blue spot was thrown on the exhibit from under the marquee, while the entire lighting of the lobby was of like color, suggesting summer coolness.

Cameo, Atlanta, Inserts Heralds in Envelopes

Ten thousand envelopes captioned "Biggest Week in Atlanta" were recently distributed to people on the streets of Atlanta, Ga., and aroused much curiosity. They contained heralds exploiting a week's revival at the Cameo Theatre of "Zander the Great," "The White Sister," and "The Dixie Handicap." In return for a few passes, clerks of the leading hotels inserted these envelopes in the key boxes of the guests, who obtained them with their keys.

Old Timers Of Tows See "Not So Long Ago" Free

Carl McLean, manager of the Columbia theatre, St. Thomas, Ont., used the "Old Timers" stunt successfully in his own in connection with exploitation for "Not So Long Ago." McLean advertised that all those who had resided in St. Thomas for fifty years or more were invited to be guests of the management. The stunt, he says, met with response and in conjunction with other exploitation efforts, which included publication of several photographs of St. Thomas when it was a village, used in a window display, and a newspaper tie-up bringing a cooperative page, the campaign worked out with great satisfaction.

"10 Commandments" Herald Set Afloat on Beach

Bathers on the beach at Galveston recently were surprised to see small glass bottles floating on the surface of the water. Curious to learn their contents, they were quickly captured by the eager ones, and upon removing the cork found a herald inside carrying clever advertising copy on "The Ten Commandments," the attraction at the Queen theatre.

Manager E. E. Col'ins, who was father to the idea, had men in boats throw a thousand of these small vials overboard, the tide washing them ashore where they were picked up by the bathers. The stunt was pulled off on Labor Day when the beach was crowded with people so that its effects were far reaching.

An outstanding unit of the campaign was the picture puzzle contest conducted in conjunction with the half page cooperative spread of merchants' ads in the Galveston Tribune. In each of the six ads appearing on the half page there were one or more pieces of a picture from "The Ten Commandments," which had to be cut out and assembled properly.

Lobby presented a beautiful sight, theatre front on each side of entrance having specially built shadow-box of hand painted beaverboard. Dark drapes formed the background, in front of which were placed cutouts depicting scenes from the photoplay, one showing the chariot race, the other a tense moment from the modern part of the picture. Illuminated with colored globes, the effect was striking.

Antiquated Lobby Exploits "Not So Long Ago"

The most notewortby feature of Manager Bert Jordan's extensive and thorough campaign on "Not So Long Ago," for the Majestic Theatre in Memphis, was the cooperation he received from a local furniture company, who loaned the theatre various antiques for display in the Majestic lobby during the run of the photoplay.

Equally important was the borrowing of a 21 year old Reo car from the Reo Auto Company, which was placed on sidewalk directly in front of box-office. With a sweet old-fashioned girl posing in driver's seat, passersby stopped for a closer view.

A stunt which drew a world of attention, was an old-time victoria which was driven about town with a man in Colonial livery on the box and a young girl seated in carriage dressed in hoop skirts and a poke bonnet. Sides of vehicle carried banners advertising the attraction at the Majestic.

"Deeds" Used as Heralds for "Old Home Week"

A herald of novel character was the keynote of Manager H. C. Farley's campaign for "Old Home Week" at the Empire, Montgomery.

It was in the nature of a Certificate of Ownership with copy playing up the entertainment value of the photoplay, with special mention of the star, theatre, play dates, producers and prices. Because of its attractive appearance, the herald was of unusual merit.

Newspaper space was the same as usual, with regular quota of paper posted throughout city.

A flashy, pyrotechnical display for Pathe's "The Freshman" was employed by the Capitol theatre, Des Moines, when the Harold Lloyd comedy played that house.

'10 Commandments' Campaign

Civic Co-operation Lined Up for Run at Capitol Theatre, London, Ontario

An exploitation campaign, augmented by the whole-hearted cooperation of ministers, press, civic officials and fair executives, put "The Ten Commandments," "over the top" during its run at the Capitol theatre, London, Ont.

The campaign was directed by Tom Logan, manager of the house, and John E. McInerney, Paramount exploiteer in that territory.

Three weeks in advance of the opening, twenty 24-sheets, eighteen 61-sheets, ten 3-sheets and twenty 1-sheets were posted; three banners were hung, and 300 window cards, four sets of 11 x 14 photos and two sets 22 x 28 photos were placed in advantageous places. In addition, one special 40 foot banner and 150 special 1-sheets were used.

Increased newspaper advertising, including a series of teaser ads, also preceded the opening by three weeks. A trailer was screened at each performance beginning two weeks in advance of the run.

An effective stunt was the admission of the first 50 youngsters on the opening day who submitted neatly written copies of The Ten Commandments. This stunt got a news break, and jammed the lobby at the opening matinee.

The special 40 foot banner was hung directly opposite the main entrance to the London fair grounds. This was viewed by the thousands who attended the fair.

"The Ten Commandments of Public Safety for Fair Week" were issued by the police chief. These were picked up by the press and displayed prominently.

A special newspaper contest was conducted, with awards being made for the best sets of Ten Commandments on any subject which the entrants might select.

Many of the clergy supported the picture in their sermons, Dr. Beattle of the First United Church devoting his entire sermon to the attraction. The church, in its advertisement announcing its Sunday services, carried this reference: "At 7 p. m. Dr. Beattle will speak on the great film shown this week at the Capitol theatre, The Ten Commandments. Did this film arouse questions in your mind? Hear this sermon."

'Iron Horse' Indians Camp in Lobby of Fenway

In connection with the presentation of the special feature at Tremont Temple, Boston, of "The Iron Horse," a group of 14 Arapahoe Indians from the Wind River reservation in Wyoming pitched teepees in The Fenway, almost in the heart of the city, and camped there. There were 12 men led by Chief Goes-in-the-Ledge, two women, a girl about 12 and a papoose. The Indians live in the teepees, also cooking their food there. They appear daily in the prologue to the film feature.

"Life's Thrills" Well Billed

Engagements in Los Angeles, Boston and Other Cities Heavily Advertised

Mounting evidence that short subjects of good box-office potentialities are being more generally exploited by the theatres is one of the encouraging signs of the present times. Figuring prominently in the advertising that has been done along these lines is the support which is being given "Life's Greatest Thrills," a special International Newsreel film.

Recently this picture has been campaigned in several cities, among them Los Angeles and Boston, in both of which special window displays and other exploitation is said to have recorded very satisfactory results.

The center piece of the Los Angeles window display was a moving picture camera. Another unusual feature of the display was the use of full page mats from the Los Angeles Examiner, the local Hearst newspaper. One of these mats showed the news pictures of the ZR-3 arriving in America. The other showed photos of dangerous aero flights over uncharted areas. These mats were obtained from the files of the Examiner and were inked so that they could be read. Lobby cards and a general announcement completed the display.

When "Life's Greatest Thrills" played Loew's State theatre, Boston, the theatre exploitation man made excellent use of newspaper clippings from various newspapers showing news stories and photo reproductions of the scenes shown in the two-reeler. In addition to news clippings of these events, clippings from the various Hearst newspapers boosting the two-reeler in other cities were used. In this way, page and half-page layouts were obtained from New York and Chicago papers, as well as the spreads used in the Hearst's Boston paper.

These clippings, together with stills from the picture and the newsy lobby cards put out by International for this special, were mounted on a large lobby frame and set up at the entrance to the theatre.

Memphis Public Library Ties Up With "Romola"

When "Romola" played recently at Loew's State Theatre in Memphis, Tenn., the public library for the first time consented to post stills and cards reading "Read 'Romola' and other works on the Italian Renaissance here, then see 'Romola' at Loew's State." Oil paintings were also accepted for display. This dignified tie-up aroused unusual interest in the picture. Innumerable calls were received at the theatre in advance concerning the picture, and it is reported additional copies of the George Eliot book on which the picture is based had to be purchased by the Librarian in order to meet the lively demand which set in.

Street Stunt for Denny Feature Makes Hit

To advertise his showing of "I'll Show You The Town," Manager H. C. Farley of the Empire theatre, Montgomery, used a street ballyhoo in which a man in full-dress paraded the streets carrying a megaphone, both sides printed with the picture title, through which he made frequent announcements to the effect that he would show anyone the town.

He also carried a sign on his back calling attention to the photoplay at the Empire. The stunt proved a hit.

Cops Drop Ban on Banners to Aid "O'Malley"

In exploiting "The Making of O'Malley," Roger Ferri, publicity manager of the Emery Majestic theatre, Providence, R. I., induced William F. O'Neil, superintendent of police, interested in the showing of Milton Sills' starring picture, to lend the cooperation of the Providence Police Department to the extent of suspending the ordinance prohibiting the display of a banner across the highways. As a consequence a flash was hung across Washington street, at Aborn street, from the roof of Emery's Majestic theatre to the Shrine Club, reading "Public cooperation with the police of Providence makes for 100 per cent efficiency. 'The Making of O'Malley' proves it. Help The Police Help You."

Superintendent of Police O'Neil also granted permission for the display of one-sheet cut-outs with the following reading: "Help your traffic officer, then see 'The Making of O'Malley' at Emery's Majestic theatre" at several traffic junctions.

With the cooperation of First National's Boston Exchange, Mr. Ferri was enabled to put on a special showing of "The Making of O'Malley" at Police Headquarters on the Friday in advance of the theatre presentation.

Apiary In Lobby Exploits "Keeper Of The Bees"

Two glass cases containing eight thousand live bees made a novel and arresting lobby display when used by the Strand Theatre, Canton, O., as advance advertising for "The Keeper of the Bees." The insects were obtained by Joseph Calla, manager of the house, and Louis Geiger, F. B. O. exchange manager, from a large apiary near Canton. The attractor proved so interesting to people passing the theatre that Calla retained the display for the following week, during which the "Keeper of the Bees" was the attraction.

Mr. Calla also secured the co-operation of all the women's clubs in Canton. The presidents of the Women's clubs in Canton arranged matinee parties for their members, and each afternoon during the run of the production at the Strand Theatre, various groups of clubwomen of the town made up the greater portion of the audience.

The school teachers, admirers of Gene Stratton-Porter, also did their share by advising their pupils to see the latest Porter opus, and made up parties for after-school-matinees of prize pupils. Notices of the showing were posted on the bulletin boards of the schools.

St. Louis Radio Dealers Boost "Black Cyclone"

Loew's State Theatre in St. Louis, recently held a radio week show during which full page ads were carried in the St. Louis Star with "Black Cyclone."

The page ads were bordered with uprights of a radio broadcasting station with an aerial across the top of the page. A cut and display of Rex from the Pathe press book dominated the copy being placed in the upper part of the page, four columns wide.

Broadcasting from the stage was a feature of the entertainment. Exploitation tie-ups were made with local radio dealers and "Black Cyclone" window cards and display commanded conspicuous spots in the radio shops.

Short Subjects and Serials

Pathe Gets Amundsen Polar Flight Film

PATHE has acquired screen rights to the authentic motion picture log of the Amundsen polar expedition and it will be released in three parts on or about November 10th. It will be a special attraction under the title, "The Amundsen Polar Flight."

The subject is said to be a most remarkable human screen document, photographed under the strangest conditions ever faced by a cameraman. He cranked his machine through all the perils of the Arctic air fight.

According to Pathe the film takes the spectators on a "personally conducted" trip with the daring explorers who trusted their lives to Providence and two super-airplanes. Each of the two planes carried a crew of two besides the leads. They reached within 134 miles of the pole and were given up for lost by the world for a period of twenty-four days.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Oh Buster"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is one of the best short comedies ever released through Universal. It is the third of the Buster Brown series and is considerably better than the first two of the series, both of which were good. While the roles of the youngsters, Buster and Mary Jane are well played by Arthur Trimble and Doreen Turner, the honors of the picture go to Pete the Dog, which plays Tige. Pete is a real actor, who could give lessons before the camera to many of those in the profession who bear much bigger reputations than he.

The expressions of this dog are really remarkable and he is compelled to show many of them during the course of the action, which is fast from start to finish. Young Arthur Trimble and little Doreen Turner handle their roles in admirable shape. In fact it is a trio that would be hard to beat. This combined with a story far ahead of the average run is all that is necessary for the success of this vehicle.

The Cast

Buster Brown.....Arthur Trimble
Mary Jane.....Doreen Turner
Tige.....Pete the Dog
The Serious Butler.....Pinto Colvig

A two reel Century Comedy directed by Gus Meins and starring Arthur Trimble.

The Story.—Buster and Mary Jane are invited to spend the day with Buster's grandfather, but Tige is barred. He trails their auto however, and wins his way into the house, when, after grandfather has tried to rid himself of a persistent salesman, Buster admits him and Tige exits the salesman. If Tige stopped right there he would be forgiven and welcomed, but he also takes a dislike to the committee coming to the home from grandfather's bank. He finally accomplishes their complete rout, while Buster and Mary Jane gaze on the scene in admiration. All three are subjected to the usual humiliation that follows an escapade of this kind and Buster resolves that relatives are no good anyhow.

Summary. An exceptionally good comedy with a well told and well acted story. It is so familiar in cartoon form that it probably would be appreciated in any type of house.

"Better Movies"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

HERE is another "Our Gang" comedy from Hal Roach which measures up to the usual high standard and director Robert McGowan has a brand new plot to tempt the antics of his assorted youngsters.

The regular "Gang" in this particular release, is augmented by Martha Sleeper and "Husky" Hanes and the two reels are packed with fun making from start to finish.

The kids do their stuff in the usual style and the direction is excellent. The screen wise patrons will get a great laugh out of the exaggerated methods that the "Gang" employ in staging their production.

The Cast

Mickey Daniels, Farina, Joe Cobb, Johnny Gray, Husky Hanes, Jackie Condon, Mary Kornman, Martha Sleeper.

Story.—The "gang" come upon a deserted motion picture studio during one of their expeditions in search of adventure. Mickey proposes they make a movie as a movie should be made, and with the assistance of a young screen-struck girl for the main vamp role, the youngsters proceed to stage a lot of thrills and comics, romance and adventure as they have come to know them through seeing pictures. A poor little rich boy wanders in and is invited to participate, with the result that the gang is invited to his home for the first screening of the work, which proves a revelation in upside-down close-ups and unexpected comedy effects that will appeal to all screen patrons.

Summary—An entertaining, sure fire comedy with a generous assortment of gags and skillfully handled by the director. A short subject that should register a hit with any audience.

"The Peacemakers"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THE Helen and Warren series offers a nice little situation comedy in this clever two reeler, which depends almost entirely upon the humor of its situations to get its laughs. It is comedy of the higher class order, well played and with a clever little story to carry the good action along. It's much complicated tale in which three couples aboard a ship become involved and very much entangled as to state rooms, but it all winds up nicely.

The Story. Helen and Warren become involved in the jealous quarrels of Billy and Betty Stanley and with them become involved the much maligned Mr. Bibbins who unjustly is accused by his wife of being frivolous with the ladies. They are all on a sea voyage and the crisis is reached at the masquerade, when Warren bodily carries off a masquerader whom he is sure is his wife. He plants her in his stateroom, while Billy is doing the same thing with a woman whom he thinks his wife. The difficulties increase when the mistakes are discovered and efforts are made to get each of the young married women to her own stateroom. Further complications develop however, when Warren is victimized into entering the stateroom of Mrs. Bibbins who promptly is accused to all sorts of wrongdoing by her husband, who however, is eventually forgiven for all of his past alleged shortcomings. A happy party winds up the entire affair.

Summary. This is almost a sure fire comedy in any but the best of the houses and a majority of the customers would probably like it even in those. The story is of a calibre that needs no apology in any house. It is clean, well acted and full of humor.

"Fire Away"
(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is a typical Al St John picture, with the comedian going through all of his well known tumbling stunts and the other antics that characterize his pictures. There is some fast stuff in it and some fairly humorous situations. The story, as usual, has little to do with the picture, which for the most part is just a series of gags. St. John is just as funny as ever and he is supported by a good cast.

The Cast

Al Fresco.....Al St. John
The Girl.....Lucille Hutton

The Story. Al takes the Overland Limited for the open spaces and on the way encounters the girl, who is much sought by a pair of yeggmen, who would capture her and hold her until her father delivered to them the deed to the rich mine he owns. After much horseplay in which Al thwarts the villains after they have taken the girl, it all comes out right in the end.

Summary. A typical Al St. John comedy brimful of horseplay and stunts which usually characterize this comedian's vehicles. There is some good humor in it and it moves along at a fast pace. The picture should go very well in the neighborhood houses.

"Dangerous Curves Behind"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

THIS latest one out of the Mack Sennett studios can be depended to furnish sure fire entertainment and director Eddie Cline has handled a series of gags and thrill stunts that will take the breath away. The story starts off with the scene laid in a small-town general store and with the advent of a stranger who starts the local real estate values off on a boom. Here is where plenty of laugh getting gags are pulled. In the latter part of this two reeler the real thrills are furnished with the auto following the heels of the tandem bicycle down a long, steep, curved incline. The story also carries the usual "love interest."

Ruth Taylor plays the part of Nell Purdy, the storekeeper's daughter, Jack Cooper is Bertie Badger, the banker's son. Joseph Young is the land booming stranger and William McCall is Nell Purdy's father. All of them do their stuff in great shape.

The Cast

The Storekeeper's Daughter.....Ruth Taylor
The Banker's Son.....Jack Cooper
The Stranger.....Joseph Young
Nell's Father.....William McCall

The Story.—A series of gags and thrills built around the story of a stranger who attempts to victimize the residents of a small town. The small towners fall for the plan and the town real estate values start on the boom. Thrills a-plenty are furnished when the automobile and the bicycle come whirling down the curves of a steep mountain side. There is also the love triangle between the store keeper's daughter, the stranger and the banker's son.

Summary.—A fast moving comedy full of gags and thrills that ought to please any audience. Well produced and directed in the usual Sennett and Cline style.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Down Upon the Suwannee River

(Lee-Bradford Corp.—5900 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

CLEAN, wholesome sentiment, an engaging love story and realistic environment, combine to make this production a very entertaining picture. The famous old river, so well known in song and fiction, furnishes most of the picturesque backgrounds, which, as a matter of fact, are genuine, for the company was taken there by Director Lem F. Kennedy to get the principal scenic shots. There are a few situations which approach the melodramatic border, but for the most part the heart interest angle predominates and pathos reigns supreme. Incidentally, a mild protest against atheism is registered, which somehow fits in nicely with the general trend of the plot. The work of the cast is uniformly satisfactory. Charles Emmett Mack makes a very favorable impression in the hero role, which he plays with just the right touch of restraint, conveying suggestions of repressed emotion that are effective and appealing. Mary Thurman is a wistfully pathetic heroine and Charles Shannon gets a lot of fun out of the comedy

THEME. Heart interest drama, with a few near-melodramatic incidents. Depicts trials of girl whose lover leaves her, but returns and saves her good name.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The beautiful scenic shots. Scene where heroine is saved from drowning by old negro. Story's sentimental lure. Good work of cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A tie-up with music stores on the familiar song is in order. Local church organizations might be utilized on account of the picture's defense of religion.

DRAWING POWER. Ought to do good business in neighborhood and smaller theatres.

SUMMARY. A drama of the South, with scenes filmed along the Suwannee River, where principal action takes place. Offers pleasing love story, replete with heart appeal,

The Substitute Wife

(Arrow—6580 Feet)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

HERE is the eternal triangle again—and for those who enjoy a steady drive from start to finish, this picture will surely have its appeal. However it seems that there were a great many opportunities throughout the story to inject a little comedy relief.

The part of the blind husband as played by Niles Welch is bound to wring a lot of sympathy from the average audience. Here is the biggest appeal in the entire production. Situations arise from time to time that are pathetic to the extreme—and as mentioned before, a more of general audience picture might have been made, had a touch of laughter been put here and there.

THEME—A nurse, whose voice bears a striking similarity to that of a blind man's wife, is substituted by a crooked doctor who also seeks to prevent an operation to restore the eyesight. Plan is thwarted by family friend and romance develops between blind man and nurse.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine acting of Jane Novak as the nurse and that of Niles Welch as the blind husband.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of Jane Novak, Niles Welch and Gordon Standing.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the smaller type of theatres.

SUMMARY. An average production that carries a certain audience appeal. Story is rather far-fetched

Sealed Lips

(Columbia Picture Corp.—5613 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A MELODRAMA with considerable heart interest, this picture offers a rather improbable sort of yarn, yet exciting enough and containing a sufficient number of hectic thrills to rank as a tolerable program attraction. It conveys the impression that the director started out to produce a straight drama, but in his anxiety to put over decisive punches, drifted into the melodramatic current and was swept away into one stormy episode after another. However, as it stands, the picture seems likely to afford satisfactory entertainment to that large percentage of fans who find pleasure in having their emotions stirred up to the boiling point regardless of logic. The whole plot hinges on the idea of the girl's lover mistaking her dying father for a successful rival, and breaking away from her. An unconvincing situation, for the heroine could easily have explained matters at the beginning. But she didn't and of course, slid headlong into a net of complications. Dorothy Revier is pleasing in the leading role, with Cullen Landis a capable hero, and Lincoln Stedman O. K. in the comedy.

THEME. Melodrama, with outstanding heart interest and heroine whose lover mistakes her father for rival, with near-tragic complication ensuing.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scenes where "Square Deal" Blake dies; and heroine flees, thinking she has killed villain. Melodramatic action. Stedman's bright comedy. Good acting by Dorothy Revier and Cullen Landis.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the parting of lovers through misunderstanding and general melodramatic action. Feature the leads.

DRAWING POWER. Hardly convincing enough for critical audiences. May satisfy in communities where patrons aren't particular about story logic.

SUMMARY. A fair program attraction, combining melodrama with romantic appeal and glints of comedy. Plots fails to convince at the start, but developes exciting situations.

The King on Main Street

(Paramount—6229 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A SOPHISTICATED, high-class comedy, admirably directed by Monta Bell and providing a leading role in which Adolphe Menjou shines resplendent, this picture should prove a big money-maker wherever it is shown. Occasionally you catch a faint suggestion of naughtiness, but glossed over and developed in such subtle fashion that nothing appears for the censor to lose temper over, or cause qualms in the breast of the exhibitor who caters to the family trade. The picture appeals favorably to critical audiences, as well as the average patrons. The former will admire its fine technique and dazzling ironical humor, the latter wax enthusiastic over the fun of seeing a king temporarily forget his royalty and disport himself at Coney Island, the same as any "regular fellow," to say nothing of his skill in love-making. A delicate bit of romance is in evidence, and Menjou gives the best comedy performance of his career, into which he injects just a touch of pathos, which is very effective. Bessie Love and Greta Nissen score heavily in their respective roles.

THEME. King of mythical country visits U. S., has short-lived romance with American girl, and a real democratic time, finally returning to assume duties as monarch.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Excellent direction. King's love affairs, visit to Coney Island, scene where he indulges in moonlight flirtation with Gladys. Menjou's delightful comedy. Technicolor sequences, opening and closing picture.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as refreshingly unique, sparkling comedy. Feature Menjou as star's greatest screen performance, play up Coney Island episode.

DRAWING POWER. Will please high-brows and masses. Good anywhere.

SUMMARY. A fine, high-grade comedy possessing general appeal. Adolphe Menjou's acting superb, support worthy of star. Mingles clean-cut humor with romance. Should do big business in all classes of theatres.

Seven Keys to Baldpate

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

DOUGLAS MacLEAN has turned out another laugh festival. While the producers have substituted a romance as the motive for the action instead of a wager as set forth in the book and play, we believe the screen version is improved thereby for popular consumption. Present day audiences seem to insist that the girl and the clinch be in their film fare. While the picture is at a great disadvantage in being unable to convey the comedy of the stage dialogue, the subtitles are snappy and humorous.

The scenes at Baldpate Inn where the young author goes to make good his promise to turn out a novel in twenty-four hours are packed with suspense, thrills and one laugh steps on the heels of another.

THEME. Comedy setting forth the difficulties encountered by a young author who has to write a book in twenty-four hours to win a bride. He surmounts them and gets the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes aboard the boat as MacLean sends innumerable radiograms to his sweetheart. The scenes in Baldpate Inn. The excitement provided by the crooks. The surprise ending.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put over a window display of locks in local hardware stores. Paramount has provided special cards to aid in displays of Yale locks. Play up the name of MacLean, the fact that this is the screen version of the Cohan play and the Biggers' novel.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of star and well known story should make this a business getter for any house.

SUMMARY. Made for fun purposes only, this one succeeds in accomplishing that aim with Douglas MacLean scoring again in one of his inimitable comedy portraits.

Magee, however, is greeted at the boat by said publisher who tells him that unless book is written he will not wed daughter. Magee offers to write it in remaining 24 hours. He is offered Baldpate Inn as a workshop. The book is written, the action transpiring on the screen about the theft of $200,000, being the novel itself. Magee wins and weds Mary.

The Gold Hunters

(Davis Distributing Div.—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A TYPICAL James Oliver Curwood story, which screens as a remarkably good Westerner, and should please wherever tales of open air adventure are popular. There is something fascinating about a search for treasure and the magic lure of gold which always seems to make a hit with the motion picture public, especially when, as in this case, the love interest is kept well to the fore amid the whiz of bullets and hand-to-hand clashes between contending forces, each heading for the same goal. The Indian types in this film are extremely well portrayed, the locations well chosen, and the artistic quality strengthened by views of rugged cliff backgrounds, forest and water, which rank as examples of decidedly fine camera work. David Butler plays the lead in dashing style, with Hedda Nova an attractive heroine, Bull Montana as ugly as sin, but monstrously effective as chief aid to the villain, Frank Elliott registering well in the latter role. The support is adequate.

THEME. Western melodrama wherein hero hunts for gold mine, successfully outwits other searchers and wins girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where heroine leaps into lake to escape kidnappers. The fight around the cave. The fast melodramatic action and romantic appeal. Comedy relief and happy conclusion.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as Westerner packed with exciting incident and romantic episodes. Feature David Butler and Hedda Nova.

DRAWING POWER. Effective in any community where they like love and adventure tales backed up by good Western atmosphere and lots of melo punches.

SUMMARY. Another James Oliver Curwood open air narrative, turned into a lively Westerner, with love angle well taken care of. Picture offers attractive scenic views, moves rapidly and should please a majority of the fans.

Flyin' Thru

(Davis Distributing Div.—5800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

SO far as spectacular stunts are concerned, this film matches up with the many melodramas dealing with high life in the air, if the phrase be permitted. Al Wilson appears as an aviation ace hero, and after witnessing his exploits with a plane in giddy altitudes, as well close to mother earth, one is inclined to agree that they picked just the right party for the role. The story is made to order for the purpose of showing off the star's ability in this direction to the best advantage, and it surely accomplishes it's purpose. Naturally, the plot is of light construction, but it furnishes Mr. Wilson with material for a lot of hard, fast aerial work while engaged in solving a murder mystery and winning the girl he wants, and we venture to wager that nobody will find the picture dull. This sky-man knows his business. There is no deception in the way of camera-faking as regards the exploits he performs, it's quite evident that he takes chances with his life a score of times, and these particular feats are of a nature guaranteed to send chills down the backs of weak-nerved folks.

THEME. Murder-mystery and aeroplane stunt melodrama. Hero aviation ace, who clears her father of crime by running down the guilty party.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Wilson's dare-devil air gyrations. Scene in which he crawls along side of plane and sets dead engine going again, and his leaps from plane on ladder. Pursuit by aeroplane of kidnapper in auto.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put this out as a rattling melodrama of the air and play up Wilson's stuff to the limit. Promise patrons all the thrills they want.

DRAWING POWER. Not enough "meat" to plot to make picture fit for big houses, but an uncommonly good card for smaller theatres.

SUMMARY. A snappy air-thriller with murder-mystery plot. Star's aeroplane performance the limit in daring. Story a bit thin, but Wilson's work makes strong impression. Good attraction for minor theatres.

Compromise

(Warner Brothers—6789 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

OFFERING a singularly inane story, oozing mawkish sentiment at every pore, this picture falls far short of the high standard usually distinguishing Warner product. It concerns the successful vamping of a husband by the bride's younger half-sister right after the wedding day, the vamp not even having the common decency to wait until after the honeymoon before beginning operations. The course of untrue love isn't straightened out until the aggrieved wife horsewhips sister, and a cyclone, suggested by a subtitle as having been sent by an indignant Deity to manifest His displeasure over such immoral goings-on, wrecks a nearby church and scares hubby into repentance. The crowning absurdity is the introduction of a cross bearing a crucified Christ, remaining intact amid the chapel ruins, before which the re-united couple kneel down and pray, a bit of business pretty sure to offend certain patrons. Not a character in the cast evokes sympathy, Irene Rich's fine talent is utterly wasted on a silly role, and taken on the whole the film is a dismal affair.

THEME. Drama in which husband, newly-wedded, is successfully vamped by bride's younger sister, but married pair are finally reconciled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Early scenes depicting Nathalie's flirtation with Joan's husband, and Pauline Garon's breezy work as vamp. Handsome interior settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Nothing to do except feature Irene Rich, and Pauline Garon, as well as other names in the cast which possess box-office value. Better go slow on boosting story, as undeserved praise may have bad comeback effect.

DRAWING POWER. Doubtful. May get by in smaller houses, will not win critical audiences.

SUMMARY. An unconvincing, unsympathetic plot. Dramatic punches over-strained and without appeal. Offers cast of well-known names, but acting is for most part mediocre because of impossible roles.

THE CAST

Joan Trevore.....Irene Rich
Alan Thayer.....Clive Brook
Hilda.....Louise Fazenda
Nathalie.....Pauline Garon
Cholly.....Raymond McKee
Aunt Catherine.....Helen Dunbar
Joan's Father.....Winter Hall
Commodore Smithson.....Edward Martindel

Nathalie brings her party ashore for the purpose of triumphing over the bride at the latter's cottage. Joan horsewhips her. A cyclone wrecks everything in sight. Joan and Alan are reconciled.

The Other Woman's Story

(Schulberg—6080 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD murder mystery drama with society atmosphere, in which the identity of the person who committed the crime is ingeniously concealed until the climax comes. It is the type of picture which has a universal audience appeal, particularly so because the suspense is tightened as events progress, and the on-lookers are utterly unable to anticipate the finish. It isn't often that you get a court-room scene on the screen that doesn't seem as though it could be largely improved by cutting out fifty per cent of the details. Not in this case, however! The trial stuff is mighty well done and, though perhaps a legal sharp would probably find a few things to criticise, movie-patrons in general will be deeply impressed by it. They utilize flashbacks a lot in constructing the episodes prior to the killing, and with satisfactory results. The acting throughout is high-grade, Alice Calhoun, in the wife role; Helen Lee Worthing, as the other woman; and Robert Frazer as hero, give excellent performances. Gertrude Short scores as night-nymph Gertie.

THEME. Murder mystery drama. Wife seeking divorce kills unfaithful lover, and almost succeeds in having husband, interested in the other woman, executed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The well sustained suspense and skillful manner in which criminal's identity is concealed. Court-room scene and clever use of flash-backs. Well-balanced work of principals and support.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up leading members of cast. Stress the suspense, heart interest, trial, and emotional conflicts between wife and "other woman."

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any house, with high-class cast and powerful dramatic appeal.

SUMMARY. A strong drama, well acted and directed. The murder mystery problem remains unsolved until the close and keeps spectators guessing. Title has pulling power. Picture should give general satisfaction.

SYNOPSIS. Colman Colby is sued for divorce by his wife, who names his business partner, Jean Prentiss, as co-respondent, retaining Robert Marshall as counsel. Latter is mysteriously murdered and Colman put on trial as the suspected slayer. Jean locates Gertie, underworld girl. Gertie gives evidence implicating Mrs. Colby, who was intimate with Marshall, as having killed him. Mrs. Colby confesses and is arrested. Go West

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—6256 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

GETTING off to a slow start, Buster Keaton's latest comedy suddenly leaps into dynamic, top-speed action, and from then on the laughs come fast and incessantly. As entertainment it ranks A-1, a box-office attraction promising to establish extraordinary records. Its value lies in its unfailing audience appeal, the sort of picture which is bound to pleace young and old alike. Most of it is sheer burlesque, the farcical spirit rules throughout the whole film, an uproariously funny satire on Western stuff, there is never a moment after it once gets properly under weigh that the on-lookers aren't rocked in mirth spasms. There are numerous novel twists to the plot's humorous situations, the work of the supporting cast is excellent, but one character stands out above all others and shares honors with the versatile Buster—the same being a cow of mild and intelligent aspect, named Brown Eyes, the tenderfoot hero's pet, who acts like a real Hollywood veteran, and wins unstinted applause.

THEME. Farce-comedy, burlesquing the regulation Westerns. Tenderfoot hero goes out to "open spaces" and gets tangled in maze of adventure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Great comedy work of Buster Keaton and Brown Eyes, the cow. Scene where Buster opens cattle cars and lets animals loose to roam around town. Buster's attempt at milking. The fine photography, atmosphere, scenery.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as a sure-fire farce comedy, chockful of fun. Tell patrons it's Buster's best up-to-date and don't forget the cow.

DRAWING POWER. A box-office winner for any house.

SUMMARY. Six reels of undiluted laughing tonic. A bully farce comedy, burlesquing regulation Westerns. Buster Keaton and a trained cow in screamingly funny partnership. Will please everybody.

THE CAST

The Drifter.....Buster Keaton
Ranch Owner.....Howard Truesdale
Truesdale's Daughter.....Kathleen Myers
A Bovine.....Brown Eyes

Author and Director, Buster Keaton. Photographed by Elgin Lessley and Bert Haines.

SYNOPSIS. Homer Holliday drifts out west, reaching the "wide open spaces" after a variety of adventures. He dons cowboy garments and gets employment on the Thompson ranch. He is instructed in the mysteries of range-riding and rounding up cattle and makes a pet of a cow named Brown Eyes, who is eventually shipped to market. Homer rides on the train and frustrates a holdup. He opens the doors of all the cars and after a series of near-miracles, lands the cattle in the Stock Yards. Thompson is so pleased over Homer's exploit that he makes him ranch foreman and gives him Brown Eyes as a present.

Go West (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

PRESS NOTICE

THE best comedy in which the versatile Buster Keaton has ever appeared—"Go West," is the screen attraction selected for the ——— Theatre on ———. It is a roaring, farcial production, a screamingly funny burlesque of the usual Wild West films, in which Buster, aided by a marvelously trained cow named "Brown Eyes" keeps his audiences in continual spasms of laughter from start to finish. The magnificent photography is not the least of the picture's good points and one scene, where the hero turns a herd of cattle loose to roam the city's streets, is particularly well done.

CATCH LINES

Watch out for Buster Keaton and his trained cow in this film. The greatest pair of pal comedians that ever graced a screen. Buster saves the cow from the slaughter house, and in so doing gets a fine job.

The Best People

(Paramount—5700 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS comedy-drama rates as a mildly amusing affair, which will pass O. K. as a program attraction, but can hardly be expected to create a sensation or accomplish anything extraordinary in the way of piling up a big box-office score. There is nothing original about the plot, which introduces such familiar screen characters as a newly-rich mother and father, handicapped in social aspirations by a flapper daughter who likes to go the pace regardless; and a sap of a son, whose only redeeming trait is that he picks out a stage girl of decent habits for a wife. The plain truth is that the story is unworthy of director Sidney Olcott, who has given us so many fine pictures in the past. In the hands of a less talented contemporary, it must have proved a frightful flop. As it is, Mr. Olcott has done as well as could be expected with the material given him. In spots there are flashes of comedy which bring the laughs, and Margaret Livingston fairly steals the picture from the leads by a delightful characterization of a flippant, slangy chorus girl.

THEME. Adventures in love-making of daughter and son of newly-rich family, one of whom insists on wedding their chauffeur, the other—a chorus girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Margaret Livingston's comedy, pleasing work of principals. Festive supper scenes in night club. Amusing climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the idea that the "best people" are not always to be found among luxurious surroundings. Feature principals and Margaret Livingston.

DRAWING POWER. Not likely to charm audiences who demand strong story values. Will pass muster as program attraction for average house.

SUMMARY. Comedy-drama, with familiar brand of plot. Has entertaining sequences here and there, but on the whole an ordinary production which fails to hold interest throughout.

The Wall Street Whiz

(F. B. O.—5452 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

NEARLY every time a Richard Talmadge feature appears on the screen it leaves the impression on that star's admirers as being the speediest thing he has turned out. There must be a limit, of course, but he doesn't seem to reach it. And many of the fans will insist that "The Wall Street Whiz" has all his previous stunt pictures outclassed in fast action. However that may be, it is good entertainment of its kind, packed as it is to the guards with melodrama, slapstick comedy and Dick's sensational gymnastics. The plot doesn't amount to much, but Richard's cohorts won't care anything about that. What they want is to see their favorite going the pace furiously, incessantly; and he scores O. K. on that point. Marceline Day, as heroine Peggy, has little to do except look prettily helpless, Lillian Langdon contributes a ripping Irish characterization as Peggy's mother, and Carl Miller does very well as the scheming John Clayton. Here and there the melodrama lapsed into sheer burlesque, but that makes scant difference in the values of a film not to be taken seriously.

THEME. Comedy-melodrama with star-executing sensational stunts in role of rich youth, who saves fortune of girl he loves from swindler's wiles.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The whirling action. Talmadge's stunts work. Slapstick comedy and touch of romance. Scene where Dick battles with burglars and recovers stolen money. Lillian Langdon's clever acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up star. Tell patrons Talmadge is at his agile best in this one. Boost the comedy stuff, and melo situations.

DRAWING POWER. Too crudely impossible for big first-run theatres but should register well in some neighborhood, and all small houses.

SUMMARY. A typical Richard Talmadge stunt feature, mingles melodrama and slapstick comedy freely. Action very fast. Good attraction wherever thrill stuff is the vogue.

THE CAST

The People vs. Nancy Preston

(Prod. Distributing Corp.—6300 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A FINE underworld story, well directed, cleverly acted and beautifully photographed, it looks as though the producers have a picture here which cannot fail to register gratifying results at the box office. It's a melodrama, packed with suspense and stirring action, but also strikes the pathetic chord with a sure hand, and its sentimental passages are so skillfully handled that the most hard-boiled fan will probably gulp in sympathetic reaction to the woes of pretty Nancy and her lover, both ex-jail birds, trying to fly straight, but constantly dragged down by the weight of their past records in crime. The hounding of released crooks by unfeeling detectives has formed the theme of many a film, but seldom has it been moulded into such excellent entertainment as in the present case. Much of the picture's success is due to the intensity of heart appeal projected by the flawless performances given by Marguerite De La Motte, as heroine Nancy; and John Bowers, as the loyal Mike Horgan, with capable support from the rest of the company.

THEME. Underworld melodrama, dealing with regeneration of man and woman crooks, handicapped in effort to forget past by detective who watches them.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Superb acting of principals. Realistic underworld atmosphere. Trial and murder scenes. Episode where Nancy nurses pursuer.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can go the limit in praising the tense situations and human interest phases of this one. Feature Miss De La Motte and Bowers.

DRAWING POWER. Should make a ten-strike in any house, big or little.

SUMMARY. A capital melodrama, with underworld atmosphere and convincing plot, dealing with troubles of man and girl, whose efforts to escape their past convict records, are constantly foiled by police. Works into bright climax.

THE CAST

Nancy Preston	Marguerite De La Motte
Mike Horgan	John Bowers
Bubsy	Frankie Darro
Bill Preston	David Butler

Agnes	Gertrude Short

They flee to a small town, where Mike practices medicine. Tierney gets on their trail, arrives, and is nursed by Nancy through a serious illness. Gus comes with a warrant, experiences a change of heart and admits Nancy's innocence. Mike is also cleared of a burglary charge and weds Nancy.

John Bowers, who is featured in "The People vs. Nancy Preston" a Prod. Dist. Corp. release.

The Vanishing American

(Paramount—10063 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE is no disputing the historical excellence and artistic beauty of this epic of the fast disappearing Indian race, and their predecessors, the cliff-dwellers. The camera work is remarkably fine, and the battle scenes, including the bow-and-arrow and hand-to-hand engagements between redskins and cave warriors; as well as those in France with modern weapons; are the acme of realism and spectacular lure. In fact, the subject is handled on so broad a scale that it is quite impossible to enter into details or do the picture full justice within the narrow limits of an average review. Suffice it to say that it ranks as one of the really big and impressive films of the season, with pronounced educational as well as entertaining values. The romantic interest is developed by a love affair between an Indian chief and girl schoolteacher. As the latter is white, it became necessary to kill off the red man in deference to the popular feeling against marriage in such cases. But the tragic note is partially smothered by a hint that the heroine finds consolation in the arms of a U. S. army officer.

THEME. Spectacular, historical film, ranging from cliff-dweller era to modern Indians, with latter-day romance between white girl and chief of tribe.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Broad and colorful backgrounds, exquisite photography, battle scenes, deft fashion in which sympathy is aroused for red men, forceful thrills, fine acting of Richard Dix, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery and supporting cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as stirring spectacular picture, historically perfect, alive with thrills, an echo of past ages, with modern romance included.

DRAWING POWER. Should satisfy all classes of audiences. The high-brows will enthuse over it and average fans respond to sweeping action and forceful sequences.

SUMMARY. One of the outstanding films of the year, magnificently photographed and staged, an Indian epic of tremendous power, with interesting love tale of to-day neatly interpolated. A box-office winner.

THE CAST

The theatre would be in back of a new store and apartment building at 3174 Main street, corner West Northrup place. To date it has not been divulged who will operate the house. The entrance would be on Main street.

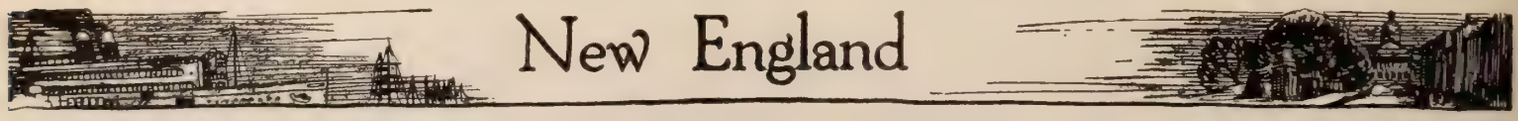
THE Montreal Theatrical Bowling League has once more been re-organized and is all set for its 24-week season. There are 12 teams in the league, representing that many local theatres, and membership has been increased by the admission of teams of United Amusements, Limited, the Gayety and the Palace Theatres, Manager George Rotsky being a great booster for the Palace Theatre five.

Officers have been elected as follows: President, Frank Warnicker, manager of the Strand Theatre; Vice-president, Mr. Bremner of the Imperial; Recording secretary, H. C. Simons of the Palace; financial secretary, Mr. Cunningham, Gayety. A handsome trophy has been hung up for the league championship.



A couple of Jimmy Lynches figured in the news in Regina, Sask., a few days ago when the manager of the Capital Theatre was haled to court and fined $2 and costs for the erection of a railway crossing sign in front of the theatre in an alleged illegal manner. The sign was a special display for "Desert Flower." One of the J. Lynches was Manager J. Lynch of the Capitol and the other was Officer J. Lynch of the Regina Police Department, who laid the complaint. The exhibitor declared the extra publicity was worth the penalty.

Leo Roberge has been appointed director of the eight-piece orchestra.

During the week of October 19, both the Imperial and Rex Theatres at Ottawa, the Canadian Capital, were used on different occasions for big political meetings by the Conservative Party in advance of the Canadian Federal elections to take place October 29. Manager D. Coplan leased the Imperial Theatre on October 23 for a meeting at which prominent Toronto speakers were heard.

Charles B. Hider who recently took over the management of the Majestic theatre at Stratford has considerable credit coming to him. He has turned what was a losing proposition into a profitable business. It is reported that some of the larger theatre circuits have been negotiating for his release and it would not be surprising to see him in the near future as one of the big theatre managers.

New England

HARRY GOLDSTEIN, manager of the Shawmut Theatre, Boston, is back from a trip to New York where he was called on business, preparatory to the reopening of his theatre.

In common with Pathe branches elsewhere, the New England sales force is being increased in line with the policy of having all of its salesmen specialty men. Pathe has had five salesmen going out from Boston on short subjects and a short time ago added two more men to handle the two-reel comedies. It now doubles its former sales force by adding three more to the two-reel comedy force. "Bo" Hartford, formerly of the Metro staff, will cover Southern Massachusetts and Rhode Island and Albert Jeffries, formerly of the Paramount forces, will handle New Hampshire, both selling comedies. Flo Canty, at one time with Educational's forces and who returns to the industry after a brief period in other fields of work, becomes regular short subject salesman for Pathe in New Hampshire.

The new Bellevue Community Theatre, on Belgrade avenue, Roslindale section of Newton, Mass., opened Oct. 26 for the first time. The new playhouse was erected by the Belgrade Amusement Co., part of whose stockholders are interested in the Community theatre at Newton. The new house seats eight hundred and is equipped with a Wurlitzer organ. It will operate straight motion pictures with a double feature, comedy and news bill, with change of program twice weekly. Stanley Sumner of the Newton Community Theatre, will have charge of the film selections.

Charles Henschel, Eastern Division manager for Pathe with headquarters in New York, was in Boston during the week and conducted the sales meeting during his brief visit.

George A. Hickey, divisional supervisor of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, M. N. Wolf, resident manager and Edward J. Farrell, Boston sales manager, have just returned from trips through Northern New England, going through Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

The Shawmut Theatre, Boston, will probably open early in November after extensive alterations and enlargements, in which some 800 additional seats were put in place. The Morton Street Theatre, Boston, will probably open about the middle of the month with similar alterations and 700 additional seats, while the Jamaica Theatre, in the Jamaica Plain section of Boston, where some 800 seats have been added, is expected to open early in December. These playhouses are operated by Jake Laurie.

"Pop" Westfall, formerly manager of the New Haven branch for Pathe, who was one of those changed about by the closing of the Connecticut exchanges, has been made special serial representative for Pathe, covering all of New England.

Salt Lake City

CONTRARY to a notice in these columns that there had been a change in management of the Universal Salt Lake office, Samuel Henley, who has been Branch Manager at this office for more than the past year, is still filling that capacity.

Mr. Henley is still here and wishes to thank all exhibitors for the co-operation that they have and are giving him as manager of the Salt Lake office for Universal.

Another Picture Palace Opens in Chicago

Lubliner & Trinz Add $2,000,000 House to Circuit; Opens to Capacity

ANOTHER beautiful theatre was opened in Chicago on Monday, October the 12th, when Lubliner and Trinz' "Harding" held its premiere. The reported cost of this new house is $2, 000,000 and unusual ceremony was arranged in celebration of the opening by the Avondale-Logan Square Business Men's associations. More than 100,000 people turned out for the opening of the theatre and the fall festival.

The Harding opened its doors at 5 o'clock with one of the best stunts ever designed to get crowds to the opening of a new theatre. Eddie Cantor, comedy king of Flo Ziegfield's "Kid Boots" show and Mary Eaton, dancing star, acted as doorman and cashier respectively.

The publicity and advertising for the Harding opening and for the Avondale and Logan Square Business Men's Association Fall festival, was handled by Lubliner & Trinz' publicity staff consisting of Louis P. Krámer, J. J. Hess, William Adler, Miss Anne McEwen, and Roy Willis, artist, aided by Ben H. Serkowich of Balaban & Katz, who will long be remembered for his great work on the Uptown opening.

The opening of the Harding theatre marked the si teenth anniversary of Lubliner & Trinz. The company has grown from one theatre to the largest circuit of first run houses in the city, with twenty houses now in operation and eleven more costing $19,000,000 under construction, making the company's total investment in Chicago more than $30,000,000 with 3,100 employes.

The pageant activities, of course had a tendency to hold people out-of-doors, but worked greatly to the advantage of the theatre. It brought thousands into the neighborhood.

Back of all this is sixteen years of untiring effort—not only on the part of Lubliner & Trinz, but on the part of a multitude of other organizations as well. The names of these belong on the L. & T. roll of honor—of those who have contributed theie best in an effort to make L. & T.'s great chain among the country's finest.

Some of Chicago's best known builders have had a finger in the construction of Lubliner & Trinz' theatres. Meyer Fridstein was the architect who actually visualized it, and under his direction the theatre was brought to splendid realization.

The interior painting and decorating on the Harding is a splendid sample of the work of one of Chicago's foremost interior decorating concerns and dealers in antique furniture. A great deal of the beauty of the interior of the new house has been largely the result of the efforts of the contract department of Marshall Field & Co., who designed the rich and tasteful drapes, and supplied furniture, carpets and other furnishings that greatly enhance the lobby and balcony promenades.

Marble has always been used on a large scale in L. & T. houses and two of the city's marble companies, known both for the excellence of their product were called on to do their share in supplying this material. Terra cotta is another stone that has been used largely to beautify both the exteriors and interiors.

The motion picture equipment in L. & T. theatres is of the best Peerless Reflector Lamps are used in the booth.

The mamouth organ that fills the Harding auditorium with harmony bears the name of Wurlitzer. More than $30,000 was expended in building and installing the one instrument in the new Harding and it is one of the finest to be found anywhere in the city.

The addition of Lubliner & Trinz' $2,000,000 picture palace only makes the expression "Chicago, the city of theatres deluxe," more true. There is probably no center of population anywhere with more elaborate and beautiful show places, in proportion to population than this mid-western city. Neighborhood houses are comparable with most large cities finest while its best theatres vie for the world premier ranking.

DIRECT BUYING

THE principal topic of discussion these days among equipment manufacturers is whether they will comply with the demand of large circuits to sell them direct thereby eliminating distributors' profit.

Direct buying neccesitates that installation and servicing be done by the purchaser—which is convenient for a few circuits—fifteen at the outside. It is very questionable whether smaller or even relatively large groups of theatres can maintain such a special service department economically, not to mention the thousands of independent houses which have no technical staff.

This field is not large enough for distributors to maintain a paying business if they derive no profits from equipment bought by circuits. Therefore direct sales to circuits by manufacturers at the discounts now given dealers would eventually be the means of eliminating distributors or at least all the important ones.

Without complete distributor representation, manufacturers will be forced to sell the entire field direct. Results from that sales policy might be manifold—and by no means beneficial to theatres in general:

Where large discounts could be allowed big buyers, this policy would necessarily mean excessive charges to smaller buyers to cover installation, service and sales expense. The introduction of new and improved equipment would be handicapped, retarding the excellent advancement, such as has been constantly going on during the past ten years, for more efficient and better apparatus.

Manufacturers of lessor supplies would find it difficult to sell in quantities, resulting in the maintenance of higher prices. With no distributors' sales representatives constantly calling on exhibitors urging the installation of new and improved apparatus, the tendency towards better projection and general up-to-dateness of theatres might be brought to a more or less stand-still.

Certainly, large buyers should receive a discount—but not to the elimination of all distributor profits. And as to the manufacturers being "forced" to sell direct, this appears a bit strong—especially if these manufacturers are making good products. that are needed by theatres.

Description of An Attractive Lobby Using Special Displays

By Wm. F. Libman, Libman Spanjer Corp., N. Y. C.

HAVING carried the reader through the modern lobby frame plant, and explaining step by step, the evolution of the building of the modern lobby frame and mirror, it would naturally follow that the uses and adaptability of these products be touched upon.

As has been pointed out in the foregoing articles, the purpose of the lobby display is to attract, beautify, and adorn. The business of producing and exhibiting motion pictures, being a comparatively new one, it follows that the building of accessories required by the motion picture theatre is a correspondingly youthful one.

In this line of endeavor, as is the case in other trades and industries, certain styles and practices have come to be accepted as standards. Being structural, and confined to limitations dictated by the size and shape of the theatre lobby, certain styles and shapes of lobby frames and mirrors have been devised and followed, each of them treated with modifications or additions as the case might call for. Just as in architecture where there are just so many forms or styles, that permit for individual treatment and personality, so it is with lobby frames and mirrors.

But every so often, a departure is made, either by request of the user, or necessitated by the lobby conformation, or through the ingenuity of the builder, or perhaps through a combination of all three of the foregoing elements.

A striking example of such a departure is called to the writer's mind in a recent installation made at Reade's New Oxford Theatre at Plainfield, N. J. Instead of the usual elaborately treated style, a special type of frame was decided upon. This consisted of a simple 3-inch wide moulding, gold leafed, and burnished, with a hand hammered surfaced finish. These frames with a backing of blue silk plush, pleasingly and radically different, but the element that added still greater individuality was the manner in which they were installed. Instead of being attached in the customary manner, up against the lobby wall, they were actually hung by means of heavy silken blue and gold cords or ropes with tasselled ends, in much the same manner as is used in the hangings of expensive oil paintings. This is really the effect that is produced in this unusually artistic lobby; just as though the lobby frames were magnificent works of art in a wonderful painting gallery.

The moment that one enters this lobby, which by the way is 100 feet in depth, he is first greeted by two massive solid bronze 3-sheet combination frames that flank the entrance. Then past the set of four lobby frames hanging as described above, in sets of two, that are hung between artistic pilasters, and then into the foyer.

It is at this point that the real individuality of the lobby strikes one. For here are two magnificent Italian marble lamps, one on either side of the foyer. Each of these lamps are carved out of a single block of beautiful marble, solid from the base up to the bowl shaped urn in which the lighting elements are placed. These bowls, cupped by the sculptor out of the solid piece, produce the most wonderful translucent lighting effect imaginable when the illumination is complete.

This lighting effect is greatly enhanced by the background provided through two magnificent large tapestries that cover each wall behind these alabaster lamps.

The entire lobby itself is lighted up by means of a group of jewelled crystal chandeliers that hang from the lobby ceiling, and that add no little contribution to the beauty of this lobby which the writer considers one of the finest in this country.

Plans Announced for New Albuquerque Theatre

Announcement was recently made by the Bachechi Amusement Company that plans are being drawn for a Class A theatre, capable of accommodating the largest theatrical productions, vaudeville and motion pictures, to be erected at the northeast corner of West Central avenue and Fifth street.

The new theatre will have a 75-foot frontage on Central and 142 feet frontage on Fifth. It will be 50 feet high in front. It will have a seating capacity of 1,400. The stage will be 32x75 feet with a loft 60 feet in height and proscenium arch 34 feet. The style of architecture is early Spanish mission and the furnishings will conform to this artistic style. The exterior and interior finish will be of polychrome terra cotta. The roof will be of ornamental mission tiling. The interior decorations will be beautiful, designed by artists of great ability and will cost approximately $10,000. The entire interior will be carpeted in handsome velour.

Inquiries and Comments

We Are "Bawled" Out

IT seems that when the editor of this department made a statement, a little more than a year, to the effect that the Law of Inverse Squares applied to the light beam of a motion picture projector he started something.

Despite the fact that proof was advanced at the time that statement was originally made which tended to preclude any arguing on the matter the editor, ever since, has been busy warding off attacks from every side which come, more or less, in the nature of incredulous disbeliefs.

It seems strange that such a casual statement of a perfectly obvious fact should elicit so much criticism—particularly from persons whom we have accredited all along with being in full possession of all the facts concerning projection fundamentals. Yet such has been the case, much to our surprise.

In connection with this needless controversy we paid particular attention to answering the critical comments of a writer for another trade publication, and who, by the way, appeared to be our most persistent critic, thinking that we might thereby effectively silence the spasmodic attacks from our readers. In this we have apparently been unsuccessful since only recently a Brooklyn projectionist, one Richard Kuester by name, takes us to task for the critical attitude which we, in turn, have assumed toward our critics, for he writes:
Dear Sir:

"Being a projectionist and therefore interested in all matters pertaining to projection, I subscribe to several trade journals just to get information and new ideas on projection (a laudable ambition which may well be emulated by the rest of the fraternity—Ed.)

"In the October 10th issue of Motion Picture News you devote an entire article, or rather the entire section on projection to criticise an editor of a projection department of another paper.

"I happen to be a subscriber to both papers and know whom you mean. To my idea this editor is just trying to elevate those who work in the projection room and make projection a respected profession. This editor is man enough to admit when he is wrong or does not know.

"True enough, everybody has the right to argue for what they think is right, just as scientists and others argue against well known laws of nature.

Wants to Know

"As a projectionist and a subscriber, I am going to ask you to be so kind as to set forth in plain English your knowledge on this subject of light action so I, as a projectionist, will understand the subject a little better. . . ."

Who'd'a thought that this matter would develop into such a word-slinging contest anyway? As a space consumer it rates "A-1."

After all the explaining and argufying that we have already passed out along comes a chap like Kuester with the naive request that we start it all over again so that he "as a projectionist" can understand it. Well, we as an editor are not going to do it. No sir, not by a long shot.

If you want to understand what this feud is all about, Friend Kuester, you'll have to go right back to the May, June and July issues of Motion Picture News of last year (1924) and do some tall reading. The best explanation we could hope to make is contained in those issues—I think one of the July issues would be particularly interesting. As for starting it all over again—Never!

Tired

As far as our criticism of other writers is concerned, why, we too, have been hauled over the coals so it is only natural for us to turn around and do a little bit of the hauling ourselves. We are going to be even more critical than the other fellow, especially when he attempts to ridicule us. If anybody crowds us we are going to crowd right back.

We too are trying to elevate the projectionists' standing in the field but not, however, by patting him on the back. The utter self-complacency with which many projectionists assume a know-it-all attitude is one of the direct results of such actions so we believe it is better to give them a jolt every now and then in order to keep their thinking apparatus in proper trim. Our motto has been "Spare the oil and spoil the rod."

As far as arguments go, nothing could be better to bring out ideas and develop one's knowledge of the subject, including the editors. This particular argument, however, has been dilly-dallying back and forth for over a year along the lines "Yes, it is," "No, it isn't" and that is too long.

So we say again this is positively the last time we are going to mention it. Other things of more importance are on the schedule.

Shades of Jesse James

Just recently we received word of the existence of a Projection School in the middle west, from O. Record of Grain Valley, Mo.

Friend Record writes again giving the address of this school as follows:

Kansas City School of Motion Picture Projection, 109 West 18th Street, E. J. Sime, Manager.

A clipping from another journal in the motion picture field accompanied the letter and this clipping forms very interesting reading. It appears that the M. P. T. O. of Missouri and Kansas are cooperating with the school, which is conducted on a non-union basis.

Recently, some handbills were distributed explaining the purpose of the school to theatre managers. Whatever was contained in those handbills certainly brought results—but from a different quarter. A nice friendly group consisting of about twenty-five members of the local union paid Manager Sime a visit, the nature of which can be adduced from the fact that Sime promptly "drew a bead" on them with a Colt Forty-Five, or whatever they use to draw beads with, and, according to the news item, "successfully stood off the angry mob." Apparently there were no casualties.

C. E. Cook, business manager of the Kansas-Missouri M. P. T. O., in a statement issued after the incident denied implication of his organization in the matter of the handbills but placed himself on record as being in favor of the school saying "any exhibitor has a right to hire whom he pleases and pay according to the quality of the work done, just the same as an employer in any line of business pays an employee according to his ability."

And so it rests. However, there's much to be said on both sides.

Minusa Screen Plant Severely Damaged by Fire

Fire of undetermined origin on Friday night, October 16, damaged the plant of Minusa-Cine Screen Company, 2665 Morgan St., St. Louis, Mo., approximately $20,000. The company manufactures high class motion picture screens. The blaze had gained considerable headway before it was discovered by a passing policeman. The fire department had to fight more than an hour before the fire was under control. The loss was fully covered by insurance.

Officials of the company stated that it would prepare to care for all business promptly and that in a very short time normal conditions will be restored in the plant.

James Cardina Building Two Theatres in Buffalo

James Cardina, who operates the new Varsity on Bailey avenue and the Kensington on Grider street, Buffalo, has just acquired another site on Bailey avenue, between Kensington and Delavan avenues, on which in the spring he will begin the construction of a 2,500 seat house which will have a frontage of 140 feet.

Mr. Cardina, in association with his brother, Thomas, is also building a new theatre in Williamsville, N. Y., near Buffalo, which will be ready in a few weeks. This house is really an enlargement of the old Glen theatre which Mr. Cardina has operated for years, but a new front is being built and the horse seating capacity augmented to 750. Some day property next door to the theatre may be obtained at which time the house will be boosted to a 1,200 seat house.

St. Louis Amusement Company to Erect $1,000,000 Theatre Building

The St. Louis Amusement Company have purchased the Mikado Airdome site at Hamilton and Easton avenues, St. Louis, and plan to erect a $1,000,000 theatre and apartment structure there within the next few months.

The price paid for the ground is said to have set a new record for that section of St. Louis. In realty circles it is reported that the consideration was approximately $135,000. The site fronts 147 feet on Easton avenue by 200 feet on Hamilton avenue.

Spyros Skouras, president of the St. Louis Amusement Company, confirmed the report and stated that the new theatre will seat approximately 3,000 persons. It will rank with the finest houses in the Central West. An architect and engineer will be selected to prepare plans for the house within the next few weeks and it is planned to award the construction contracts very shortly.

The new house will become a first run theatre for that section of St. Louis and will play day and date with the Grand Central on many big productions very probably.

St. Louis Theatre Field is Active

The new Southampton Theatre, Lansdowne and Wherry avenues, St. Louis, Mo., has been completed. This house seats 1,000 persons and cost approximately $75,000. It was erected by the Southampton Investment and Building Company and is of concrete and steel construction.

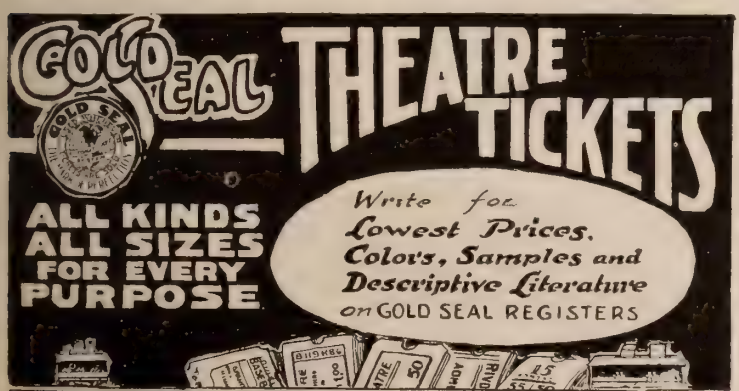
The Ivanhoe Theatre, Ivanhoe and Bradley avenues, St. Louis, Mo., held its grand opening on October 16. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tabler are managing the house. It was erected by S. S. Yeckel.

Charles Skouras' new house at Columbia and Southwest avenues will be ready within a very few weeks. It will seat about 1,500 persons and rank with the finest houses in the city. It was designed by Preston J. Bradshaw, who is also supervising the construction.

Robert Stempfle of the Strand Theatre, St. Charles, Mo., has had plans prepared for a new house for St. Charles. It will be two story, 50 by 140 feet and of brick, steel and mill construction. Plans are being prepared by Boller Brothers, 114 West Tenth street, Kansas City, Mo.

THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME

THE shivering, chattering, red-nosed crowd, bundled in furs and great coats, that will soon be shuffling its feet in three inches of snow, will seek the theatre with that good-old-summer-time look.



Netschert artificial flowers and natural prepared palms, plants and trees of all kinds provide the means of converting an uninviting theatre into the kind that pleasure seekers want.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Keeper of Bees"—F. B. O., Cameo, N. Y.

Telegraph: "The film version mirrors faithfully characters and events in the book. Added to this, the direction by James Leo Meehan, the late author's son-in-law, is good, the titles likewise and the acting for the most part excellent. The result is a picture of unusual human interest which should make a powerful appeal to the army of Gene Stratton-Porter's readers, and please others. Story is at all times interesting because its twists and turns are unexpected. Robert Frazer gives a fine performance and commands sympathy every minute he is on the screen, while Clara Bow does her best work. Gene Stratton, granddaughter of Mrs. Porter, makes her first screen appearance in this picture and gives a performance that is little less than remarkable in its naturalness."

Morning World: "Gene Stratton-Porter's audience—which was vast enough to begin with—has been hugely augmented by the successful presentation of her work on the screen. So that hundreds of readers who made 'The Keeper of the Bees' a best seller will be multiplied by the thousands who come to rejoice over triumphant virtue in the film version. They will find a faithful representation of Mrs. Porter's tale. A highly successful attempt to recapture the bright-colored optimism through which one of our most popular novelists won her thousands of devoted readers."

Herald-Tribune: "All of those who like the stories of Gene Stratton-Porter will enjoy 'The Keeper of the Bees.' Robert Frazer is excellent. Clara Bow managed to give one a very clear idea of Sally, the fresh flapper."

Journal: "Gene Stratton-Porter's readers will recognize in 'The Keeper of the Bees' a faithful transcript of her story. There are all the sweetness and light of birds and flowers and sunshine that the estimable novelist put so much stress upon. The best work in the film is done by little Gene Stratton, an adorable child of about twelve."

Post: "Admirers of Gene Stratton-Porter's undeniably popular novels should have little difficulty in spending a palpitant afternoon or evening at the Cameo this week, watching the screen version of 'The Keeper of the Bees' which has been filmed with respectful attention to the original. Should please the writer's followers immensely. Young Gene Stratton, granddaughter of the author, does some excellent work."

"Fine Clothes"—First National, Capitol, New York

Times: "This subject as shadow form is an agreeable diversion having the great advantage of a distinguished cast—Alma Rubens is appealing and convincing as Paula, and Lewis Stone makes a likeable character of the Earl. Percy Marmont as Peter gives a performance reminiscent of his capable work as Mark Saber in 'If Winter Comes.'"

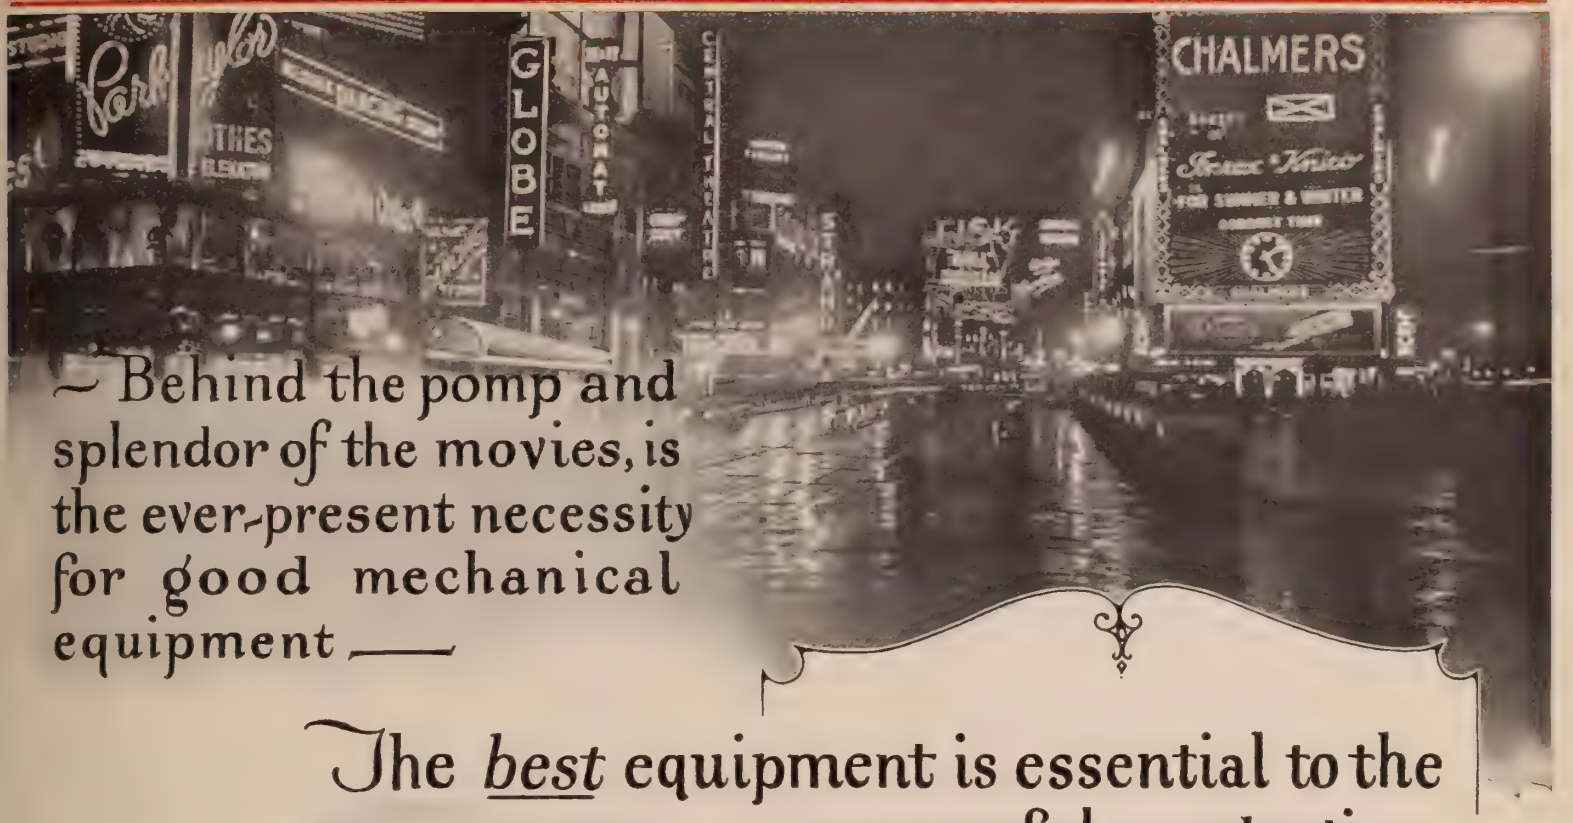
Morning World: "Thanks to the work of an extremely fortunate cast, the tenderness and sympathy of the story have been recaptured in the shadows of a mild and ingratiating picture play. Percy Marmont has O. P. Heggie's role of the patient Peter, Raymond Griffith is a particularly lively co-respondent, Alma Rubens is the decorative cashier and Lewis Stone is the genial, if sinister, Earl of Denham."

Herald-Tribune: The fact that that invaluable director, John Stahl directed the picture helped a lot, and the cast is excellent. Best of all we liked Lewis Stone as the pleasing Earl of Denham. And how Paula ever withstood him is more than we could understand."

Daily News: "The cast is thoroughly satisfying. You'd have to go to the movies many times before you'd see such a glittering assemblage of movie stars—I should have said movie actors, for this time everybody troupes, if you get what I mean. Erotic Alma Rubens and pert Eileen Percy have the leading feminine roles. Percy Marmont fairly pulls all the sympathy his way in a Marmontish role. Lewis Stone is the understandable villain, worldly wise, but with no defenses against virtue. For paprika is Raymond Griffith."

Evening World: "'Fine Clothes' treats the theme kindly and to good effect. The direction is intelligent and Percy Marmont does well with a difficult characterization. The other roles are well cast and well played and the photography and lighting are excellent."

"Red Hot Tires"—Warners, Warners, N. Y.



Times: "Fully three-quarters of 'Red Hot Tires' is enjoyable. Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller give an excellent account of themselves.

Journal: "There's a red hot comedy at Warner's this week called "Red Hot Tires." As celluloid entertainment it's a blowout. Monte Blue's rescue stunts pile one howling situation on another."

Using a State fair for ballyhoo on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Unholy Three," Loew's theatre in Dayton set up a freak show at the Ohio State fair grounds in that city. Free admission was given all those who responded to the barker's advice to enter and see some advance indications as to what "The Unholy Three" held in store for patrons of Loew's theatre.

The Greatest of the GREATER FORTY are still to come!

GLORIA SWANSON

IN

"Stage Struck"

A Paramount Picture

"THE wise ones are saying 'Stage Struck' will be the greatest picture of Gloria Swanson's career", declares an editorial in Moving Picture World. The wise ones are right. Not even in "The Humming Bird" and "Manhandled" did Miss Swanson attain the heights of heart-touching appeal and joyous comedy that she reaches in "Stage Struck". The screen play was written by Forrest Halsey from the story by Frank R. Adams, adapted by Sylvia La Varre.

AN ALLAN DWAN PRODUCTION

THE GREATEST of the GREATER FORTY are still to come!

Adolphe MENJOU

as the royal lover in Paris and in Coney Island

"The King on Main Street"

SWIFT, smart, sparkling comedy is offered you in this tale of a merry monarch of many loves who finds the only true romance of his extravagant life on the Main Street of an American small town. This is the famous Parisian stage play Adolphe Menjou and Monta Bell have wanted to screen ever since their association together in the production of "A Woman of Paris." At last, with the limitless resources of Paramount to back them, these two talented men have made their ideal picture. Into it each has packed every spark of fire and genius of which he is capable.

You'll see some real Parisian love scenes between Menjou and Greta Nissen, the beautiful enchantress of "The Wanderer." You'll see love in the American style as practised by Menjou and Bessie Love. You'll see a King shooting the chutes at Coney Island, flipping the flapjacks at Childs', turning a small town in Jersey topsy-turvy. And you'll see scenes in Technicolor of breath-taking beauty.

FRANCES MARION'S

A Glorious Contribution to a Great

FRANCES MARION'S career is an unbroken record of amazing screen successes. This remarkable woman has more sure-fire box office productions to her credit than any other scenario writer in the industry. Her name to a picture is an assurance of the highest type of entertainment.

A list of the productions for which she wrote scenarios, reads like a blue-book of the screen's sensations.

And now comes "SIMON THE JESTER" her first production made for independent release on the great P. D. C. program.

A powerful, stirring drama of human hearts, human loves and human lives—with an Oriental flavor—this first independent Frances Marion Production is a worthy successor to the long line of successes which this brilliant woman has contributed to the screen.

Adapted by Miss Marion from a great story by the world-famous novelist, William J. Locke, "SIMON THE JESTER" is a Super Picture of Superior Merit.

Some of Her Successes:

Little things of large importance from the William Fox studio

IT OFTEN happens in the theatre that the long picture on the program has failed to please you, yet you are delighted with one or several of the "short subjects" that complete the bill. WILLIAM FOX has given the greatest care to these little "Gems of the Picture Program."

Van Bibber Comedies Richard Harding Davis wrote the celebrated Van Bibber stories from which is made the series of short "society comedies" in which Earle Foxe has won just renown. Van Bibber Comedies have been ruling favorites in high-class theatres for the last two seasons.

Married Life of Helen and Warren The stories by Mabel Herbert Urner published in the newspapers for fifteen years under this title have now been secured by Fox—a new treat for lovers of the little good things of the screen. Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley play Helen and Warren respectively throughout the series.

O. Henry Stories You will see them live and move on the screen—those entertaining characters created by America's greatest short story genius, O. Henry. William Fox has made a series of new comedy dramas from these "Gems of Fiction." Never before screened—these little masterpieces visualize for theatre patrons stories and characters long beloved in thousands of American homes.

Imperial Comedies The old "slap-stick" comedies are things of the past—so far as Fox is concerned! No custard pie or glue-pot messiness mars the entertainment that ceaselessly rolls through these, the cleanest, cleverest and most zestful comedies of this kind. Pretty girls galore, real plots, many clever animal actors—and brains used in the mixing!

Fox News A vivid, stirring, gripping presentation of the great events of the world unfolded before your eyes. The scenes of today that will be the history of tomorrow, caught by the all-seeing eye of the camera, brought to you with speed, sincerity and truth—and a wonderful feeling for the human angle!

Fox Varieties New, novel, charming and beautiful bits of romance from the far places of the world. Pictures that push back the walls of the theatres and take you through the lands you dream of seeing—that give you the feeling of far and brave adventures of your own.

They add spice to your favorite entertainment

WHEN properly installed and operated Incandescent Lamp Projection is one of the most profitable investments that any theatre can make.

It improves the appearance of pictures on the screen by eliminating shadows, flicker and uneven distribution of light. The light from an incandescent lamp is free from glare and is of a tonal quality that gives greater depth to pictures.

Incandescent Lamp Projection frees the projection room from fumes, dust and excessive heat. It simplifies the operator's work. Allows him to give more attention to the picture.

And these improvements are obtained at a saving of from 25 to 75% on the cost of arc-light projection.

It is no wonder that the Incandescent Lamp is replacing the arc light for projection purposes in hundreds of theatres throughout the country.

EDISON MAZDA LAMPS
A GENERAL ELECTRIC PRODUCT

A Better Light

THE Edison MAZDA lamp for motion picture projection is the result of years of research and experimentation carried on by the General Electric Company to perfect a lamp that would improve the quality and reduce the cost of projection.

Incandescent lamp projection can be used in theatres having a seating capacity up to 1,000 and a picture not over 16 feet wide and a throw not exceeding 120 feet. It gives better results than an alternating current arc and under average operating conditions is the equal of a direct current 50-ampere arc.

Sweet words! The Exhibitors Trade Review said them. And these too:—"With two names like Dick Barthelmess and Dorothy Gish in the cast; with the sharp, graphic incidents and scenes of the always interesting life in a Metropolitan slum; with—rarer still—a close-up and vivid portrayal of a Chinese play in a real Chinese theatre and with a he-man's battle that out-furies the fight that won Barthelmess many plaudits in 'Fury' you have here a picture that should prove a sweet dream and a pretty bed-time story for the cash drawer."

A Real Step Forward

THE announcement of the appointment of Joseph M. Seider as Business Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is of more than passing importance.

If we see ahead as clearly as we feel we do in this instance, it is, potentially at least, the most important happening of this rather hectic season in the trade.

A good man has been secured—clean, aggressive, level-headed, a sound business man. We have watched his career as President of the New Jersey League; and we feel pretty sure that he took this job in a characteristic way—first sweeping the deck clear of all politics and demanding a four-square business regime.

From the official announcement it would appear that already business—and most important business—has been done, namely a series of conferences with Will H. Hays in which "progress was made on the question of a more equitable (arbitration) contract." "Several suggestions," says the statement "have been advanced and most cordially received."

If a workable arbitration contract is evolved—and certainly that is possible—a most important trade objective will have been won; but we are greatly in hope that there will be other occasions of joint action between the Theatre Owners Association and the Havs group of Producers and Distributors, whereby some of the major problems confronting this industry may be solved in the industry's larger interests.

We take up our minds pretty much with the various trade amalgamations, real and imaginary, and with trade politics in general. It is about time that we considered, and seriously, the public relations of the motion picture—how the public regards it and what Congress and the State and the local bodies may do to it. That's where the real health and future of the box-office lies.

As we have remarked countless times, and until we tire of it, nothing will ever be done for this industry, in a broad and lasting way, until producers, distributors and exhibitors act in concert and secure not merely present box-office prosperity but the respect and confidence of the American public.

Said a prominent exhibitor to me the other day—a far sighted and practical man: "I don't give a rap who leads up here in New York, or how the different factors shuffle the cards. But I do insist that the leaders be constructive. I'll support the constructive ones, whatever their affiliations. My string of theatres stretches over a section of a million homes, and those homes are holding me responsible for their motion picture entertainment. If I can't hold my head up before them I'll lose it, but so also will the motion picture and this industry. I tell you, it's a tremendous responsibility."

So it is. But also there's a responsibility which this exhibitor cannot avoid—and this applies to every big exhibitor in the country—and that is to join and give his best efforts to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. This membership should come about through his state organization. The local work to be done is just as important as the National. But the point is that the larger theatres of the country, with their hundreds of millions invested and paying as they do three-quarters or more of the trade income, have simply got to, for their own protection and ad-

Speaking Editorially

THE whole industry rejoices in the great victory achieved at the polls this week by Senator James J. Walker, who is now the Mayor-Elect of New York City. Jimmy rode into office by a plurality in excess of 400,000—an emphatic endorsement of ability in public service. The election was also a triumph for another great friend of the motion picture—Gov. Alfred E. Smith, who sponsored the Walker candidacy, and waged a great fight of his own for the adoption of an important group of constitutional amendments.

NEWS items of unusual significance are abundant this week. There is the resignation of E. A. Eschmann from First National, and the appointment of a Sales Committee, with Samuel Spring at the head, the other members being Ned Marin, Ned Depinet and A. W. Smith, Jr. Universal's distribution department has undergone complete change. Messrs. Marin and Jules Levy are succeeded by Lou Metzger and Earl Kramer, with a successor to Depinet still to be named.

FOX comes forward with still another important announcement which shows, clearly enough, that the company is embarking on the biggest production program in its history. With Winfield R. Sheehan at the Coast, things are humming in all directions. In addition to the group of David Belasco plays, other significant books and plays are announced this week. The program for 1926-7 is virtually settled now. A large number of players have been assigned to their roles, and everything is fast getting "set" under Mr. Sheehan's direction.

WE are greatly interested in the news of the expanding activities of Producers Distributing Corporation and the unification of the De Mille and Metropolitan studios at Hollywood under Cecil B. De Mille. He will have general supervision of the 1926-7 program of forty to fifty features. The appointment of William Sistrom as general manager of the combined studios will give Mr. De Mille greater freedom for the production of his own personally directed specials. P. D. C. has come along very rapidly and its further progress will be followed with great interest.

Senator James J. Walker, Mayor-Elect of New York City Being Congratulated By Richard Barthelmess, First National Star.

SAM RORK'S new picture, "Clothes Make the Pirate," is winning commendation all around. It should, for one reason because it is a distinct screen novelty, of which there are far too few. A producer who gives the screen a brand new type of subject performs a service second to none in the whole industry. Pictures are, of course, the life-blood of the business. New kinds of pictures are the prime essentials. So we say the release of a film like "Clothes Make the Pirate" deserves and should get special mention.

ELSEWHERE in this issue will be found a detailed story on the latest developments in the British film situation, which appears to be more feverish than ever before. The international picture situation is a very important thing; more so, we imagine, than some folk on this side of the water realize. But the well-informed understand its importance; and we are glad to contribute to a constructive settlement. William A. Johnston's recent editorial "Our Films and Europe" has attracted wide attention.

The Administrative Committee of the M. P. T. O. A. proposes cooperation and a business regime from now on. They are to be commended heartily for their wisdom. And we predict that, with this platform, and its honest observance, they will steadily enlist support all along the line.

GO AND GET IT

BILLY TUMMEL, assistant to Victor Schertzinger, found himself confronted by two difficult problems when his chief began shooting scenes for "The Golden Strain."

"I want you to get me the finest black mare in California," Schertzinger said to Tummel, "but that isn't all—I've got to have sixty women with long hair—and I don't mean wits. Now get out—I'm busy!"

"Busy!" Tummel echoed. "What do you think I'll be—trying to cover that assignment?"

"But moving picture directors must make things happen—and Billy was no exception.

"First, I'll get the horse," he decided, "for I'll probably need that—riding all over the county looking for women with long hair."

But this wasn't as easy as it seemed. This horse had to be a jim-dandy—fit for a lovely creature such as Dixie Denniston, as portrayed by dainty Madge Bellamy. Billy found thousands of automobiles, and a few ordinary looking horses, but at the end of the day he was still searching—and then Hobart Bosworth helped him out. Bosworth, who rides horseback every day, told Tummel of a friend in Beverly who had a mare he could borrow.

The mare was ideal—and Billy was overjoyed until he thought of sixty women—"all wearing long hair." Then he disappeared, and Schertzinger didn't see him for 24 hours. When he returned he said:

"All right, sir! I have sixty-eight women coming in tomorrow, for that ballroom scene—but I've worn out ten telephones and exhausted the resources of every casting director in Hollywood and Culver City. How's that?"

"Fine," said Schertzinger. "Now get me sixty men with old-fashioned haircuts!"

OFF FOR BIRMINGHAM

THE Pennsylvania station, New York City, saw an assemblage of stars, executives and technical people such as it rarely witnesses the other day, when the "Men of Steel" company departed to Birmingham, Ala., for six weeks on location in the iron mines and steel mills of the U. S. Steel corporation. Included in the party were Milton Sills, Doris Kenyon, Mae Allison, Claude Gillingwater, George Fawcett, and Victor McLaglen. Director George Archainbaud, Business Manager Fred Stanley and several other executives preceded the party to Birmingham to make the necessary arrangements.

FILMING UNDER CANVAS

JOHN LOWELL, L. Case Russell and Evangeline Russell, the family trio that has been responsible for several outstanding independent productions, are now travelling through the South with Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Wild West show, filming a picture under the working title, "On With the Show." George Terwilliger is directing, and Dave Gobbett presides at the camera. Jane Thomas has joined the troupe. The show is featuring the fact that it has a real, live movie company, director and all, to the benefit of the box-office. George Terwilliger, one of the most modest and soft-spoken of men, is introduced from the sawdust ring as a fire-breathing, rip-snorting move director. Miss Russell is cultivating the friendship of Babe, the largest elephant. She will work with Babe in several scenes, and is taking no changes on a misunderstanding.

THE CONTINENTAL TOUCH

NOW that the arrangement with P. A. Powers by which Eric von Stroheim will direct for Paramount, it is interesting to speculate on the possibilities of this. It would be intriguing in the extreme to see this brilliant master of the megaphone assigned to the direction of Pola Negri, who has been suitably directed only once or twice since her arrival on these shores. There would be the clash of temperaments, yes—but no more so than in a recent instance which is now history—and if the result were equally brilliant it would be well worth the fur that would fly. This, be it understood in passing, is not a rumor. Just an idle speculation. (This is not America's leading rumorous weekly).

NOT BOOSTING BERLIN

FROM R. C. Steuve, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Canton, Ohio, now touring Germany, comes the following post-card comment:

"Greetings from the land where they need improvements in the moving picture business. Only one hundred years behind us!"

Well, it might have been worse. What's a century or so nowadays with things scurrying along at the present lightning pace?

TOM, TOM, THE PIPER'S SON

ANYONE shouting "Tom" during the filming of "The Bad Man" would have collected a crowd rather than an individual. After being trampled upon in the rush a few times, Director J. G. Blystone resorted to all sorts of nicknames to avoid the collective "Tom," a singularly synonymous appellation (laff that off!), in this particular case. The principal "Toms" were: Tom Mix, Tom Wilson, Tom Kennedy and Tom Robinson. And we suppose they played on tom-toms after a dinner opened by a round of tomato soup, and the "tom" cats howled outside—but we must stop, before we descend to puns about p-tom-aine poisoning. Anyway, the four Toms weighed 768 pounds, in case you should want to know.

THE EAGLE SCREENS

WHEN "The Eagle" opens on Sunday at the Mark Strand theatre, New York City, the audience will include Rudolph Valentino, the star, who is coming East to see in person the reaction received by this picture. It promises much, according to those who have glimpsed it, and Clarence Brown is said to have done well with the Hans Kraely script. We hope so. It is no secret that much of Rudolph's future hinges on this picture. A smashing success right now would doubtless bring him back with a bang—which explains why he wants to be right on the ground when it opens in New York.

CONGRATULATIONS, DAVE!

DAVE BADER, who has been trouping about the country in connection with Universal's theatre parties for exhibitors, received one of those coveted home office positions last week, when he was notified of his promotion to Manager of Advertising Accessories for the same company. No more one-night stands for the present, and while Dave says he enjoyed the theatre parties immensely, the new appointment is just about right. Now just keep your eye on Universal accessories!

THEY WERE ALL THERE

LAST Saturday night (and Sunday morning) the third annual Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ball came off on schedule at the Hotel Astor, New York City. It was a great success from the standpoint of attendance; in fact, the crowd was too numerous for comfort. The entertainment bill was unanimously voted the best to date, more than 500 performers appearing on the program. Chorus and ensemble numbers from most of the big musical shows were included. The list of those who attended would be far too lengthy to print here, but a few were: Marcus Loew, Mae Murray, Hope Hampton, Dorothy Mackaill, James Kirkwood, Lila Lee, Walter Miller, Dagmar Godowsky, Edna Murphy, Johnny Hines, Allene Ray, Esther Ralston, Lois Moran, Ruth Stonehouse, Fanny Ward, Niles Welch, Major Alexander Grau and Nicholas Kaufman of the UFA, and others "too numerous to mention."

LUBITSCH—AMERICAN

FIRST papers have been taken out by Ernst Lubitsch, the director, and he is looking forward to the time when he will be officially certified as a full-fledged American. He and Mrs. Lubitsch were introduced to President Coolidge at the White House recently, and the Chief Executive seemed pleased to hear of Lubitsch's eagerness in this direction—which, incidentally, should set at rest rumors that he is to return to Europe.

FORGING AHEAD

IT IS always both interesting and gratifying to watch the progress of those whose industry and ingenuity warrant it. The other day, at the Tec-Art studio, we watched F. Herrick-Herrick directing Elinor King in a few scenes for "Keep It Up," a Davis release. Both have well earned the success that seems to be coming their way. Herrick-Herrick has risen from cameraman to industrial producer, to short subjects and now to his first feature. Miss King has risen from bits to her first starring role, and excellent things are expected of her. The releasing company regards her as something of a "find," and her blonde beauty may be looked forward to in several other productions. All told, "Keep It Up" will represent a well-earned advancement for both producer-director and star.

SSSSSSSH!

ROLAND WEST is setting a new precedent in the production of mystery plays in his arrangements for "The Bat." There will be a dozen well-known players, but their names will be kept secret and they will not see each other except when they appear together in scenes. The place of production, and date filming commences, and so on, will not be revealed. The scenarist, Julian Josephson, has taken oath on a stack of Studio Directories that he will not reveal the story, which will be changed enough from the stage play to keep everyone guessing.

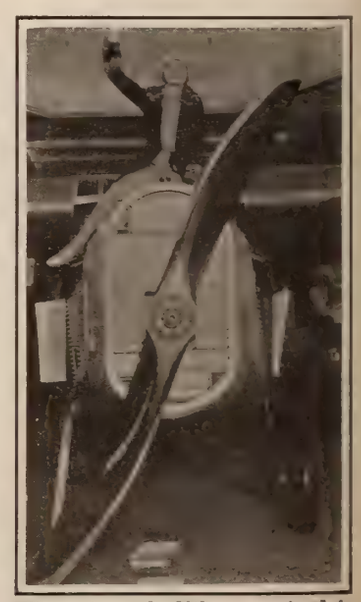
A charming camera study of Constance Bennett, one of the recent additions to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer group of players, appearing as Sally in "Sally, Irene and Mary."

MIXING IN REAL ESTATE

TOM MIX is getting ready to move, and Doug Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin are going to have a new neighbor. Tom has decided to settle down in the Beverly Hills section, and in consideration of the sum of two hundred thousand dollars has come into possession of the beautiful Fred Porter estate. Tom, accompanied by Mrs. Mix and little Thomasina will move in just as soon as the painters and decorators clear out. The ranch at Mixville will not be given up, however, and we venture the suspicion that Tom won't be able to stay away from the ranch and Tony and all the rest of the stock altogether.

THE LONE STAR

ONLY one of the approving asterisks popped out of the bag this week at the National Board of Review. The feature thus favored is listed as Universal's "His People," with Rudolph Schildkraut, which is presumably what is now known at "Proud Hearts." This picture received its Broadway baptism last Sunday, and well warrants the National Board's stamp of approval.



Yola d'Avril, appearing in Educational-Christie comedies, adopts the Felix the Cat beauty patch as an adornment of her beauty (as though any were needed!)

Seider Business Manager of M.P.T.O.A; Harmony Seen

Conferences Held With Hays on Contract Revision

A NEW era in exhibitor organization affairs, and in exhibitor-producer relations, is foreshadowed this week, with the appointment of Joseph M. Seider, President of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey, as Business Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Seider's appointment was announced in an official statement by A. Julian Brylawski, of Washingtonn, D. C., Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Administrative Committee, which is composed of the following other members: Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh; M. E. Comerford, of Scranton, Pa.; Nathan Yamins, of Fall River, Mass.; and Jake Wells, of Richmond, Va.

Together with R. F. Woodhull, President of the organization; Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Board; L. M. Sagal, Treasurer, and Mr. Seider, the Committee held a series of meetings in New York extending from Wednesday to Saturday of last week. They took up an intensive study of the general situation which confronts the industry at this time.

Mr. Seider was engaged as Business Manager, and new and larger quarters for the organization are being established at 745 Seventh avenue, New York City.

The significance of the Seider appointment was made evident in the official Brylawski statement which said:

"Mr. Seider will immediately proceed with the organization of a Service Bureau for exhibitors and take up in a large way the conduct of the affairs of the organization in conjunction with the National President and the Administrative Committee which functions for the Board of Directors.

"The Administrative Committee and Mr. Seider have had a series of conferences with Mr. Will H. Hays, President of the M. P. P. D. A., with a view of advancing the general conditions. Progress was made on the question of a more equitable contract. Several suggestions for the perfection of the Arbitration situation have been advanced and most cordially received. The further co-operation of the two great branches of the motion picture industry holds forth great promise for real advancement in solving many of the vexatious problems facing the industry."

Mr. Seider declined to issue a statement for publication, but it is know that he is proceeding with the utmost energy to tackle the big task that is now his.

In response to a request from MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Sydney Cohen made this statement: "It is needless to say that it is with the greatest pleasure that I welcome the appointment of my associate on the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Joseph M. Seider, to the office of Business Manager of the National organization. Mr. Seider's ability is so unquestioned as to be that 'good wine that needs no bush.' His acquisition to our ranks of National active workers in this new capacity will mean relief from detail work for those of the Board of Directors who have been daily rendering service throughout the country; leaving them freer to co-operate with Mr. Seider and President Woodhull in the great work—legislative and constructive—confronting our National organization.

"I feel confident that the aid and support of all independent forces will be freely forthcoming to help Mr. Seider to that real success which can only come as a result of whole-hearted united action."

The Seider appointment is regarded by close observers as having a two-edged significance: first, regarding the internal situation in the M. P. T. O. A.; and second, the relations of the M. P. T. O. A. with the Hays organization.

It is, of course, a matter of common knowledge that affairs in the M. P. T. O. A. have not been running smoothly for some months. The Allied States participated actively for some time after Milwaukee but then virtually withdrew from participation after the famous Board of Directors' meeting at Detroit in October.

While no statement in confirmation could be obtained, it appeared probable that the appointment of Mr. Seider was the outward expression of distinct moves for harmony in the National organization. Or, to put it another way, observers pointed out that Mr. Seider's appointment would hardly have been made by the Administrative Committee without definite assurance that he would be acceptable to Michigan, Minnesota, Illinois, Texas, and the other members of the Allied group.

Joseph M. Seider, who has been named business manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

If this assumption is correct, an entirely new deal in the internal exhibitor situation has come about.

Mr. Seider has forged rapidly to the front as an exhibitor leader in a surprisingly short period. He succeeded R. F. Woodhull as head of the New Jersey organization, and his work there attracted national attention. He quickly entered the inner circle of the National organization, and at Milwaukee handled the extremely important report on arbitration and contract matters, with the result that he was made Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee.

Revision of the contract and reform of the arbitration situation then became Mr. Seider's study. He wrote several articles for the trade papers in which he urged reforms on specific points. His activity along this line culminated in his drawing up a new contract and arbitration rules, which won wide attention in many quarters.

It was this campaign which brought Mr. Seider definitely out into the limelight and paved the way for his appointment to the important post of Business Manager of the M. P. T. O. A.

While he is known as a fighter, Mr. Seider, in the opinion of those "in the know," is acceptable to all leading factions, and it will not be surprising to find within a compara-

New Sales Directors Appointed by Universal

UNIVERSAL this week announced the appointment of two sales directors to replace Ned Marin and Jules Levy, resigned. The successor to Ned Depinet, who resigned his management of Unicersal's southern sales territory, has not yet been appointed.

Earl Kramer, who has been manager of Universal's Buffalo exchange for a number of years, has been given charge of the eastern sales territory, over which Levy presided. Kramer is now in New York and will assume his duties immediately.

Lou Metzger, who is well known as the manager of Universal's Complete Service Plan and who has been identified with the Universal organization both in its exchanges and in its Home Office, has been named by Mr. Laemmle to supervise the western sales territory, formerly handlel by Ned Marin.

The Complete Service plan will be turned over to Fred J. McConnell, Universal Short Product manager, who will take charge of this important branch of Universal's product in connection with his other work.

DeMille Plans Consolidated

Metropolitan And Culver City Studios Amalgamated—To Make 50 Productions

DETAILS of the consolidation of the Metropolitan Pictures Corporation studios with the Cecil B. DeMille pla at Culver City, negotiations for which have been under way for some time, were completed this week in Los Angeles. The final arrangements were made shortly following the arrival on the coast of John C. Flinn general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, and president of Metropolitan Pictures.

The merger is said to place under DeMille's supervision the most extensive producing machinery in all Los Angeles. Under the arrangement he will supervise the production of from forty to fifty features for release during 1926–27 by Producers Distributing Corporation.

William Sistrom, general manager of the Metropolitan Studios, will assume the general management of the consolidated organization.

Fred Kley, heretofore general manager of the De Mille Studios, has been appointed personal representative of De Mille in the field of distribution. The executive committee of Metropolitan Pictures Corporation consisting of Messrs. Charles and Al Christie and John C. Flinn, will extend its business to embrace all the activities of the combined studios.

Cecil De Mille's name will be withdrawn from all productions excepting those which he personally directs, as soon as the 1925-26 schedule of pictures are completed. This arrangement will eliminate the confusion in the public mind caused by De Mille's name appearing on both productions made under his supervision and those made under his personal direction. De Mille's present plans call for three personally directed productions.

New Canada Music Association

Organization Launched to Combat Tax to Holders of Musical Copyright

A NEW musical association has been launched in Canada with headquarters in Toronto as a protective measure against the music tax and to combat as far as possible the activities of the Canadian Performing Right Society Limited. The new body has taken the name of The Musical Amusement Association.

As its first move following organization, the new association has issued an invitation to become members to all Canada theatre proprietors, managers of annual exhibitions, military and other bands, orchestra leaders, choir leaders and other persons interested in public performances.

Lieutenant Colonel John Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors Association of Canada is the moving spirit of the new organization, which has its headquarters in the Metropolitan Building, Toronto. The executives in charge of activities include, Lawrence Solman, Royal Alexander Theatre; John Arthur, Hippodrome Theatre; Jerry Shea, Shea's Theatre; Captain W. M. Plunkett, musical producer; D. C. Ross, Canadian National Exhibition; J. C. Brady, Madison Theatre, and R. K. Hunt, King Edward Hotel.

The announced purpose of the organization is to see that the musical organizations of Canada get a square deal from the foreign and domestic holders of musical copyright and their legal representatives. According to the announcement, it is possible the right of musical copyright holders to demand a yearly license fee from all those who play music in public for profit may be contested in the courts.

tively short time that the M. P. T. O. A. is again presenting a united front.

No less important are the exhibitor-producer relations which assume a new phase by reason of the Seider appointment and the conferences with Mr. Hays as outlined in the Brylawski statement above. An interesting sidelight is the fact that Messrs. Seider and Hays had never met until last week.

It is expected that the negotiations now in progress between the Hays organization and the M. P. T. O. A. on contract and arbitration will lead to definite results acceptable to both sides.

Even more important than these detailed matters, is the inauguration of an era of co-operation between the M. P. T. O. A. and the Hays organization which observers see in the events of the past week. This co-operation will probably come about on questions affecting the whole industry in its relation with the public. Adjustment of trade differences, so far as possible, will also be taken up, it is believed, and if these indications are correct, solutions of problems will be sought at the council table instead of through exhibitor-producer warfare.

New Philadelphia Exchange to Handle Weiss Product

The Artclass Film Exchange, Inc., operated by Gus Krug, which is to handle the Southern New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania territory is now open for active business according to word received from Krug by Louis Weiss, managing director of Weiss Brother's Artclass Pictures Corp. The exchange will handle the full Artclass program and also the Clarion Photoplays, Inc., line-up of eight five-reel Western Gems featuring Leo Maloney with his horse Senator and his dog, Bullet. A full line of accessories and prints has been received.

F.P.L. Denies Monopoly Charge of Trade Commission

Brief Brands Action As Lurid Melodrama

MOTION picture producers, as manufacturers, have a right to sell their products "directly to the consumer without the interposition of either wholesale or retail middlemen," it is declared in a brief filed with the Federal Trade Commission this week by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in answer to the brief recently filed by the commission's counsel in which the issuance of an order requiring the respondents in the case to separate their exhibiting activities from those of production and distribution and the cessation of block booking was asked.

Some six hundred printed pages are required to set forth the company's statement of the case and their arguments in refutation of the commission's counsel's charges, which are characterized as a lurid melodrama spun by counsel for the commission. Emphatic denial of the existence of any monopoly, made impossible, it is declared, by furious competitive conditions, is contained in the brief, together with defenses of the practices assailed by the Government.

The charges of the commission cannot be sustained, it is declared, because the respondents in the case are not exercising a monopoly and have no prospect of doing so. On the contrary, it is shown, Famous-Players produces only about one-eighth of the total motion pictures brought out in this country, destributes about the same percentage, and is interested in less than one per cent of the motion picture theatres, which includes about one-fifteenth of the so-called "key city first runs."

"While the brief of commission's counsel contains constant references to the control and domination of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and its size," it is charged, "neither the examiner nor commission's counsel ever directly gave the commission any idea of the size of competitors or of the size of the industry as a whole. Indeed they vigorously suppressed all efforts on the part of respondents' counsel to show these facts after the respondent had been compelled to produce figures showing their own size and growth."

The same conditions apply to the control of star actors, it is asserted, the respondents never having in their employ more than one-third of the stars "of any class, character, sex or description." On the contrary, eleven other producing-distributing organizations and the stars in their employ are named, and it is declared that "most of these companies, directly or by means of subsidiary corporations, also distribute pictures produced by others.

"There are about 100 smaller producers who distribute their product through at least 40 State-rights distributing organizations, each of which maintains from one to ten exchange offices in different parts of the country.

"The examiner seeks to create the impression that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is an organization of tremendous size, which has undergone tremendous growth since 1918. He finds that its outstanding common and preferred stock has doubled since 1918; that its surplus has increased ten fold; that it now pays twice as much out in dividends as it did formerly; that its profits in the last four years have increased 33 1-3 per cent; that the value of its physical equipment, including land and buildings, has increased forty-fold between 1917 and 1923, and its tangible assets have trebled between 1918 and 1923. This statement, standing as it does in a vacuum, is worthless. What have its competitors been doing? The mere and absolute size of the respondent constitutes no violation of either the Sherman act or Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission act."

The brief denies that the United Artists had difficulty in finding a satisfactory market for their pictures because of control of first-run houses by Famous Players, and calls attention to the fact that statements to this effect were made only by Mary Pickford, that the sales representatives of her organization contradicted her and that she, herself, finally admitted that she must have been misinformed. Naturally, it is declared, the organization would give preference to its own pictures, all other things being equal. But, it is asserted, "while we insist that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has the absolute legal right to devote all of the time of all of its theaters to the showing of its own pictures, the fact is that the great majority of the time of the theaters in which it has an interest has been taken up in the exhibition of the product of its competitors."

The commission has no more right to call upon the respondents to divest themselves of their exhibiting facilities than it has to call upon any manufacturer to discontinue the operation of retail establishments through which his product is sold to the public, it is intimated in the brief, in discussing the arguments of the commission's counsel in favor of separation of producing and exhibiting activities. "A motion picture producer like any other manufacturer, may lawfully sell his product directly to the ultimate consumer and may lawfully own the facilities, that is, theaters, necessary for such sale," it is contended.

Such a segregation would revolutionize the motion picture industry, and would require the respondents to divest themselves of property valued at $100,000,000, but such an order, it is pointed out, "would require like action against substantially every one of the larger and better known producers and distributors, the undisputed evidence being that integration of exhibition with production and distribution has been a common practice from the very inception of the industry.

Oral argument, covering the questions raised in the commission's counsel's brief, will be held November 24 and 25. In view of the determined fight which has been waged by the respondents, the indications are that if the commission's decision upholds the charges the case will be carried to the courts and that the United States Supreme Court eventually will be asked to pass upon the powers of the commission arbitrarily to label an organization monopolistic and order it to divest itself of property acquired in the course of business.

The Supreme Court's decision in the Eastman Kodak Company case, soon to be heard, would undoubtedly serve as a precedent should the Famous Players case go to the courts on an order by the commission ordering the disposition of theaters. In that respect the two cases would be very similar. In the Eastman case, the commission ordered the company to dispose of its three laboratories, which were kept idle under an agreement with independent laboratories whereby the independents were to use American-made film exclusively.

The circuit court of appeals held that the Federal Trade Commission was not empowered by law to order a citizen to dispose of property acquired in the course of business, and the commission appealed to the Supreme Court.

Meighan Gives Jewish Fund $1,000

ADOLPH ZUKOR, chairman of the Motion Picture Division in the $4,000,000 drive being made by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies presided at a meeting during the week of his sub-committees to discuss plans for raising the quota assigned to the division.

Zukor's initial announcement to his fellow leaders was of a $1,000 contribution made by Thomas Meighan, an actor not of the Jewish faith. Meighan also offered to donate his services in any way.

A number of addresses were made in addition to that of Mr. Zukor, the other speakers being Maurice Goodman, representing the attorneys; J. P. Muller for the film salesmen; A. Weinberg for the screen advertisers; Julius Tannen for the actors, and J. B. Basson for the motion picture operators.

Following the meeting a motion picture was shown called "Human Dividends, which depicted the work of the 91 charities cared for by the Federation.

Eschmann Resigns; Sales Committee Formed by First National

E. A. ESCHMANN, for several years General Manager of Distribution for First National Pictures, Inc., has resigned to take effect December 1st. He becomes assistant to Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists, it is announced.

Ned Marin and Ned Depinet has joined First National and with A. W. Smith, Jr. will comprise a sales committee to function under the supervision of General Manager Richard A. Rowland and Samuel Spring, Secretary-Treasurer of the company. It is understood that Mr. Spring will act as chairman of the Sales Committee.

Both Mr. Marin and Mr. Depinet have been members of the Sales Committee of the Universal Company. Prior to his association with Universal, Mr. Marin was with Famous-Players and later with Distinctive. He moved to Universal at the time Al Lichtman took charge of the sales for that company. Mr. Depinet is particularly well known in Southern districts, where he has been located during most of his motion picture career.

As first assistant to Mr. Eschmann during the past two years, Mr. Smith has come to be recognized as one of the most capable and aggressive of sales executives. His work has been particularly notable in the handling of First National's specials which have been placed directly under his supervision.

Executives of First National expressed keen regret at Mr. Eschmann's resignation in view of the many successful policies he has instituted since his association with that company. Before becoming General Manager of Distribution for First National, Mr. Eschmann occupied a similar position with Pathe.

Clean Pictures Win Quiz Vote

S. F. Paper Questionnaire Reveals Strong Demand for Good, Wholesome Productions

WHAT does the public want in motion pictures?

That question is as old as the industry itself, yet it is one in which producers, distributors and exhibitors remain vitally concerned.

Seeking an answer to the question, the San Francisco Call and Post canvassed the residents of Central California. Analyzing the replies from motion picture fans, the Call made these two important deductions:

"The first — and most important to our mind—is that the public apparently desires clean, wholesome pictures, rather than erotic sex or problem productions.

"Second in importance from the producers standpoint is one indication that this particular portion of the playgoing public of the nation prefers pageantry, novelty and super westerns to all other forms of cinema expression."

Continuing in its analysis of the survey, the Call and Post said:

"Full length comedy pictures do not seem to have made as tremendous an appeal as they have been popularly supposed to do, only Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman' managing to get in 'The Best Ten' list and 'Beggar on Horseback' into the honorable mention list—the latter undoubtedly by reason of its extremely bizarre treatment.

"The surprises of the contest were the heavy votes polled by 'The Lost World,' Rothacker's fantastic adaptation of Sir Conan Doyle's novel based upon prehistoric life; 'Peter Pan,' Herbert Brenon's exquisite production of the Barrie masterpiece; 'Greed,' Von Stroheim's gripping treatment of the Norris magnum opus, 'McTeague,' 'Grass,' the marvelous story of the pilgrimage of the central Persian tribe of Bakhtiari over the Ural mountains."

The "Best Ten" pictures in order of their popularity with contributors to the Call's survey follow:

"The Ten Commandments," The Pony Express," "Don Q," "The Iron Horse," "The Thief of Bagdad," "The Lost World," "Janice Meredith," 'The Freshman," "Peter Pan," and "The Unholy Three."

Pictures receiving honorable mention included, in the order of their popularity:

"Madame Sans Gene," "Zander," "The Vanishing American," "Sally," "The Lady," "Phantom of the Opera," "So Big," "The Thundering Herd," "Greed," "The Street of Forgotten Men," "The Sea Hawk," "The Midshipman," "Grass," "Romola," "Beggar on Horseback," "Soul Fire" and "Classmates."

The Call is conducting a re-canvas "with a view of determining that person (or those persons) whose choices came closest to 'the will of the majority.'"

The managers made a compromise offer of a $3 weekly increase. Members of the Eastman theatre orchestra were not involved in the discussions.

New Circuit Deals Are Consummated

Many Transactions Are Reported Completed, While Rumor Has Numerous Houses Ready to Change Hands

RUMORS seem to be flying thicker and faster as the weeks go by regarding new theatre chains, additions to existing chains and individual purchases. That most of these rumors develop into actual facts is shown by the number of deals consummated each week. This week is no exception. It shows an abundance of rumors and a large number of completed transactions.

Out in Cleveland they have the rumor that Warner Brothers are dickering for the chain of first run neighborhood houses known as the Ohio Amusement Company. There are some ten theatres included, all of them prominent ones. It is definitely known that the Ohio Amusement Company is willing to sell, and that there is ample basis for the rumor is shown by the fact that during the week Harry Warner, Sam Morris and Meyer Lesser Warner executives, arrived in Cleveland. Warners recently acquired the Circle theatre of Cleveland as their local first run outlet.

The Comerford Amusement Company has recently acquired the Hudson Theatre, Hudson, Pa.; the Lincoln Theatre, Plains, Pa., and the Strand Theatre, Swoyersville, Pa., from M. Matchutas; also the Grand Theatre, Hazelton, Pa., from Chris Weber. Comerford took the Matchutas houses as of November 1st and the Grand in Hazelton will be taken over as of December 1st.

In connection with the financing of the new Metropolitan Theatre recently opened in Boston records of the company which handled the financing show 5,700 holders of first mortgage bonds of the playhouse. These bond holders are located in every state in the Union and many are held in foreign countries.

Ground will be broken February 1, 1926, for the new theatre which will be built in Buffalo at 608-618 Main street by Joseph and David H. Coplon and which will be leased by the Fox Film company and associates. The latter are Mike Comerford of Scranton and Edward M. Fay of Providence. The lease is said to be the largest ever made, a sum approximating $3,000,000 being made. Present plans call for 4,000 seats with pictures and vaudeville as the policy. Only one parcel of land separates the contemplated Fox house from that of the proposed $2,000,000 Metropolitan to be erected by Famous Players-Balaban & Katz on property at 622 Main street on property owned by Michael Shea. Shea's new $2,000,000 Buffalo is now nearing completion just a few steps further at 646 Main street.

According to a letter which is being prepared by a committee formed to negotiate a sale of the Century and Parkway Theatres, Baltimore, the stockholders of the Century Theatre Company operating the houses, who receive copies, will be asked to deposit their stock with the Fidelity Trust Company, Baltimore, Md., indorsed in blank.

The letter says that negotiations have been going on for the past eighteen months with various parties for the sale of the two theatres; they believe a large film producing company may build another competitive theatre in this city.

A new theatre chain is reported about to be launched by The Kehrlein Company in Oakland, California. It is said it will comprise six community houses, of which the first will be on Telegraph avenue near 48th street in the Claremont district. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,800 and will be known as the Claremont Kinema.

From San Francisco comes word of a merger of the Golden State Theatre Realty Corporation of Northern California owning 33 houses, and the Far West Theatres operating 36 houses. The new organization is known as the North American Theatres Corporation, with Harry C. Young, Jr., as vice-president and general manager, and Cecil B. De Mille as director.

A. H. Blank has closed a deal for the purchase of seven Iowa theatres, four in Waterloo, two in Cedar Rapids and one in Vinton. A. J. Drebold and Mike Ford have been operating the houses in the past.

Warner Bros. have taken over and opened two more theatres in the last few weeks. The well known State Theatre, on Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, became Warners State the night of October 19th, when the producing company took formal possession. The Orpheum, on State street in the Loop district of Chicago, became Warners Orpheum last Sunday night.

British Quota Plan Is Formulated

Trade Agrees on One to Ten Basis in Beginning, With Increase Hoped For Later

TEN per cent. of the films distributed and exhibited in England will be required to be of British origin, if the Government approves and puts into operation the plan finally agreed upon by the joint committee of producers, distributors and exhibitors. A further increase later on in the British quota is hoped for, if production in the United Kingdom thrives as exponents of the plan contend.

The proposed plan provides for the one to ten ratio, to become effective in January, 1927, gradually increasing to one to four by 1929. The recommendation, however, is that this be left sufficiently optional so that British theatres will not suffer for lack of product in case domestic production does not prove equal to meeting this ratio. In other words, the ratio will be flexible enough to cover whatever British production develops, within the limits set, but with a loophole in case production does not come up to the level anticipated.

The quota would apply both to exhibitors and to distributors, or renters. One film in ten shown in a British theatre would be required to be of domestic origin, and one film in ten on the renter's program would have to meet the same requirement, at the beginning. Under the terms of the quota plan, British films not meeting a certain standard of quality would not be given the protection of the quota requirement; that is, it would not be counted as part of the required ten per cent.

An important feature of the plan, from the American point of view, is that to pass muster under the act a film must be British in finance, organization and theme. A picture made in England by an American company will not be construed as a British film.

It is obvious that a film, to come under the quota, must be thoroughly British in ideals and tone, and in that respect the plan aims to guard against one of the principal causes of complaint, the disappearance of British thought from the screen.

British facilities at the present time could scarcely be expected to meet the one to ten ratio, much less the one to four, and a considerable amount of expansion in every direction will be necessary before this can be brought about.

It should be borne in mind that the plan, at the moment, is a proposal from the leading factions ofthe British trade, and that, as far as can be learned, the Government has not signified its attitude in the matter. It has, however, indicated its willingness to help as far as practicable, and its attitude will doubtless reflect its opinion of the workability of the plan and the reaction toward it among the rank and file of British exhibitors, who are the ones most directly affected.

One expert has estimated that 60 pictures would be produced during the first year of the quota's operation. This would allow a total of 600 features for the year, if the entire 60 met with the approval of the Board of Trade as to quality.

The plan also deals with block booking in stringent fashion. Starting in January, 1926, all films must pass the censor board, and must be released within six months from the date they are booked. This, it is believed, would do away with the present situation under which product and play dates are tied up for years in advance.

According to the New York Times, the president of the Board of Trade has announced that financial assistance from the Government will come only when the trade has agreed on a clearly defined plan.

Meanwhile, the British trade press continues to devote much space and discussion to this pressing situation. Speaking of the American releasing situation in respect to British films, The Film Renter and Moving

Famous Signs Von Stroheim; Will Both Produce and Act

JESSE L. LASKY announces that, through arrangement with P. A. Powers, he has signed Eric Von Stroheim to produce and act in a series of Paramount pictures.

"I have looked upon Mr. Von Stroheim as one of the outstanding figures of the screen, not only as a producer, but also as a character actor of subtlety and intelligence," said Mr. Lasky. "As the man who produced 'The Merry Widow' I think he has established himself as a director who has brought a great deal to the motion picture art, so I am particularly happy that he will start his first Paramount picture early in February. We are now considering several well known theatrical properties as Mr. Von Stroheim's first picture for Paramount, and we are making arrangements to have one of the best known Paramount stars appear with him on the screen. This picture will be the first Mr. Von Stroheim has acted in since he created a sensation in 'Foolish Wives.'

"Everyone of the Von Stroheim-Paramount productions will have not only the active cooperation of the producing executives of the Lasky studio, but in making these pictures Mr. Von Stroheim will have back of him all of the resources of the Famous Players-Lasky organization. Thus in stories, casting and all the other multitudinous details of production Mr. Von Stroheim will have the very best available."

Statement Decries False Promises

Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn, of Columbia, Declare Producers Methods are Responsible for Existing Conditions

IN a statement, issued this week by Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn, president and treasurer respectively of Columbia Pictures, these producers outline a definite indictment of broken promises and bad product, which they allege, have tended in the past year to destroy a market for worthy effort, and hold that these reasons are responsible for the present chaotic conditions which, they say, exist at present in the industry. The statement, in part, follows:

"The present chaotic conditions in the motion picture industry are due to the broken promises of producers. Never in the history of motion pictures has such a situation confronted the exhibitors as at the tail end of the 1925-1926 season, and the producers are, in a large measure, entirely to blame for a situation which has forced many exhibitors into a position where they feel unable to depend on, and have an entire lack of confidence in, the promises of producers to deliver the number of pictures they promised to produce at the beginning of the current year.

"The overzealous and avaricious attitude on the part of some of the producing organizations at the beginning of the season, in announcing a formidable production program, has been responsible for lulling a great many exhibitors into a sense of confidence and false security which has been ruthlessly destroyed in many cases before half the season was over, by the retrenchment on the part of producers. Embellished announcements of tremendous production programs, which have later been cut down by as much as 50 per cent, in some instances, has wrought havoc among the exhibitors dependent upon these companies for their play dates.

"That the producers have learned the error of their ways is evidenced by the fact that announcements have already been made by many of the companies that they will not announce as many pictures for production for the coming year as they did at the beginning of the present season. They have come to realize that promising to throw on the market more pictures than can possibly be consumed has brought about a condition whereby not only the producers income has considerably suffered but the returns of the exhibitors has also been materially curtailed, by reason of forcing the exhibitor to sign up for more pictures than he needed in order to get a few leaders among exhibitors to create a demand for production that they only hoped to make.

"In this is the crux of the whole situation. Instead of offering fair competition among all the large motion picture producing concerns, they adopted this method of securing an outlet for product that common sense should have told them would mean flooding the market with surplus product.

"Supply and demand must govern every business and the picture industry is no different to any other industry and this is the time for producers to ponder over the conditions as they were this year and realize that they must be conservative in their estimate of productions to be made in future. Once they have announced the number of pictures they should go through. The time to retrench is at the beginning of, not in the middle of, or at the end of the season.

"The spirit of the fair play must be more evident next year than ever before as the unnatural and unhealthy competition which was prevalent this year has forced upon many producers the conclusion that less pictures of a better calibre will bring in more revenue to the exhibitor and more revenue to the producer—the public demand for better pictures has been blazoned forth in the newspapers and it behooves the producer to read the handwriting on the wall and get out of the system of machine-made pictures and produce less pictures of better quality."

Sheehan Lines Up Fox Productions

General Manager on Coast to Launch Imposing Array of Stage Successes and Leading Novels for Next Season

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, Vice-President and General Manager of Fox Film Corporation is in Los Angeles and will remain there for the next two months lining up product and preparing to properly launch the production program of the company for the 1926-27 season. His first announcement reveals an impressive list of stage successes and novels whose screen rights have been secured by Fox. The policy of the Fox studio, according to Mr. Sheehan, will be to produce this list of plays and novels during the next twelve months.

Last week it was announced that Fox had obtained rights to six of the David Belasco stage productions. They are, "The Auctioneer," "The Grand Army Man," "The Return of Peter Grimm," "The Lily," "The Comedian" and "The Music Master." Fox also has the rights to "What Price Glory" and "Cradle Snatchers," two remarkly successful Broadway stage productions. There are also to be produced the three John Golden stage successes, "Pigs," "Going Crooked" and "Seventh Heaven."

On top of all these comes the announcement that Fox has now obtained screen rights to the inimitable Charles Hoyt farces that set the world to laughing two decades ago. These Hoyt plays are, "A Trip to Chinatown," "A Milk White Flag," "A Black Sheep," "A Day and a Knight," "A Hole in the Ground," "A Runaway Colt," "A Rag Baby," "A Brass Monkey," "A Dog in the Manger" and "A Temperance Town."

Similar successes have been obtained in the literary market, among the novels secured being A. S. M. Hutchinson's "One Increasing Purpose," "Down to Earth," by Julius Perutz, a leading Vienna author; "Frozen Justice," by Ejnar Mikkelson, a novel of Alaska to be staged by John Ford, and "Married Life," by Ralph Straus. Another attraction of the program will be an intimate drama of Napoleon Bonaparte and the Empress Josephine. This is an original story by Benjamin Glazer.

In addition to making preparations for the next season, Mr. Sheehan has speeded up production on the remaining pictures for the current season and has had casting director James Ryan sign up a number of stars to appear in them. Among the galaxy of stars and well known players who will be seen in Fox December and January releases are Betty Compson, Matt Moore, Clara Bow, Bert Lytell, Vivian Oakland, Earle Williams, Nigel De Brullier, Frank Keenan, Huntley Gordon, Herbert Rawlinson, Vera Lewis, Grant Withers, Stanton Heck, Reed Howes, Will Walling, Walter Pidgeon, Rose Blossom, Charles Lane, Roy Atwill, Francis Mac Donald, Kathleen Myers, Nina Romona, Gladys Brockwell, Warner Oland, John Oatrick, Oliver Hardy, Jacques Rollens, Gustave Van Seyferitz, Carolynne Snowden, Frank Currier and Virginia Madison.

These players will be distributed in leading and supporting roles in such productions as "The First Year," which Frank Borzage is directing; "The Peacemaker," a Buck Jones starring vehicle with W. S. Van Dyke directing; "The Golden Butterfly," directed by John Griffith Wray; "Daybreak," a Rowland V. Lee production; "Palace of Pleasure," which Emmett Flynn will direct, and the modern sequence of "The Ancient Mariner," which Chester Bennett will supervise.

Educators Praise Producers

National Association of Education Officials Adopt Resolution in Convention

RECOMMENDING that other great industries emulate the motion picture industry in providing the most improved conditions for the education and care of children, the National Association of Compulsory Education Officials, one of the most powerful of all educational bodies, in its recent convention in Duluth, Minn., adopted a resolution giving high praise to motion picture producers.

The resolution was adopted after the Los Angeles Board of Education, represented by its director of Child Welfare, Professor Raymond B. Dunlap, reported to the body just what methods obtained in the motion picture studios for educating and caring for children used in pictures.

The association also commended Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., for establishing "Saturday Morning Movies" for boys and girls. The association recommended that teachers and parents give thorough support to these programs wherever they are shown. The resolution is as follows:

WHEREAS, The National Association of Compulsory Education Officials, in convention assembled, has heard the report of the Los Angeles Board of Education, through its Director of Child Welfare, Professor Raymond B. Dunlap, describing the system established in the motion picture studios at Hollywood, California, for the education, care and welfare of children;

BE IT RESOLVED, That we commend and thank the Los Angeles Board of Education, Professor Dunlap and the motion picture industry for establishing and maintaining these satisfactory conditions, and we express the hope that wherever necessary other great industries obliged to employ children will emulate the motion picture industry in co-operation with the local Boards of Education in providing and maintaining the most improved conditions for the education and care of such children.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this Convention, recognizing that in every field of dramatic endeavor, the themes of plays are not generally offered for juvenile observation, and that the primary purpose of motion picture production is entertainment for adults, appreciates the action of Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in inaugurating "Saturday Morning Movies" with carefully selected programs for boys and girls; and commends this form of entertainment for the young people to all teachers, parents and guardians, individually or in groups as long as they are of moral and educational value.

Radio Mat Slides Will Aid Red Cross

The motion picture industry is again prepared to get behind the American Red Cross in the latter's annual Roll Call for members. The M.P.T.O.A. has addressed 17,000 radio mat slides carrying the message of the humanitarian organization to the screens throughout the United States.

This means of a screen bulletin on mat slides makes possible a simultaneous showing that could hardly be achieved in any other way. The slides are made by the Radio Mat Slide Company and afford a new method for national publicity and public service. As the announcements are unbreakable and non-inflammable they are mailed like a letter.

Musicians of Bellingham and Washington Walk Out

A walkout of all theatre musicians in Bellingham, Washington, went into effect late in October, when differences between the union of that city and Fred B. Walton of the Bellingham Theatres, Inc., failed to lend themselves to settlement.

The strike was called by William Douglas, business manager of the musicians' unions throughout the state of Washington, when Mr. Walton refused to hire two separate orchestras to play at the American and Grand Theatres. The present arrangement has been to have an orchestra at the American for two days each week for vaudeville, and then move that same orchestra to the Grand for the remainder of the week for pictures and road shows, using only an organist at the American. The musicians demanded two complete orchestras, paid for full time at each house.

W. C. Fields Signs With Paramount

Tom Geraghty, now supervisor of the Thomas Meighan productions, is at work on a story that has been written for Fields by a nationally known humorist and when this story is ready to go into production Fields will be given a complete comedy unit of gag men and technical men that should make his pictures unique among comedies.

Believe Removal of Tax on Admissions Up to $1 Will Be Recommended

THAT the Ways and Means Committee will include recommendations for removal of taxes on admissions up to and including $1 in the tax reduction program to be urged on Congress, is the growing belief of observers in Washington. There is a possibility that the Committee may carry the reduction further and exempt $1.25 and $1.50 admissions to take care of baseball and vaudeville admissions. However, such action is considered doubtful.

The report of the Committee will be ready by December 7, according to Chairman Green. The reductions will range from $300,000,000, the amount recommended by Secretary Mellon, to $500,000,000, the highest amount suggested by members of the Committee, several of whom believe that the reductions can be increased over the figure set by Secretary Mellon.

It is rather generally felt that the capital stock tax will be repealed and that the Corporation income tax will be reduced ten per cent.

Theatre Owners of N. J. Meet

Board of Directors Have Session at Camden; Kelly Case Is Discussed

AT a meeting of the Board of Directors of the New Jersey M. P. T. O. A. on Thursday of last week at the Walt Whitman hotel in Camden, New Jersey, one of the principal topics under discussion was the suit which E. Thornton Kelly is about to institute in the Equity Court of the State of New Jersey. This case, arising out of a plea for relief because of Kelly's inability to obtain play dates within a reasonable time after the pictures for which he had contracted had been released, engaged the attention of the Board for a matter of two hours.

This, the fourth regular session since the Asbury Park convention, was opened by Sidney Samuelson, Chairman of the Board, and after routine matters had been disposed of, the attention of the board was claimed by the report of the President Joseph M. Seider, which included a review of the activities of the organization in the political campaign in New Jersey and an analysis of the possible results.

In line with the campaign laid out at the last national convention reports were made on several matters. For one, that of a reduction of the charge for light and power, which was handled by a sub-committee consisting of Messrs. Unger and Hildinger who reported progress with a considerable saving of revenue in sight. Another matter discussed was that of the Famous Players-Lasky-Traco theatre case.

R. F. Woodhull, President and Sidney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Board of the Directors of the M. P. T. O. A. were complimented for the manner in which they handled the Kingston Armory exhibition matter whose permit for the use of the Armory for motion picture exhibition purposes was revoked by Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York.

Joseph M. Seider drew the attention of the Board to the strength of the organization's treasury. He also reported on the contemplated activities of the M. P. T. O. A. with regard to the proposed amendment to the Federal copyright law, stating the request of A. Julian Brylawski, Chairman of the Administrative committee of the national organization, that the theatre owners of New Jersey interest themselves in an effort to defeat this proposed amendment and also asking that they request their congressmen and senators to vote against the amendment in the form in which it is proposed.

A satisfactory report was also made relating to the adjustment of the dispute with Pathe regarding the release of the Harry Langdon comedies.

There was a dinner served before the session was called to order and a vote of thanks was rendered Directors Benjamin Schindler of Camden and Jacob Fox of Burlington, N. J., who acted as hosts. Pete Adams will be the host of the Board when it convenes in Patterson on November nineteenth.

Film Arts Guild To Revive Screen Classics

Several of the outstanding artistic successes of the screen will be revived at a Broadway theatre under the auspices of the Film Arts Guild, Inc., an organization with offices at 500 5th Ave. The movement will be launched soon, it is announced by Symon Gould, director of the Guild. A theatre will be engaged in the near future.

The Guild has requested newspaper reviewers to submit lists of what they consider the 10 best productions made for the screen. Among the pictures which will be shown are "Broken Blossoms," "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," "The Miracle Man," "The Golem," "Women of Paris," "Intolerance" and "Birth of a Nation."

Warners Show Picture in Aeroplane

WARNER BROTHERS conducted an aerial pre-release showing of a picture the morning of election day. The audience was composed of motion picture critics seated in the cabin of a giant Sikorsky plane soaring 3,000 feet above Roosevelt field on Long Island. The showing was conducted as an experiment by a joint committee of Sikorsky engineers and Warner Brothers.

The demonstration proved the practicability of showing films in planes and synchronizing musical accompaniment supplied from the ground. Station WGBS, Gimbel Brothers, broadcast the music which was played by Herman Heller's orchestra and picked up on the receiving sets in the cabin of the plane.

Holding Company for Fox Theatres Formed; Assets Are Over Twenty Millions

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week of the formation of the Fox theatre Corporation, incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, which will in effect be a holding corporation for all the Fox theatres and equities in real estate and other theatres. The assets of the new corporation are in excess of $20,000,000, of which $11,000,000 is cash and $9,000,000 equities in theatres and so on.

Four million shares of no par value common stock are being issued. The corporation will take over all theatres and interests in theatres now controlled by Fox.

It is interesting to note that, starting with an initial investment of $5,000 by William Fox in 1905, the theatre assets, solely through earnings, have advanced to the $9,000,000 figure. Also, according to the New York Commercial, about $6,000,000 in earnings has been drawn out, making a total earning on the $5,000 of about $15,000,000.

It was rumored in New York this week, though not confirmed, that the new Roxy theatre, being built by S. L. Rothafel, would be the Fox first run house on Broadway.

Hollywood Enjoys Anniversary

Al Christie Shot First Picture There Fourteen Years Ago in October

HOLLYWOOD last week observed the fourteenth anniversary of the advent of motion picture making there. It was fourteen years ago that Al Christie took the first motion picture in Hollywood with a group of then unknown actors. Coincident with the anniversary on the evening of October 27th C. H. Christie, as head of the Producers' Association presided at a dinner at the Hollywood Athletic Club at which were guests of honor ten members of the United States Senate Committee in the west considering the details of the huge Boulder Canyon dam project.

The fourteenth anniversary saw twenty-four studios actively making pictures in the film center of which Hollywood is a hub. A total of 114 new films were in actual production on the anniversary of the original date.

Al Christie took Hollywood's first pictures as manager and comedy director of the Nestor Company which prospected westward in 1911. The first picture was a 300-foot affair which was shot in an orange grove on Hollywood Boulevard where now stands the Regent Hotel, owned and operated by Christie Brothers, Al and Charles.

Fourteen years after the first picture was made now sees fifteen thousand people in and around Hollywood engaged in making pictures regularly with an aggregate payroll of twenty-five million dollars a year. The picture companies operating are capitalized at $17,170,000 and make 85 per cent of the total picture production of America. The payroll figures do not include the many allied industries to the motion picture industry.

The business office is beautifully arranged, the furniture matching the woodwork. The building is somewhat out of the business section of the city.

British Quota Plan Now Formulated

Picture News says:

"For years this journal has, in common with the whole leaders of the British industry, entreated America to look at our pictures and encourage their production by putting them on the American market. Admittedly they have not all been good, but some of them have been very worth-while. It would not have required any great amount of courage for half-a-dozen of the leading concerns on the other side to make a friendly gesture, instead of which they have merely handed us empty, meaningless speeches. The lack of sincerity is what hurts. The way American leaders come over here and talk utterly insincere phrases is becoming nothing short of a scandal. The British manufacturers have asked for bread and been handed talk."

Ernest W. Fredman, editor of the aforementioned publication, has this to say:

"Frankly, there are many exhibitors up and down the country who view with a great deal of trepidation the thought of Government interference in the running of their business, and with those views we entirely concur."

The Kinematograph Weekly has this to say in regard to Anglo-American film relations and the quota plan:

"The concerns who take most money from this country, and who have vastly increased the difficulty even of small scale production here by their policy of wholesale blind booking, have done nothing—and less than nothing—for the British film.

"And our opinion is that they will continue to do just that amount—subsidy or no subsidy—for British producers until it is made plain to them that their future British profits depend entirely on a fair American distribution for British films.

"Our own canvass of Trade opinion in regard to the F. B. I. Memorandum showed a considerable degree of hostility to the suggestion that exhibitors should be required to show a fixed percentage of British films."

Hungary has put a quota system of one to thirty into effect, as announced exclusively in these columns some months ago. Also, there is talk of such regulations in France, Spain and Italy, though none of them have reached a definite basis.

WITH more than 150 exhibitors of the Greater New York district and executives of the Fox Film organized presented at the ceremonies, Julius Miller, president of the Borough of Manhattan, presided at the cornerstone laying of the new Fox Exchange Building in New York City on October 28. Eisele, treasurer of Fox, James R. Grainger, general sales manager, and Mr. Buxbaum made short addresses at the luncheon in celebration of the cornerstone laying.

Film Men Win Appeal In Connecticut

CIRCUIT JUDGE HENRY WADE ROGERS has granted an appeal in New Haven, Connecticut to the United States Supreme Court from the decision of the Federal Constitutional Court in the matter of the film taxing law, handed down last week. Documents for perfecting an appeal have been filed and a bond deposited by Former Attorney General G. W. Wickersham and E. P. Grosvenor for the film companies which were in the action. Appeal will be taken by the American Feature Film Company of Boston.

Zukor Honor Guest of A.M.P.A.

Tells Ad Men Industry Is Too Large For Domination By Small Group of Individuals

ADOLPH ZUKOR, president of Famous Players-Lasky, was the honor guest of the A.M.P.A. at the organization's luncheon in New York last week. Mr. Zukor, whom members of the A.M.P.A. voted the first on the list of the picture industry's twelve greatest men, said that the welfare of the motion picture "is nearer and dearer to my heart than any financial gain," in an address which he made following the luncheon, held at the Hofbrau Haus.

In answer to a question of Jacques Kopstein regarding control of the industry by a small group of individual interests, Mr. Zukor replied that the Film industry is too large and too powerful for any five or six individuals to dominate it.

In addressing the assemblage Mr. Zukor said:

"A good many things have been said and printed about me individually, some by men who do not know me, lots of it by men who do, but I am satisfied that some may be present here who will agree on one thing at least to their knowledge—that I have never deliberately done anything that would hamper the progress of the motion picture.

"When I first entered the picture business as an exhibitor, my family had a circle of friends. When these friends of ours found out I was in the picture business, we would see little by little that these friends dropped away, and we did not receive their invitations to call on them, and that they stopped calling on us. We did not know the reason, except we scented it was because I had entered the moving picture business, which fifteen years ago, was somewhat degrading. I then remarked to Mrs. Zukor, 'Do not worry, moving pictures are all right—and some day these very people who give us the go-by may be very glad to accept us.' And I am very thankful that moving pictures have made such strides, that I and my family, and all of us here, can hold our heads up and be proud to be identified with screen entertainment.

"I have tried to analyze just what elements were responsible for bringing the moving picture before the public in the right light, and I cannot help but acknowledge that the men who have been in charge of the publicity and advertising of this industry, are responsible for its prestige about 50-50 with the producers who have tried to make worth-while pictures.

"I think the future success of the motion picture—and not one of us here can tell to what degree it will develop, though we may think and dream—depends upon how ably you men place before the public, truthfully and honestly, the things that your respective companies are undertaking to do.

"My thoughts, my methods and my desires are no different today than they were the day I undertook to make pictures. I rejoice with each individual in the industry, and with every corporation that succeeds in making a creditable contribution to our business."

Fraser Sees Production Boom

Says Industrial Prosperity Will be Followed by Great Activity on Coast

WILLIAM R. FRASER, general manger of the Harold Lloyd Corp. is back at his desk at the Metropolitan studio in Hollywood following a ten week's stay in New York, and confident that the west coast is on the brink of one of its greatest picture production booms.

Fraser, a keen observer of conditions bases his prediction regarding the coming boom on general industrial conditions throughout the country and the consequent return to normalcy of the motion picture theatres.

During his stay in the east Fraser was in conference almost continually with Sidney R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and with Elmer Pearson, general manager of Pathe Exchanges, Inc.

Among the statements made by Fraser on his return to the west coast was one denying the rumor that has persisted for months that Harold Lloyd would move his production unit to New York. He declared Lloyd had no intention of deserting Hollywood.

"Throughout the East there is in progress a great commercial boom, which is almost certain to be felt in Southern California this coming winter," asserted Mr. Fraser. "Wall street is now reflecting this activity with a tremendous total of sales. Motion picture exhibitors are profiting greatly by this industrial movement but it really is the better grade of pictures being turned out by Hollywood producers that is directly responsible for the improved conditions in the exhibition field.

Chadwick Schedule Is Near Completion

CHADWICK PICTURES CORPORATION is in the enviable position at this stage of the year, of having released nine of its scheduled features, with two others in production and the others lined up to be completed on scheduled time. Having completed the remaining preliminary details incidental to production, I. E. Chadwick, president of the Corporation, is returning to New York.

With him President Chadwick is bringing a print of the latest completed production, "The Count of Luxembourg," which has a cast headed by George Walsh and Helen Lee Worthing. At present the west coast forces are working on "The Transcontinental Limited," a railroad romance with a cast headed by Johnnie Walker, Mary Carr, Eugenie Gilbert and Alec Francis.

Alan Crosland is directing Barrymore, with Mary Astor in the leading feminine role. Others in the supporting cast are Willard Louis, Phillipe De Lacy, John Roche, June Marlowe, Helene Costello, Myrna Loy, Helene Dalgy, Warner Oland and Montague Love.

While "Don Juan" will not be released until next season, it is expected it will be completed shortly after the first of the year. It will be produced on a lavish scale, the most pretentious spectacle Warners have yet made. Bess Meredyth prepared the scenario.

Herman Raymaker is at the height of production with Rin-Tin-Tin, the Warner wonder dog in "The Night Cry." June Marlowe has the leading human role. The story is by Charles Logue.

Star for "Brown of Harvard" Not Yet Chosen

Just who is to play the title role in "Brown of Harvard," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production which Jack Conway will direct has not been decided as yet although Ramon Novarro, Ernest Gillen, William Haines and Douglas Gilmore are under consideration. It is also possible that some actor outside the organization may be chosen. The story, which was written in 1906 by Rida Johnson Young, and the play which followed it the following year have been popular with the younger generation. The picture will be produced in the near future at Harvard Campus, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Fox Makes Changes in Cast of "The First Year"

Virginia Madison has replaced Emily Fitzroy in the role of Mrs. Livingston and Frank Currier will play Dr. Livingston instead of J. Farrell McDonald in "The First Year," a John Golden play being filmed for Fox by Frank Borzage. The change was made because Miss Fitzroy and McDonald hadn't finished work in two other Fox productions in time. Matt Moore has been borrowed from Warner Brothers to play the role of Tommy Tucker in this comedy of married life.

"Share and Share Alike" Is Completed

Actual shooting has been completed by Whitman Bennett at the Glendale studios on "Share and Share Alike," an adaptation from the Reginald Wright Kauffman novel, in which Jane Novak is the star. The picture will be released as one of the twenty-four Golden Arrow first run features for 1925-26. Bennett is now cutting and titling the picture, which will be released through Arrow November 15th.

Fairbanks Working On "The Black Pirate"

FROM present indications "The Black Pirate," Douglas Fairbanks first picture in color photography, will have a small cast. To date two women have been scheduled to appear, Billie Dove, who will play the feminine lead and her maid, who has not yet been selected. Donald Crisp will play a one-armed Scotch pirate, Sam De Grasse will do the 'heavy' role, and Anders Randolph will play another of the character roles. Roy Coulson, Charles Gorman and Al MacQuarrie, a trio from "Don Q," will also be seen in this production. A stock company of thirty men have been retained to play pirate roles and several hundred extras have been engaged for the battle scenes at sea.

Fairbanks is now completing plans for the blowing up of a full rigged seventeenth century galleon for one of the scenes, the vessel being a remodelled four-master which was wrecked some time ago and has since been on the bar at the entrance to Balboa Harbor. The "Muriel," as the ship is called, is 175 feet long and was formerly engaged in the coastwise lumber trade.

Principal Pictures Sees "Barbara Worth"

Principal Pictures Corporation, of which Sol Lesser is president, is bending every endeavor to discover a girl, professional or otherwise, who is qualified to play the role of Barbara Worth in the picturization of Harold Bell Wright's novel, "The Winning of Barbara Worth."

All West Coast Theatre managers have been instructed to receive photographs of girls from the ages of 17 to 22 who feel they can play the part of this desert heroine. In addition, William Gibson, well known cameraman is visiting towns in which West Coast theatres are located and with the assistance of three public spirited citizens of each town is selecting ten young women for actual screen photo tests. The fortunate winner will be given the Barbara Worth role and the next four are guaranteed at least four weeks of work by various producers.

F. B. O. Making Drive on Western Subjects

F. B. O. is making a drive on Western subjects in connection with its current production program embracing more than sixty pictures. In addition to Fred Thomson, F. B. O. has two other units out of six working steadily on Westerns. Another similar unit is contemplated.

Bob Custer has finished "No Man's Law," under the direction of Del Andrews and will start another picture within a week or ten days.

Roy Stewart to Play Male Lead in "Scraps"

Announcement from the Mary Pickford studios states that Roy Stewart has been cast for the sweetheart of Mary Pickford in her newest United Artists release "Scraps" which is now being made under the direction of William Beaudine. This marks a departure from Stewart's usual line of work as he is getting away from the hard riding cow-puncher type of role which he has been playing recently. Stewart, it is said, intends to play straight leads and featured "heavies" in the future.

Walsh Making College Story for Chadwick

GEORGE WALSH has completed his role in "The Count of Luxemburg" and has resumed work on his series of action pictures for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. He is working on a college story, "Smith of Cornell," which is to be produced in Ithaca on the college campus.

Contrary to the usual custom Chadwick is bringing his company east during the Winter when other companies are rushing back to California. Walsh was an athletic star in his college days and revels in the type of picture he is now making for Chadwick.

P. D. C. Is Lining Up Product

Present Indications Point to Pictures Being Ready Well in Advance of Schedule

THE four studios making pictures for the Producers Distributing Corporation schedule are hard at it with the result that all of the product will probably be completed well in advance of the company's release schedule from present indications.

"Made for Love," "Braveheart," and "Three Faces East" are in the last stages of production at the De Mille studios and preparations are under way for the immediate filming of the Cecil B. De Mille personally directed production "The Volga Boatman."

Rupert Julian has started cutting of "Three Faces East," the secret service play of Imperial Germany which was adapted by C. Gardner Sullivan. Jetta Goudal, Robert Ames, Clive Brook and Henry B. Walthall appear in this production with the director playing the role of Kaiser Wilhelm.

The company making "Braveheart," a story by William C. De Mille, is back from location. This production stars Rod La Rocque and is being directed by Alan Hale with a cast comprising Lillian Rich, Tyrone Power, Robert Edeson and Jean Acker.

"Steel Preferred" made at the Metropolitan studios under the direction of James Hogan has been turned over to the film editors, and the "Rocking Moon" company, under the direction of George Melford, is back from Alaska and work on the final scenes is now under way at the studios.

"Fifth Avenue," a story of New York life, is also nearing completion at the Metropolitan studios. A number of important sequences, including what is said to be one of the gayest "parties" ever filmed, were shot by director Robert G. Vignola during the past week.

At the Marshall Neilan studios in Glendale, Calif., Neilan is busy with his first production for release through Producers Distributing, which, according to the producer will be a particularly lavish picture, and Al Christie, having shipped "Madame Behave" to the home office is preparing for his next feature comedy.

Hutchison Back As Producer

Will Make Series of Comedy Features Under Associated Exhibitors Banner

SAMUEL S. HUTCHISON, pioneer among motion picture producers returns as an active producer and will make a series of pictures under the Associated Exhibitors' banner. The first of these comedies on which he will commence work at once is from a story by Frederick Isham, author of "Three Live Ghosts" and "Nothing But the Truth." Hutchison, according to his production manager, Clarence White, has already picked three other stories to follow his first, which is titled, "The Nut Cracker."

The productions which are to follow on the 1926 program are to be made from successful stage plays and novels. Announcement of their titles and the casts are to be made shortly by Production Manager White.

Hutchison had already signed up the leading figures in "The Nut Cracker" and is prepared to start shooting in the immediate future. Edward Everett Horton and Mae Busch will be co-starred, while those so far selected for the supporting cast include Harry Myers and Tom Ricketts. Lloyd Inghram has been engaged to direct.

In regard to the new affiliation Hutchison said:

"My connection with Oscar Price's company assures me of the greatest success. I regard this affiliation as primary. With the stars I have at my command, one of the best directors in the field, an excellent production manager and a wealth of the best books and plays for my screen material, I know that my product will be classed with the very finest in the industry."

Hutchison, who formerly produced pictures at Santa Barbara, had until recently been devoting his interest for the past few years to other business ties in the Middle West. He produced many of the successes of a decade ago including "Damaged Goods" and "Flying A" pictures.

It was adapted by Lenore Coffee from the original story by Konrad Bercovici.

Claire Windsor and Bert Lytell have the leading roles. The story is by S. Jay Kaufman and was adapted to the screen by Max Marcin.

Josephine Norman Borrowed by Metropolitan

"Vanishing American" Set For Feb. 15

THE spring and summer season of 1926 will bring to the theatres for general release one of Paramount's most ambitious efforts—"The Vanishing American."

Three premiere presentations, in widely separated sections of the country, have been accorded this historical screen composition dedicated to the rapidly disappearing Red race, the American Indian. It has achieved in each instance a record for drawing power, Famous announced.

In its world premiere at the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., hundreds of persons were turned away at the final performance following a week's sensational run. The greatness of the picture and the power which it holds over audiences were reflected in newspaper comments.

"No picture that ever played in Charlotte," wrote one critic, "has received the enthusiastic acclaim and support that the world premiere of Zane Grey's 'The Vanishing American' at the Imperial theatre is enjoying this week.

"Monday night (the picture opened Sunday at Midnight) so great was the crush that many patrons were forced to stand. The close of the business last night set a record for two consecutive showings at the Imperial.

"'The Vanishing American' is Paramount's greatest production. It will go down in the annals of Motion picture history as one of the masterpieces of all times."

So generous praise was not confined to this one Charlotte critic. Another wrote:

"Practically two solid hours after midnight a select Charlotte assemblage that filled the Imperial theatre sat as if spellbound watching 'The Vanishing American.' The death-like silence of that after midnight audience was broken, however, in the final scenes, not by the moving of feet, nor by movements prompted by restlessness, nor because of lack of interest or attention—it was the weeping of men and women scattered throughout the house, weeping that could not be restrained.

"'The Vanishing American' is a stupendous production. It is magnificent. If possible it is greater than 'The Birth of a Nation,' but only because it has in it more of that which made 'The Birth of a Nation' so great."

San Francisco, though thousands of miles from Charlotte, accorded the production an equally warm reception, one newspaper reporting that "in their (the public's) dictum appears a confirmation of the motion picture critics' opinion of the picture." "Spontaneous applause," says the paper, "follows every screening, and in the hush that precedes the dramatic ending there is a volume of testimony as to its gripping, thrilling force and power."

"If there were no more to 'The Vanishing American' than the inspiringly beautiful scenes which picture the coming of the Red man as we know him and the emotion-gripping sequence which signalizes his passing, the picture would find a place in the forefront of film production," writes Curran D. Swint in the San Francisco Daily News. "But that is only the beginning and the end. Between there is a picture drama unfolded which not only impresses the viewer by its interest-intriguing plot and thrilling action, but arouses speculation and admiration through the immensity of the task encountered. I offer my sincere congratulations to George B. Seitz into whose capable hands the direction was intrusted."

The Herald says: "The credit for the success of 'The Vanishing American'—and it is unqualifiedly a success—must go to George B. Seitz, its director. The picture is superb. 'The Vanishing American' is destined to achieve general popularity and is an important link in the chain of historical drama toward which picture producers are turning nowadays for their greater efforts."

No greater tribute could have been paid this picture than the statement of Quinn Martin in the New York World that, "There need be no secret of the fact that I am going to try to be a weekly patron of the Criterion for at least the next three months." Continuing, he said: "In the broad and colorful curtain which serves as its background, in the exquisite camera work which has gone into the photographing of its far flung scenes, and in the remarkably true reproductions of its characters there is more than any man may digest in a mere visit. 'The Vanishing American' is the finest thing of American history ever done in the cinema. Its action is swift and smooth. It moves with the speed of the wind and with something of the power of a hurricane. And still I am inclined to say, 'Hail to the vanishing American, but not farewell.' The cinema, this cinema, has made it so."

"The Vanishing American" lends itself admirably to exploitation. Exemplary of this are the three campaigns which have been conducted on it—Charlotte, San Francisco and New York. In this connection, it is a picture which educators, students, church officials, women's clubs and merchants associations alike will endorse. Word-of-mouth advertising will build patronage for the theatre presenting the attraction.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage — a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Cut-out lobby display for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Pretty Ladies" arranged by Manager Don Nichols for the presentation of the picture at the Paris theatre in Durham, N. C. The attraction value of the display at night was heightened by spot-light illumination focused on the cut-out from 1000-watt white spots located on a building across the street.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

"Sally Of The Sawdust" Is Circussed In Atlanta

The Howard Theatre used an exploitation stunt on "Sally of the Sawdust" that is a perennial attraction for both young and old.

They used a regular circus wagon, gaily painted and drawn by two horses, which was placarded with heralds. Inside, behind the iron-bar sides, was a large black bear. This outfit paraded the streets and at times was stationed in front of the Howard, where a large crowd gathered to watch the animal. A feature of publicity which was not counted upon occurred when an inquisitive man stuck his hand inside the cage and had it painfully bitten by the bear. The injury was not serious; however the man was taken to a local hospital for treatment, and the story appeared in the morning paper next day.

"The Howard had the lobby dressed most attractively, carrying out the circus setting of the picture by enclosing the theatre's entrance with painted cardboard props that gave the appearance of tent flaps. The same idea was carried out by erecting above the marquise what looked to be the front of a big circus tent.

"Annie Rooney" Music Tie Up Goes Big In Phila.

The music store tie up in connection with the song "Annie Rooney" was made the leading feature of the campaign for Mary Pickford's new picture when it played the Stanley Theatre in Philadelphia.

Eight of the most prominent music stores in the city were flooded in their windows with copies of the Annie Rooney song. Five hundred photographs of the star, in addition to five hundred copies of the song, were distributed to the first 500 requests received at radio station WIP, following the broadcasting of the picture and the favorite old song.

The huge Stanley locomotive, a reproduction of the Pennsylvania railroad engines, steamed all over the city with the announcement of the picture, theatre and play date, and the city was plastered with an extra supply of window cards and the regular line of lithographs.

The engagement of "The Iron Horse" (Fox) at the Liberty theatre, Seattle, was exploited by means of this ancient locomotive, which was run around Seattle on the street railtracks.

Simple, inexpensive, yet effective is the ballyhoo illustrated above. Used for Paramount's "He's a Prince" in St. Petersburg, Fla., by Manager H. G. Griffin of the Plaza theatre, that city.

"Gold Rush" Stunt List Grows

Wide Range Of Ideas Employed By Showmen In Many Cities For Drives on Chaplin Film

NATURALLY the new Chaplin comedy "The Gold Rush" is being heavily exploited throughout the country, but in the case of this picture there seems to be a far greater variety to the trick ideas which exhibitors are incorporating in their campaigns. Novelties of all sorts have been staged for advertising on "The Gold Rush" and as ideas which have been reported favorably upon by exhibitors the following are cited.

At Grauman's Egyptian in Hollywood, where an extended run was supported with an extensive drive, there was considerable interest worked up over a long distance interview with the star, who at the time was in New York, to attend the premiere there. Another stunt was a birthday party for the canine friends of "Ilak," the dog which appears in "The Gold Rush." These were put on in addition to a "treasure hunt," the spotting of the soles of twenty of Charlie's shoes along the streets, and many others.

To stimulate Asheville's interest in "The Gold Rush," at the Plaza theatre, Manager T. L. Stelling, in cooperation with the Citizen, inaugurated a Chaplin impersonating contest, open to children.

Advance announcements were run in the newspaper, stating that Plaza management would hold an impersonation contest in lobby of theatre at 2.30 p. m. on opening day of "The Gold Rush." Cash prize was offered winner, and in addition to being served with refreshments, all participants were to be the guests of the theatre at the picture's first showing.

During the showing of "The Gold Rush" at the Gem theatre at Murray, Utah, F. T. Duval, manager of the house pulled a novel lobby exploitation stunt, which featured a large pile of boulders which he had gilded and piled in the lobby. From the cone a sign protruded announcing the fact that it was Charlie Chaplin's claim and duly signed accordingly. It showed the comedian sitting on top.

Larry Jacobs, Loew's Colonial, started his campaign a week before the opening with a uniquely worded message to all city officials, from the Mayor down, calling their attention to value of picture entertainment, and to "The Gold Rush" as a live wire tonic for happiness.

A well groomed man, wearing Tuxedo clothes, went into the better class stores of all kinds and distributed the Chaplin's "Gold Rush" coin. This man also carried invitations to city officials and prominent citizens. He did not carry any sign.

A similar campaign was put on in Harrisburg by Sidney Gates of Loew's Regent.

Three savings banks in Canton, Ohio, went into large newspaper display space to tie up with the run of Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush" when it was showing at the Valentine theatre.

All three of the banks took large newspaper space on the opening Sunday, averaging a quarter of a page each.

In connection with the advertising angle of the banks, the Dime Savings' copy said: "His interpretation of this epic scramble for fortune by its very hilarity on top of tears emphasizes a truth dear-bought by the many—that for every fortune laid on a basis of luck there are hundreds of thousands based on simple and savings bank deposits."

At Des Moines, Iowa, the A. H. Blank theatres printed a small folder containing $1,000 bond guaranteeing their payment of that sum in case of death by laughter while witnessing "The Gold Rush" at the Des Moines theatre. The bond was guaranteed by a big surety company through local insurance specialists.

At Wilmington, Delaware, the Arcadia theatre used a pair of old "dogs" gilded up and put in a window display, contrasting with natty footwear in same display.

In Winnipeg, Manitoba, a "Gold Rush" dog sledge attracted lots of attention since it was a burlesque of the regular dog sledge stuff. A compo board sledge, bearing the theatre signs on each side, looking more like a chariot than a sled, was mounted on small wheels and drawn by an assorted collection of curbstone setters.

YOUR IDEA

THE SHORT SUBJECT

WE have with us the short subject. As a box office attraction it is with us now more than it ever was in the past, because the more general use of the so-called "unit program"—which is to say a bill of entertainment complete as entertainment and made up of several individual units—has focussed more attention on the short subject. The result is that showmen exercise greater care in the selection of these pictures and, believing in their judgment as to the worth of them, they adopt more aggressive methods in telling the public about the short pictures.

The growth of exploitation along the lines of selling the entire program to the public is not altogether the result of the propaganda of the distributors to promote greater interest in the shorts. But the constant and energetic campaigns of the distributors have had the effect of building up a system of greater aid to the exhibitors in connection with the pictures, so that today the shorts go out with a thorough equipment of accessories and advertising material for the use of the theatres exploiting them.

ALWAYS RELIABLE

THE familiar check stunt, which you may or may not have used, is always reliable when it comes to attracting attention to some particular announcement which you wish to make. It was used recently by C. L. Higginbotham, owner and manager of the new Colonial theatre, Seneca, Mo., when that house opened recently.

Higginbotham mailed out several hundred letters into the rural districts, and to each was attached his check, payable for two cents on the Bank of Seneca. The story states that most of them were really cashed, too, which shows that the material was at least looked over.

If the mailing list isn't too large, the cost is not great, and it might well be worth the trouble when you have something really special to announce.

SERIAL EXPLOITATION

IT is sometimes difficult to understand why the theatres which show serials—and they are many—fail to make better use of their opportunity to build up several weeks of good business by launching a vigorous campaign to sell these pictures to their public. Many of the theatres do support the serials with big campaigns, but there are many which do not. The practice of giving the serial the advantages of a complete selling campaign, however, is spreading and with reports coming from all parts of the country of profitable returns on the investments, the practice is bound to grow.

The serial distributors furnish excellent advertising aids these days—a fact which may be checked by the exhibitor who will take the trouble to carefully examine the press books which the distributors are issuing now.

A highly realistic and entertaining window display for Pathe's "The Freshman" put on by a Los Angeles stationary store in a tie-up with Grauman's Million Dollar theatre is shown above. Real furniture was used in the foreground while the background consisted of a six by eight feet enlargement. Displays of this sort build business for the store and theatre and make for easier future operations between managers and merchants.

A case which illustrates the fact that some exhibitors do give good exploitation to the serials is the drive which was put on in Los Angeles by Manager Dick Darst of the Hollyway Theatre. The campaign was awarded the $5,000 prize in the Serial Exploitation Contest conducted by Universal.

EXPLOITING A COMEDY STAR

SHORT subject distributors are putting more energy into their efforts to obtain general publicity for their stars, with the result that better publicity material is being offered the exhibitor to build up a following for some of the regular players who appear in the short pictures on his programs.

An instance is afforded by the set of pictures of Virginia Vance, Educational comedy star, illustrating steps in the "Charleston,"

Seven of the eight poses in the "Charleston" dance routine illustrated by Virginia Vance, Educational comedy leading lady. The pictures, along with a full description of each step in the dance, are available through Educational exchanges and due to the popularity of this latest terpsichorean craze newspapers all over the country have used features of this sort on the installment plan, printing one lesson at a time. The material offers exhibitors an opportunity to gain some valuable local publicity in conjunction with their presentations of pictures in which Miss Vance appears.

AND OURS

most popular of modern dances, along with a series of articles describing each step in the dance. The photos are attractive—we publish the series in this department—and newspapers all over the country have used these progressive "dance routines" as special features, so the Educational matter should prove attractive to editors. Theatres which present Educational comedies should make an effort to place this feature with their local newspaper—localizing the interest in the feature by tie-up ads or publicity matter stating that Miss Vance will be seen as leading lady in a comedy to be presented at the theatre on such and such a date.

The photos and the lessons, we understand, are available at all Educational branch offices.

NAT'S ELECTION FLASH

NAT. G. ROTHSTEIN, director of publicity, advertising and exploitation for F. B. O., scored an "election" exploitation beat for "The Last Edition" in New York last Tuesday. Early in the day an "extra," in the form of a newspaper called the New York Evening Views appeared on the streets with a flash heading across the entire sheet announcing "Walker Wins." The make-up of the front page was authentic in all details and the flash heading held the attention long enough to cause people to take the paper handed out on the streets.

A large 3 column photograph of Senator Walker adorned the front page with a detailed blurb about his political aspirations, while the bottom of the sheet was given over to striaght F. B. O. publicity. Leave it to Nat not to miss a bet!

On the reverse side of the sheet stills from "The Last Edition" adorned the page, with another blurb about the New York premiere of the production at B. S. Moss' Cameo Theatre on November 8th.

Two hundred newsboys distributed these newspapers on Election Day, starting fully six and seven hours before the returns came in. The boys went tearing down the streets of New York, distributing the newspapers and shouting at the top of their lungs: "The Last Edition! ! ! ! Uxtra! Extry! The Last Edition! Walker Wins!"

THE ALL "SHORT" BILL

THERE has been great ballyhooing lately of all the exclusively short subjects programs put on by theatres in all sections of the country and there is little to be added to what has already been said in favor of these stunts. The theatres which appear to have been most successful with this type of attraction have exploited their bills as "comedy circuses" or all-komedy-karnivals. The stunt introduces a bit of variety and seems to have its virtues for occasional use by most any theatre outside of the big down-town houses in large cities.

It is the opinion of many that the "all comedy" bill falls short of being a completely rounded entertainment. The screen's patrons like drama and particularly melodrama and this element really belongs on the program of screen offerings. It can be supplied without taking the program out of the "all short subject" classification, for there are many short dramas being produced and while the vast majority of them are not up to the quality of the best in comedies, many are coming along that would serve adequately to supply the desirable "serious" element. If one of these is surrounded by the best in comedy and scenic reels a program that will be complete in entertainment values can be achieved.

THE DARST'S CAMPAIGN

THE prize-winning campaign in the Universal contest left few tricks of showmanship untouched. It was launched at a matinee performance one week before "The Great Circus Mystery" opened at the Hollyway. At that time Mr. Darst went upon the stage to talk to the children in his audience. He announced he had a surprise for them and asked them if they had any idea what it was. This little stunt had been prepared for by program, slide and trailer announcements on "The Great Circus Mystery" a week in advance. When the kids were all on the edge of their seats, he had the curtain raised and 24 children dressed in circus costumes were disclosed. Each had an 18-inch letter held behind him. At a given signal the letters were exposed reading "The Great Circus Mystery."

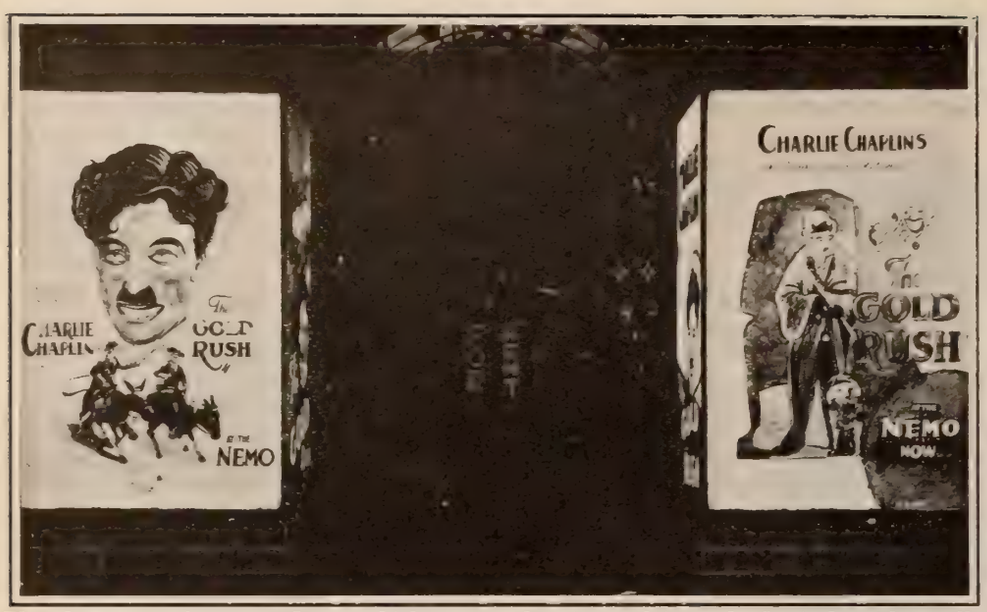
On the opening day the front of the Hollyway was dressed with real side-show banners as well as the stock "paper" and the entire neighborhood was ready for the big parade that preceded the show. Five hundred children were in line, each provided with a colored hat which Mr. Darst had made. Gay banners were carried, cut-out letters and pennants were in evidence, clowns, acrobats, cow-boys, strongmen, all were there. Each kiddie had a horn, a drum, a whistle, a dish pan, or something with which to make a noise.

Through a tie-up with the Pacific Coast Biscuit Co. 42 dozen 5-cent packages of animal crackers were donated and were given out to the children who attended the opening performance. The Hydro Pura Co. donated 1000 novelties, such as crowing roosters, horns, fans, and whistles, and a local decorator loaned a life-size camel for a ballyhoo in front of the house.

H. McC. Davenport composed an organ number which he called "The Great Circus Mystery." This is used as the theme for the picture and was broadcast over KNX. It proved one of the highlights of the campaign.

An amateur clown and acrobat contest is being held over a period of three weeks with four prizes donated by local merchants to be awarded at the end. The child who wins first place will be put on with the theatre's regular vaudeville show one night. The entry list is full and overflowing.

SELLING A SHORT SPECIAL



AMONG the recent short subject offerings which have been well exploited is the special reel issued by International under the title "Life's Greatest Thrills." This picture was advertised with window displays in Los Angeles and Boston. Photos of the displays are reproduced in this department.

Exhibitors have given the reel extra support in their advertising, and some good exploitation stunts have been used in connection with "Life's Greatest Thrills." William Brandt, prominently connected with the T. O. C. C., and owner of three theatres in Brooklyn, N. Y., recommends highly a stunt which he used for the picture at the Duffield, Carlton and the Bunny theatres. In a letter to Universal, releaser of the film, Mr. Brandt expresses his satisfaction with the business he attracted with "Life's Greatest Thirlls" as a result of his exploitation, of which he says:

"By word of mouth advertising several weeks in advance, each patron was requested first by the cashier, then by the doorman, then by the usher not to miss 'Life's Greatest Thrills,' and in that manner we worked up a campaign which packed all our theatres to the doors and broke several house records in which some of the biggest productions ever made have been shown."

Two recent window displays on "Life's Greatest Thrills," the International Newsreel special offered by Universal. The photo at the left shows the display in a Los Angeles department store in connection with the picture's showing at several houses in that city. The one at the right illustrated the display made in Boston. Both feature newspaper clippings, mostly from Hearst papers, dealing with the exploits of news camera men and screen records of big events.

The above store for rent offers ace-high poster paper designed for "The Gold Rush" (United Artists), by the management of the Nemo theatre, location and is used effectively with excellent Johnstown, Pa.

"Iron Horse" Drive In Dover

Woodhull's Baker Theatre Stages Thorough Campaign For Picture In Town of 10,000

THE best features of big city exploitation campaigns for "The Iron Horse" were fitted into the thorough-going drive which was conducted for the picture in Dover, N. J., by R. F. Woodhull's Baker Theatre. Though Dover has a population of only 10,000, the campaign was up to the highest standard from every standpoint developed in the large metropolises in which "The Iron Horse" was the object of special treatment.

The local newspaper being issued but twice a week, extra space was taken to the extent of half page ads on the back page, in addition to the regular house ad in another part of the paper.

A billing "Smash" of circus strength was thrown up on the Dover boards with plenty of "snipes." An "Iron Horse" Museum was installed in a vacant store on the main street, with windows carrying black and white stills of all the historic incidents of the picture. The stills carried interest-arousing captions. A number of dated banners were also displayed. The exhibit of photos and "Iron Horse" media was tastefully decorated with streamers of colored crepe paper. A battery of bunch lights kept the exhibit "alive" at night.

Through the whole-hearted cooperation of Mr. Bowlby, Superintendent of schools at Dover, the school system consisting of a high school and four elementary schools were thoroughly organized.

All railroad employees and even those of the trolley companies serving Dover, were circularized—the lists being provided by their employers—with a special letter offering them a 20 per cent discount on their admission ticket.

The current interest in Football was capitalized to the extent of printing up to 3,000 cards bearing on one side "The Season's Schedule of the Dover High School Football Team," and on the other side an announcement of the local "Iron Horse" engagement.

The Public Library was presented with a number of copies of "The Iron Horse" novelization, and reciprocated by allowing a large sign to be hung in one of their windows, reading "Now ready—the story of 'The Iron Horse' in book form—Read the book here, see the picture at the Baker Theatre." The library also distributed with outgoing books 5,000 "Iron Horse" book marks. These were further distributed as throwaways and in addition were placed under the tops of glass top tables in ice cream parlors and restaurants. The book marks were made from a one column cut selected from the press book, and gave especial prominence to the Dover play date of the attraction.

The window tie-up prospects of Dover got a thorough combing. The principal hardware realer came through with an outdoor scene of a woods in autumn, and was executed with the aid of tree stumps and real autumn leaves. A camp fire with glowing red lights, and a moving, miniature electric train that wound its way on tracks through foliage and dated "Iron Horse" stills were included. The town's principal bookseller showed a "trim" of not only "Iron Horse" books, but a miniature stage. The principal sporting goods store exhibited in its windows a group of stills showing George O'Brien in various athletic costumes. Six other windows displaying various brands of merchandise were also secured for tie-ups.

There being a number of factories about Dover, a special tack card drive was made on these plants, with special attention being given to bulletin and announcement boards about the factories. The herald campaign was executed in three channels, at factories, house to house distribution and by mail.

Gets Political Rivals To Back "Iron Horse" Drive

A hot political battle at Akron, Ohio, furnished the means for bringing an especially good opening gun for a newspaper tie up between the Akron Times-Press and the Goodyear Theatre in connection with the "Iron Horse." The contest was based on a stunt to stimulate interest in local history, and the mayoralty candidates, who had been carrying on a bitter three-cornered fight, were induced to endorse the stunt. The newspaper, therefore, broke the news of the contest with a page one story under headlines which proclaimed that the three candidates for mayor had come together on the first matter that claimed their unified support since the opening of the campaign.

History Contest.

The contest consisted in publishing daily for ten days, the photograph of some scene or landmark in Akron's history, and offering a prize for the best fifteen word title describing the scene. The judging of the titles was left to the three candidates. Three winners were selected daily and given surprise awards tendered by Akron business houses. Tickets to "The Iron Horse" were also presented to the winners.

Special exploitation for Pathe's serial "Play Ball" used by the Auditorium theatre, Philadelphia. Framed displays of official league base balls, bats and gloves, drew particular attention to the front of the house, which is operated by Mr. Wimley, a progressive showman.

"L. & T" Tabloid Newspaper House Organ Issued

The "L & T Illustrated News," which Louis P. Kramer, publicity director for the Lubliner & Trinz theatres in Chicago claims is the largest house organ in the world, has been launched. The paper starts its career with a circulation of 100,000 and as a twelve-page tabloid newspaper.

It is the contention of its publishers, that the tabloid newspaper idea is better liked by the public than a weekly magazine, the usual form of picture theatre house organ.

Within two weeks time the size of the paper will be increased from twelve to sixteen pages, and a little later to twenty-four pages. The circulation will be increased to 200,000 on the next issue and by the first of the year to more than 300,000 a week. The paper will be distributed only to patrons of the twenty-one Lubliner & Trinz theatres.

The paper is devoted entirely to motion pictures. It carries stories of various stars on location, activities at the studios, has a fashion page showing what the stars are wearing and a cartoon strip. It is standard in size, being the same in make-up throughout as the New York Daily News.

The L. & T. Illustrated News is edited by Louis P. Kramer, J. J. Hess, William Adler, with Roy Willis contributing the cartoon strip. Incidentally, the circulation of the "L. & T. Illustrated News," is greater than the combined circulation of two of Chicago's daily papers.

Cruze Wire As Herald For "Pony Express"

Co-operating with the Saxe Theatres, Eddie Corcoran, Paramount exploiteer put over a good stunt by having a reproduction of an original telegram that James Cruze dispatched to Jesse Lasky printed on 25,000 Postal Telegraph receiving blanks. The Postal Company co-operated by distributing them throughout the city from their fourteen branches. Every office building was visited by the messenger boys.

The Strand, Seattle, Wash., sacrificed its electric sign to a huge cut-out as an attractor for First National's "The Lost World." The cut-out was illuminated by spot lights.

Jazz Puts House on Feet

Bronx Theatre Introduces Dancing With Cabaret Music Supplied Through Tie Up

IT is not new, in this age of Jazz, for picture theatres to drift along with the tide and incorporate liberal doses of syncopation in their program, but it remained for an enterprising manager of a theatre in the Bronx to turn to Jazz as a "life saver." The manager is E. Canter, the theatre, the Congress, a neighborhood house, which was built a bit ahead of its time and which languished for a considerable stretch in the doldrums on a sea of the many high places which mark upper New York City's amusement activities.

Where to begin this story is a question. There are many pertinent angles from the theatre manager's standpoint. For example, there is the question, a large one, of dancing in the theatre. In several cities there are theatres which offer dancing and picture shows for a single admission. The dance craze has cut into the picture theatre's potential patronage. So the problem for many showmen is how to win over to their institutions these enthusiasts—these worshippers at the altar of Jazz.

Cabarets have mushroomed their way up in the neighborhood sections of large cities, and so there are many of them which are having their difficulties in making the box-office carry the load of their backers' investments. The case we are discussing offers a means of solution of the problems which confront both the neighborhood theatre and the neighborhood cabaret.

What could be a better way out of the difficulty than a tie-up of interests. The patronage of the theatre is bound to be considerable, and conversely the draw of the cabaret is certain to cut appreciably into the patronage of the picture theatre.

The solution of the problem has been attempted by Manager Canter of the Congress, in the Bronx. It consists simply of a co-operative arrangement with a nearby cabaret with a good orchestra and a good following among the young people of the neighborhood.

Canter has arranged with the cabaret to supply him an orchestra on two nights a week. On these occasions the theatre opens its program with a cabaret number, in which the stage is set as a cabaret and the orchestra is arranged back stage. The music is played and the audience invited to participate in the dancing. Sufficient room for dancing is afforded by the wide aisles at the Congress, the stage and foyer of the theatre.

The neighborhood idea, is promoted by having the manager announce publicly the names of the couples who dance on the stage. Along with the orchestra, which the cabaret provides, are such entertainment numbers as are presented as weekly features by the dance salons. The arrangement is made profitable to the cabaret through constant "ballyhooing" of the dance hall by the manager of the Congress theatre.

Canter has carried his neighborhood idea even further than this. His district is populated by a number of social clubs, and on Saturday night of each week he offers a prize, usually a loving cup, to the organization which is best represented at the theatre. Canter is well acquainted in the neighborhood and knows the people of his community and personally checks up at the door on this "club night" stunt.

Through associations formed during his career as a vaudeville performer, Canter obtains the services of several well known vaudeville performers for the Congress. These features enable him to stage a "Carnival Week" such as put on two weeks ago at the Congress. But it is the intimate touch which seems to be doing the best work in developing a large following for the theatre, and in this his tie-up with the cabaret is the biggest item of appeal to the people of the community.

AND FISTS"

by Clarence Buddington Kelland

"HEARTS and FISTS" is an intensely dramatic story of the fight of a college man to keep a grip on his Dad's timber business - - and to win a sweetheart - - against seemingly overwhelming odds.

THE picture is replete with drama, action, thrills, pep, punch and heart interest.

TAKE advantage of the fact that the story appeared in a National Magazine of tremendous circulation.

An Independent Triumph from John Lowell

John Lowell needs no introduction to Independent Exhibitors. His successes in the independent field have been outstanding.

In "Red Love" he has surpassed all previous efforts—in strength of cast, story and production.

Actually photographed on the Dakota prairies, "Red Love" rings true—it is more than a motion picture—it is a graphic portrayal of Life as it is today among the Red Men.

UNVANISHED AMERICANS

PORTRAYED by JOHN LOWELL and EVANGELINE RUSSELL

in L. Case Russell's Thrilling Story

"RED LOVE"

The story—daring, different—of the American Indian as he is today.

A vital tale of savage love, primitive honor and heroic sacrifice.

A theme adroitly handled by an author who knows the Indian of today and of other days.

The "Why" of Davis Dist. Div.

IT is customary, in this business, to claim for every new project motives of uplift, philanthropy and salvation—which deceive no one. So let's be frank about it at the outset, and leave out such nonsense.

The Davis Distributing Division, Inc., like every other legitimate business enterprise, was formed to earn a reasonable profit for the Davis Distributing Division—in other words, to make money.

We felt that the one sure way to bring about that result was to give full value for every dollar received —"better pictures for less money." That standard has been rigidly held to. Every possible ounce of showmanship and entertainment has been put into the Davis product, without extravagance and without waste. That has made it possible for us to sell these pictures on a "live and let live" basis.

For a time we distributed our product on the state rights market, but that field reached a condition where we could no longer state right our pictures with fairness to our producers or to ourselves.

Therefore, we welcomed the advent of Vital Exchanges, Inc., which has contracted to release all of our product for a period of five years under what we believe to be the fairest arrangement yet devised for this purpose.

Through our contract with Vital Exchanges we will have a national release date, complete "coverage" of the country, moderate distributing cost, and all the advantages of a national organization, plus certain features of the state right plan, such as personal financial interest on the part of each exchange manager.

Vital Exchanges, in dealing with the exhibitor, is using a contract based upon that drawn up by Joseph M. Seider, chairman of the contract committee of the M. P. T. O. A. Under the terms of this, all reasonable contingencies are equitably provided for. In the event of a difference of opinion arising, Vital Exchanges agrees to arbitration by a board of three members, one selected by the exhibitor and one by the exchange.

For the producer, the Vital Exchange has the most equitable arrangement yet accorded the maker of a picture, and one under which he will share fully in the earnings of a successful production.

Thus, at one stroke, a square deal is assured all independent branches of the industry—the producer, through an arrangement which will bring to him his full share of the exhibition value of his pictures, and the exhibitor, through the assurance of fair dealing and "better pictures for less money."

President.

A Splendid Line-Up

From an office with a rented desk and a part-time stenographer handling the sale of a series of western pictures, to the largest Independent Distributor in America—in a period of ten months is quite an accomplishment. Davis Distributing Division, Inc., started last February in just that way and today it is offering to the exhibitors of the United States and Canada a complete program of pictures through Vital Exchanges, Inc., and its other Independent exchange affiliations.

This program is headed by four super-specials and comprises seven series of features, two serials, fifty-two comedies, six two-reel novelties and fifty-two single-reel novelties.

"The Red Kimono"

"Boys, it's a knockout!"

That is the way J. Charles Davis 2nd greeted the folks in the home office when he returned to New York from a flying trip to the Coast after having seen the "rushes" on Mrs. Wallace Reid's new picture "The Red Kimono."

When "J. Charles" is "sold" on anything his enthusiasm radiates like rays of light from a sun arc and is as contagious as the measles. It wasn't long until the entire Davis organization was likewise exclaiming "Boys, it's a knockout!"

According to those who have seen the finished picture, Mrs. Reid has adhered to the policy of her two sensational box office successes, "Human Wreckage" and "Broken Laws" and has again dared to venture onto thin ice of convention in order to drive home another of those lessons in behalf of humanity for which her name is becoming symbolic and to the teaching of which she is devoting her life.

While Mrs. Reid has painted a picture of one of civilization's greatest problems with absolute accuracy, she has done it with the gentle touch of a mother giving a loved daughter a glimpse into the darker avenues of life in order to guide her footsteps into brighter paths.

"The Red Kimono" was adapted from Adela Rogers St. Johns' "Smart Set" magazine story "Gabrielle of the Red Kimono" and is based on a true story revolving around the segregated district of New Orleans. Miss St. Johns "covered" the case while working as a reporter on a newspaper.

Mrs. Reid, herself, appears in the picture, and the rest of the cast contains such names as Priscilla Bonner, Theodore Von Eltz, Mary Carr, Carl Miller, Tyrone Power, George Seigman, Max

"The Red Kimono" Mrs. Reid's Best

Ascher, Sheldon Lewis, Virginia Pearson, Nelly Bly Baker and Emily Fitzroy.

Marilyn Mills Popular

"Something wonderful in riding costumes" would describe Marilyn Mills if one wished to disregard the exceptional histrionic ability which her splendid riding augments so successfully. There is no doubt that Marilyn can ride. Producers have known that for several years, and as a result she has appeared, unheralded and unsung, in many productions "doubling" for famous stars whenever they were required to make a spectacular ride, for many years.

She might have gone on "doubling" for years, earning good money but of necessity keeping herself in obscurity except that J. Charles Davis, 2nd, president of Davis Distributing Division, Inc. and J. K. Adams, the keen eyed, far seeing vice president of the same organization, recognized her possibilities and signed a contract with her to appear at the head of her own company, thus giving recognization to a talent that has graced the screen for many years.

Miss Mills, who probably knows more about horses than any woman on the Western Coast is a convincing and talented actress, and could hold her own in any company. With her two wonderfully trained horses "Beverly" and "Star" playing important roles in her pictures she is able to offer to the exhibitor a series of productions absolutely unique in the history of pictures.

Two of Miss Mills' productions, "Tricks" and "Three Pals" are completed and the former is ready for release, and have received unstinted praise from previewers who have been fortunate enough to see them. She is already at work on the third, and will make at least five more under her contract with Davis Distributing Division, Inc.

"Hearts and Fists"

The Davis Distributing Division and Vital Exchanges are wearing broad grins over the acquisition of "Hearts and Fists," produced at the H. C. Weaver Studios, Tacoma, Washington, for Mid-winter release. A "big timber" story that is decidedly "big business" timber would be a boiled-down summary of the volumes of words that are being said and written in praise of this picture by the officers and department heads of the two organizations.

John Bowers, Marguerite de la Motte, Alan Hale and Dan Mason head the cast and a big logging camp in full operation in the heart of the "big timber" district of Washington furnishes the background for the thrills.

"Hearts and Fists" was adapted from a story by Clarence Buddington Kelland which appeared as a serial in the American Magazine, and is virile and red-blooded enough to suit even the most thrill-hungry audiences.

Aside from the magnificent beauty of its backgrounds, "Heart and Fists" boasts a story that could stand "on its own" in any surroundings. It has in-

Mrs. Wallace Reid has scored again in "The Red Kimono," a Davis Distributing Division release through Vital Exchanges in which she herself appears, plus a cast including Priscilla Bonner, Theodore Von Eltz, Mary Carr, Virginia Pearson, Sheldon Lewis, Carl Miller, Tyrone Power, George Seigman and others.

Marilyn Mills Features Carry Thrills

rigue, suspense, thrills and heart interest, and is a well knit, logical and absorbing piece of fiction that has not been spoiled in its transition from magazine to celluloid.

According to J. Charles Davis, II, president of Davis Distributing Division, Inc. and second vice-president of Vital Exchanges Inc. "Hearts and Fists" will be followed with other productions from the Weaver Studios, all of an equally "big business" calibre. Detailed announcement concerning these subsequent releases will be made at a later date.

Scenes displaying the remarkable versatility of Marilyn Mills, star of "Tricks," "Three Pals," and others to follow in a series of stirring melodramas which Davis Distributing Division is releasing through Vital Exchanges. She is equally at home in Western and Society roles.

Guaranteed Pictures, Inc.

There is always something new under the sun in the Independent Production field, and in the organization of "Guaranteed Pictures, Inc." there has doubtless been set a precedent that will be followed with profit by other Independents.

"Guaranteed" pictures is, like all Gaul, divided into three parts, each part being an integral part of the whole organization and inseparable from it. Through these three parts Guaranteed Pictures, Inc. finances, produces and distributes its output to Independent exchanges and exhibitors.

The financial end of the organization is The Aetna Finance Corporation of Los Angeles. The production is handled by Ben Wilson, and distribution is by Davis Distributing Division, Inc.

Originally the Aetna Finance Corporation of Los Angeles was the money interest back of the projected making of five James Oliver Curwood pictures and a series of eight from the widely read novels of General Charles King. Davis Distributing Division, Inc., had a contract for the release of these pictures which were being produced at that time by Clifford S. Elfelt. When Elfelt left the film business to look after his other interests, E. A. Aggeler, President of Aetna agreed to carry through the contracts previously made with Davis Distributing. He realized the possibilities of proper financing for Independent Producers provided suitable distribution arrangements were assured in advance. Having come in contact with methods of Davis Distributing Division in handling the sales of the Elfelt output, Mr. Aggeler called in J. Charles Davis, 2nd, of that concern and Ben Wilson, star and producer and outlined a plan.

This plan called for the formation of the three-unit company in which the finance, production and distribution elements should be equally represented. To accomplish this end, Guaranteed Pictures, Inc., was formed for the specific purpose of delivering to Independent Exchanges and Exhibitors the five pictures from the James Oliver Curwood books, and the eight complete pictures from the books of Brig. Gen. Charles King which they had contracted to take. In addition to this, Guaranteed pictures will finance, produce and distribute such other product as may be agreed upon by the triumvirate.

In this combination of essential forces, the company is equally owned by its three component branches, and each division receives the same profit that it would if working independently. In other words, the finance company has its money working at a normal profit, the producer receives his salary and expenses, and the distributor earns his usual percentage for distribution. But with the three closely allied, and working in unison, each is thoroughly cognizant with what the other branches are doing, and all are thereby able to eliminate overcharges, waste, lost time and high overhead, and give to the world "Better Pictures for Less Money."

Of the fourteen productions guaranteed, eleven have already been completed. "My Neighbor's Wife" and "The Gold Hunters" both from James Oliver Curwood's books, have been turned over to Davis Distributing Division, and the next of the series, "The Courage of Captain Plum," is in production. Of the General Charles King series, "Under Fire," "Warrior Gap," "Fort Frayne" and "A Daughter of the Sioux" are ready for release and work on the balance of the series is under way. "Law or Loyalty" is also ready for release.

Aetna Finance Corporation is one of the strongest and best known of the financing companies on the West Coast. They have been in business for many years, and though not so old in the motion picture game as some, have financed many projects. The president is Mr. E. A. Aggeler, General manager of the Aggeler-Musser Seed Co., the largest dealers in seeds and bulbs west of the Rockies. Mr. J. L. Mauldin, vice-president, is a retired capitalist and Mr. H. E. O'Brien, secretary and treasurer, has been for the past fifteen years Special Agent and Adjuster for Southern California and Arizona for the Aetna Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn.

Ben Wilson, as the producing factor of Guarantee Pictures has a record that goes back to the beginning of the Industry. He has starred in innumerable pictures and in the past few years has been producing as well as directing and acting. He has made a number of serials, "The Blue Fox," "Santa Fe Trail," "Man of the North," "Days of '49," "Riders of the Plains," has recently completed "The Mystery Box" in which he co-stars with Miss Neva Gerber, for Davis Distributing Division release. He is now working on a second serial for this same company entitled "The Power God" which through a tie-up with a Midwestern syndicate has been nationally advertised in over sixty magazines and six hundred newspapers.

The Davis Distributing Division, Inc., of New York, became the largest independent distributors in the state right market within six months after its organization. Through Vital Exchanges, Inc., it now has national distribution.

In addition to the entire output of Guaranteed Pictures, Inc., Davis Distributing Division, Inc., has fifty-two comedies, two serials, six two-reelers without sub-titles, and a series of single reel novelties as short subject balance for programs, and four superspecials, "Tales of a Thousand and One Nights" made abroad; "Red Love" an unusual story of the American Indian of today; "The Red Kimono" produced by and with Mrs. Wallace Reid; and "Hearts and Fists," a story of the big timber from the pen of Clarence Buddington Kelland and produced by H. C. Weaver in Tacoma.

The formation of Guaranteed Pictures, Inc., in no way interferes with other production arrangements of the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., or other financing activities of Aetna Finance Corporation, but simply creates a strong combination of the three vital elements of motion picture business for the purposes specified, that is, finance, production and distribution.

"Law Or Loyalty"

A stirring drama of the great North Woods, with a throbbing love story interwoven, makes "Law Or Loyalty" a picture of extraordinary merit and box-office appeal. It is alive with spine-tickling action and suspense. Tragedy and comedy move thru the tale with attention-attracting realness. In fact, every element vital to a great film is incorporated in this production, which is unanimously being greeted as an outstanding picture—a cinema which brings both smiles and tears and leaves an audience the happier for having seen it.

"1001 Nights" is Brilliant Spectacle

Featured in the competent cast is Lawson Haris, former Broadway legitimate star, whose silversheet experience includes service with Australian producers. Other players who grace the story are: Dolores Dorian, Robert Walker, Richard Sutherland, James Stevens, "Buddy" Duey, Ray Brooks, Thomas Price, George Fox, Steve Ludlow and Bertram Tracey. Clifford S. Elfelt made the production for Davis Distributing Division.

"Under Fire"

As American literature of the frontier period has been enriched by the novels of General Charles King, U. S. A., so has the films been enriched by the productions made from his stories for Davis Distributing Division, Inc. "Under Fire," the first of a series of eight features made from his undying tales, is a tasty sample of what is to follow. It embodies the glamour and thrills of pioneer days recorded as only such a soldier as General King could record them. This is the sort of a picture that never fails to "get over" with any class of audience.

William (Bill) Patton gives a sterling performance as the featured member of the cast. He is ably supported by Bert Lindley, Jean Arthur, Erving Renard, Harry Moody, Catherine Calhoun, Norbert Miles, James Gibson, Boris Karloff, William Calles, Fred Burns and Flo Gibson. The story, adapted for the screen by Frank Howard Clark, was filmed by Clifford S. Elfelt.

"Tricks"

Distinctly out-of-the-ordinary entertainment is "Tricks," in which discriminating movie fans are certain to find precisely the kind of drama they appreciate. This production fairly brims over with hair-raising stunts of horsemanship performed by daring, charming Marilyn Mills and action that is high-powered and continuous. In addition to the fast-moving action on the ranch there is a boarding school sequence which is a knockout for genuine comedy—the sort that appeals to every type of movie goer. You will find box-office kicks injected with telling force in each reel.

"Tricks" is a sample of the intelligent direction of Bruce Mitchell, the story being the work of Mary C. Bruning. Miss Mills, its star, has won the eulogy of the critics as an actress who can ride a bad-acting horse as effectively as the best of the highly-touted male screen luminaries and who can really act as well. Adequate support is given the star by the following players: J. Frank Glendon, Gladys Moore, Myles McCarthy, Dorothy Vernon, William Lowery and Harry Valeur.

"$50,000 Reward"

Hazardous feats of horsemanship, combined with action-full story, make "$50,000.00 Reward" an outstanding film tale of Western life. Ken Maynard, star of the production, believes that thrills must be provided at all costs and risks and the daredevil stunts he pulls in this picture testify both to his ability and his courage.

Maynard plays his role with understanding and vigor. He knows what the box-office needs by way of entertainment and never fails to inject it in each picture he appears in. Maynard is the chap who played Paul Revere in Marion Davies' "Janice Meredith." Supporting him is winsome Esther Ralston, who has occupied feature roles in such Paramount films as "The Beggar on Horseback." Others who contribute excellent performances are: Bert Lindley, Frank Whitson, Ed Peil, Lillian Leighton, Charles Newton, William Moran, Ananias Beery, Jr., Augusta Ain, and the Hollywood Beauty Sextette—Nancy Zann, Fern Lorraine, Olive Trevor, Grace Fay, Katheryn DeForrest and Edith Flynn. Clifford S. Elfelt directed the picture from the story written and adapted by Frank Howard Clark.

These stills give some idea of the Oriental splendor and magnificence portrayed in "The Tale of the Thousand and One Nights," a Davis Distributing Division special released through Vital Exchanges. This Arabian Nights fantasy contains some of the most beautiful settings and effects ever photographed, and features a carefully selected cast of distinguished artists.

"Fighting Courage"

Thrills crowd each other in "Fighting Courage," a hair-raising

"Peggy of Secret Service" is Popular

Western melodrama starring hard-riding Ken Maynard. This is the type of picture that an exhibitor can play with the assurance that it contains every possible box-office magnet and that it is a positive means of lining 'em up outside. Dull moments are totally unknown in this production, which provides action with all desirable rapidity.

Ken Maynard is distinctly a he-man as well as a splendid horseman and actor. The work of the remainder of the cast, Peggy Montgomery, Melford McDowell, Frank Whitson, Henry Ward, James Barry, Jr. and Gus Saville, is beyond criticism. The direction is by Clifford S. Elfelt, the story by Frank Howard Clark. Included in the cast is "Tarzan," Maynard's wonderfully human horse, and the "Hollywood Beauty Sextette," a group of authentically easy-to-look-upon misses who would make any Ziegfeld chorus envious.

"My Neighbor's Wife"

As every alert exhibitor knows the name of James Oliver Curwood means something to hundreds of thousands of people thruout the world who have spent breathless hours reading his outdoor novels. "My Neighbor's Wife" is the first of a series of five pictures made for Davis Distributing Division from Curwood novels. This picture is different from the usual run of pictures and also from the usual Curwood story. In fact it tells a story within a story.

A young actor who thinks he has directorial ability wants to make a picture from the Curwood novel "My Neighbor's Wife." His difficulties in raising the money and casting the picture form a frame within which the production of the Curwood story is shown. The picture is successfully completed and sold to state right buyers whereupon the actor-director wins the girl, and father-in-law presents him with the amount of money he had previously loaned for the making of the picture.

The cast which presents this unique picture is truly one of "big names," comprising people who have an enviable rating with dyed-in-wool cinema fans. Here is the splendid list: Herbert Rawlinson, Wyndham Standing, Mildred Harris, Grace Darmond, William Russell, Helen Ferguson, Thomas Santschi, Margaret Loomis, Marie Walcamp, Richard Travers, Edward Davis, William Norton Bailey, Chester Conklin, Dan Mason, Ralph Faulkner, Frank Leigh, Phillippe De Lacy, Charles Gerrard, Lucien Littlefield and Mason Mitchell. The calibre of direction is indicated by the fact that the production was made under the supervision of John Ince, the actual direction being by Clarence Geldert, who has a reputation of his own. The adaptation is by Perry Vekroff.

"The Gold Hunters"

"The Gold Hunters" is an intensely fascinating mystery drama of the North based upon the story by James Oliver Curwood, dean of the writers of life in the little-known regions of North America. In the original, the tale is dramatically absorbing but it has been manifestly enhanced thru its intelligent screen interpretation. Especially will it find an enthusiastic welcome from the fans who delight in well-told stories of the northern wilderness, pictures teeming with action and suspense.

Credit for a smashing box-office production goes to Guaranteed Pictures, Inc., to the director, Paul Hurst, and to the excellent cast. Every real film fan is familiar with the work of the principals: David Butler, Hedda Nova, Mary Carr and Bull Montana. The supporting players, each of whom give a convincing performance, are: Jimmy Aubrey, Al Hallett, Noble Johnson, Frank Elliott, John T. Prince, William Humphrey and Kathryn McGuire.

More Curwood Classics

There are three more James Oliver Curwood classics in the series of five being produced for Davis Distributing Division, Inc., and there is every indication that each one is destined to be a box-office smash—and a resounding one, at that. The first two productions of the series, "My Neighbor's Wife" and "The Gold Hunters," are obviously built to please movie-goers everywhere in this film-mad sphere. Executives who are informed concerning the stories of the remaining three and various details of production plans confidently express the opinion that they will equal if not exceed their predecessors in popularity.

"The Courage of Captain Plum" is an absorbing mystery special concerning the strange adventure of a young ship's captain in a weird city. The story carries conviction as well as entertainment and thrills galore. It is now in course of production.

Public demand forced Curwood to write "The Wolf Hunters" as a sequal to "The Gold Hunters" and there is every reason to believe that when the hundreds of thousands of his enthusiasts see the story in silversheet form, they will not be disappointed. It is a stupendous melodrama in which a man fights for happiness and success against overwhelming odds.

Several scenes from "Peggy of the Secret Service," the first feature of a series under that title, starring Peggy O'Day, the "Thrill Girl," in daring and colorful situations. Written and supervised by Finis Fox, and produced by S. Cole, these Davis-Vital productions give Miss O'Day every opportunity for her best work to date.

Powerful Drama in "Hearts and Fists"

"Warrior Gap"

The true spirit of the border, when white man and Indian clashed for the supremacy of the West, has been injected in "Warrior Gap," one of the famous General Charles King series being released by Davis Distributing Division, Inc. Both the Indian and military atmospheres have been achieved with striking success and the entire production has an authentic ring. The plot itself is one that cannot fail to captivate the interest of all, especially in view of the fact that it is interpreted by such a veteran of Western historical films as Ben Wilson.

Neva Gerber plays opposite Wilson with her usual brilliance and understanding of her role. In the supporting cast are: Ruth Royce, Dick Hatton, William Patten, Robert Walker, Jim Welch and Lafe McKee. Alvin J. Neitz directed the production, which is from the schedule of Guaranteed Pictures, Inc. From beginning to end the picture has been produced without economy in production costs, the sole objective being to create a film with a maximum of film fan interest. Trade reviewers who have inspected the opus, judging from their criticisms, agree that the objective has been attained to a gratifying degree.

Three of the high spots from "Hearts and Fists," an H. C. Weaver production, with John Bowers and Marguerite de la Motte heading an unusually strong cast. It is a story of "big timber," filmed right in the heart of the big timber country. A Davis Distributing Division release through Vital Exchanges.

"Fort Frayne"

A notable member of the General Charles King series, depicting early frontier life in the West, is "Fort Frayne," which teems with action thruout. Ben Wilson, who directed the production as well as co-starred with charming Neva Gerber, took every pains to see that the historical background is accurate in all details and consequently the picture is an invaluable contribution to American film history of post-Civil War days. Every few feet of film is punctuated with thrills and unalloyed excitement and excellent "soft touches" are provided by the winsome love theme.

"Fort Frayne" is a product of Guaranteed Pictures, Inc., its adaptation from General King's novel being made by George M. Pyper. The story is interpreted by a cast of experienced players, including: Ruth Royce, Bill Patton, Lafe McKee, Minna Ferry Redman, Lou Meehan, Major McGuire and Joe de la Cruze.

"A Daughter of the Sioux"

A stirring drama of the frontier days, in which a supposedly Indian girl is suspected of betraying vital secrets to the Redskins, is vividly unfolded in "A Daughter of the Sioux," one of the praiseworthy General Charles King series. The story proper is an intensely dramatic one and is enhanced by authentic atmosphere. Children as well as adults will find this Davis Distributing Division production educational from a historical angle as well as decidedly entertaining.

This is a Ben Wilson production made by Guaranteed Pictures, Inc., with Wilson directing as well as playing the male lead. Neva Gerber is co-starred and other members of the cast are: Robert Walker, Fay Adams, William Lowery and Rhody Hathaway. George W. Pyper adapted the story for screen purposes. The entire film has received warm approval from newspaper and trade paper critics, who herald it as a "splendid chronicle of American frontier life."

Four Frontier Features

The balance of the General Charles King series, which will be available in the near future, consists of: "Tonio, Son of the Sierras," "Apache Princess," "Starlight Ranch" and "Worst Man of the Troop." These pictures breathing the unquenchable spirit of the American frontier are worthy successors to their four predecessors. They are designed to hit the box office with a veritable Florida real estate boom crash.

In "Tonio, Son of the Sierras," Ben Wilson, producer of the series thru his company, Guaranteed Pictures, Inc., has filmed a stirring tale in which engagements between the Redskins and the cavalrymen figure prominently. Like a tornado, action sweeps thru the production.

Air Thrills Feature of "Flyin' Thru"

"Apache Princess" unfolds the touching love story of an Indian maid and tells with a poignant touch, the difficulties she and her white lover fight to overcome before attaining happiness and peace. Tragedy and comedy equally find expression in this great picture.

Conditions in the West during the post-Civil War period are reflected with admirable sincerity in "Starlight Ranch," which embraces an alluring love tale flanked by red-hot action.

"The Worst Man in the Troop" is typical of the other General Charles King productions placed against a picturesque military background.

In all of this series handled by Davis Distributing Division, Inc., the featured players are Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber and the casts include such favorites as Robert Walker, Dick Hatton, Ruth Royce, William Patten, Jim Welch and Lafe McKee.

Al Wilson—Movie Ace

If there is an aviator qualified to talk of stunt flying in the motion picture industry today, Al Wilson is the man. Al has associated with airplanes since they were in the incubator stage and has followed each evolution in their development with intense interest. He is familiar with every kink and wrinkle in their system. To promenade over a machine tearing through the ozone gives him no more thrills than is experienced by the carpenter climbing his ladder or the average New Yorker struggling through the subway jam. But the people who watch him do his stuff in the series of pictures in which he is starring for Davis Distributing Division, Inc., cannot sit immune from thrills and spine-ticklers as they gaze at his death-inviting feats.

"And Speaking of Aces"

There is little chance of losing when a person holds six aces at one time, and that is what Davis Distributing, Division, Inc., claims to have in the Al Wilson Aviation "Ace" series of six death defying stunt pictures which are being released through Vital Exchanges, Inc.

Leading off with "Flyin' Thru," the first "ace" in their hand, "D. D. D." offers "Flyin' Thru" to Independent exhibitors all over the world and dares anybody to produce a trump that can take that trick. "Flyin' Thru" is the story of an aviator who returns from heroic service in France to find his father serving a life sentence in prison as the supposed murderer of his nearest neighbor. The "ace" sets out to find the real murderer, and after a series of thrilling adventures, including a fight with a pirate plane above the clouds, runs the murderer to earth, the father is released from prison, and the murdered man's daughter becomes the aviator's bride.

Davis Distributing Division, Inc. and Vital Exchanges are enthusiastically pushing the series of which "Flyin' Thru" is scheduled as No. 1. The stories for the other five have been selected, and the second is now in production.

"Three Pals"

"Three Pals" of the Marilyn Mills eight is a splendid vehicle for this charming young woman. In it she has several opportunities to display her extraordinary riding skill, and to feature her beloved equine pals "Beverly" and "Star" to her heart's content.

Set in the Blue Grass country, "Three Pals" deals with the fiery tempers of a Kentucky Colonel and a Southern Major — and the love affairs of their daughter and son respectively.

"Beverly" and "Star" do much more than a "bit" in the work of capturing the man who shot the Major from ambush, and many a two-footed detective could copy their logical line of reasoning with profit.

Three of the thrill and comedy moments in "Flyin' Thru," an Al Wilson production in which the "movie ace" is said to excel all previous efforts in the way of hazardous airplane stunts. The story combines melodrama, romance and comedy in pleasing proportions, and is a Davis Distributing Division release through Vital Exchanges.

The big punch of the picture—or rather the two big punches, take place on the race track. Once when the two young people race each other in an effort to determine which stable possesses the swiftest thoroughbred, and once when the girl enters the "Owners Sweepstakes" at the last minute and rides "Beverly" to victory before a crowded grandstand. Both races are thrillers of the highest type, and both demonstrate that Miss Mills can "jockey" with the best of them.

Davis Distributing Division and Vital Exchanges as well as other distributors handling Davis product report an exceptonal amount of interest in the Mills productions and their refreshing and intriguing stars.

"The Demon Rider"

Set in a background of some of nature's wildest mountains, the action in "The Demon Rider" matches the scenery perfectly.

It is proving a joy to all those addicted to the whoop-'em-up western type of picture, as well as making converts of many who have heretofore scorned pictures dealing with the rougher side of life.

This particular Maynard masterpiece gives the handsome and debonair Ken ample opportunity to set several thousand more feminine hearts aflutter and to show to the world just what an actor his beloved pal, "Tarzan," "King of all horses" really is. This latter pleases Ken more than having the spotlight turned on himself. There is little doubt but that the femininity of filmdom is rapidly taking Ken Maynard to their hearts, and if fan mail counts for anything, certain other representatives of the genus "cowboy" had best begin practicing up on some new stunts.

Vital Exchanges, Inc., and distributors of Davis product before the organization of Vital are attending to the physical distribution of the entire Maynard series, of which "The Demon Rider" is third on the list.

"The Haunted Range"

Ghost stories are certainly a novelty in pictures of the "Great out-doors," and when one throws in an "obstacle race" over several miles of mountain country, with members of a desperate gang of cattle thieves stationed at intervals along the way, each intent in some manner or other on taking the racer's life you can make up your mind you are not going to be bored.

That's "The Haunted Range"—one of the Ken Maynard "8" and one of the pictures Davis distributing Division, Inc., is distributing through Vital Exchanges—"except in territories not under contract"—as the slug line on all the advertising copy reads at present.

"The Haunted Range" isn't just a story about a ghost—the ghost is right there, riding as ghosts should, in spooky white garments surrounded by a strange light and "hitting the high spots" along the crest of a mountain range.

Ken's job is to "lay" the ghost, and how he does it makes one of the most absorbing western pictures released for many a day.

The story offers opportunity for a different line of exploitation than can usually be given to a "western," even a "super-western"—and both the Davis and Vital offices report that it is showing every indication of being a box-office gold mine.

"The Grey Vulture"

That Ken Maynard lad or J. Charles Davis, 2nd, or somebody connected with the Maynard productions, the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., or the Vital Exchanges, must be a whiz when it comes to selecting stories that will make the Maynard series stand out among other "westerns" like a Follies Girl at an old maid's convention.

In "The Grey Vulture" Ken turns to comedy, and with a prologue set in the "Days of old when Knights were bold" gives a hilarious exhibition of the present day adventures of a knight of the Great Open Spaces afflicted with a Chivalry complex.

The fact that there is a real drama running through the story, and that it is plentifully sprinkled with fights, stage hold-ups and other fixtures of Western literature does not detract from the newness of the entire idea—rather these things add to it because the author has used them in such surprising ways.

"The Grey Vulture" has all the earmarks of a box-office ace, and orders are already being placed for prints, though the release date has not yet been definitely set.

Short Subject Line-Up

J. Charles Davis, 2nd, president of Davis Distributing Division, Inc., pins his faith to the idea of the balanced program. He believes that as many features "flop" because they are shown in the wrong kind of company as because they are in themselves poor pictures. Vice versa, he believes that many a mediocre picture that otherwise would have been a flop has been put over with carefully selected short subjects.

Almost every exhibitor realizes that he must have a news-reel, and one or two short subjects in addition to his feature, but there is where a too-large proportion of exhibitors stop. What kind of short subjects is left entirely to chance, and whatever is easiest to get and costs the least is most likely to go on the program. A careful check over a period of several months of the career of one of the outstanding productions of the past three years gave conclusive proof of how direct a bearing the rest of the program has on the success of a feature. In nearly every case during the investigation mentioned, an adverse report could be traced to "bad company." Can you imagine an exhibitor so foolish as to show a news-reel in which wrecks and disasters predominated, and five reels of animated diagrams with lengthy subtitles illustrating an abstract scientific theory as an "appetizer" for a serious historical drama in 9 reels? Hard to believe, but that is exactly what happened in a first run house in a city not many miles from New York—and then the exhibitor sent in a report that the feature didn't "go" with his patrons and attendance fell off steadily during the week.

Davis Distributing Division, Inc., selects its short subject product with infinite care, and with the exception of news-reels—is equipped to supply a perfectly balanced program for any house.

At the present time they have two series of comedies which, together, are delivered on a one-a-week schedule, and which afford the exhibitor a wide field for selection.

"Hey Fellas!"

The "Hey Fellas!" series of 26 kid comedies depict—according to the advertising matter—"The doin's and disasters of Young America" and are McKnight-Womack Productions. The popularity of children's antics as a basis for comedy is well known and the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., series is heralded as carrying a heavy load of laughs. The "Hey Fellas!" comedies were especially selected as the right balance for programs carrying a serious dramatic production as the feature; especially if the drama has a society background.

"Sheiks and Shebas"

The kid comedies are augmented by a series of "Sheiks and Shebas," also McKnight-Womack Productions consisting of 26 rib-ticklers portraying the "problems and perplexities" of our modern flapper. These are "dressed-up" comedies and were especially selected as a pleasing contrast for Character dramas or for pictures with a "period" setting.

If an exhibitor chooses one of the popular feature length comedies or comedy dramas as the main part of his program Davis Distributing Division can again offer him just the right contrast.

"A feature comedy certainly should not be 'paced' with slapstick" declares J. Charles. "Because I have seen that done so often, with disastrous results to both feature and short subject, I stocked up with what I consider the right balance for laugh-provoking features.

"Cinema Stars"

Mr. Davis refers to the F. Herrick Herrick "Fragments of Life" and to the R. B. Staub single reel novelties entitled "Cinema Stars" in which practically every popular or semi-popular screen star is shown in intimate scenes at work, at play and at home. These are like personal introduction to screen favorites and will fit in with most any program.

"Fragments of Life"

The "Fragments of Life" series is a distinct novelty in short subjects consisting of six two-reel dramas told entirely without subtitles. Beautiful photography and a real story in each of these make them a welcome addition to a program mainly set in a lighter vein.

In addition to the various short subjects produced in series the Davis Distributing Division has acquired a number of single reels of individual characteristics to help make the exhibitors life an easier one.

Vital Exchanges, as well as the other distributors through which "D. D. D." makes physical distribution handles the Davis Short subject product as well as the Davis features, and will supply an exhibitor with an entire "balanced program" if he so desire.

House-Packing Serials

In theatres where the serial is popular a thrilling episode picture is a guarantee of a full house, no matter what else may or may not be on the program. They have the same attraction as that which sells issue after issue of a magazine and builds up a huge circulation by printing an absorbing novel in tantalizing sequences.

The idea that a serial is merely a collection of hair-raising escapes from death with little continuity and no plot is all wrong, and the exhibitor who plays a serial picture with that thought in mind hasn't made much of a study of what a real serial is.

Al Ferguson Films Packed With Action

In order to offer to their customers a complete assortment of celluloid wares, Davis Distributing Division, Inc., has included in its product two super-serials, "The Mystery Box" and "The Power God," both produced by Ben Wilson, a master in the business of serial direction, and in both of which he co-stars with Neva Gerber who has appeared in many pictures with him.

These two serials are really novels in screen form. Each has a carefully worked out plot which is skillfully carried from episode to episode, holding the interest to the final chapter without sagging anywhere. Every episode is sufficiently complete to be of interest to the chance spectator yet they are not sufficiently separated from each other to spoil the continuity.

If chapter pictures have somewhat fallen into disfavor in certain types of playhouses in the past few years, the Davis Distributing Division offerings will go a long way toward returning them to their former pedestal of popularity.

Al Ferguson, the hard riding Western star, is the central figure in these scenes, which are from "A Fighting Romeo," a Davis release through Vital.

"The Power God"

The Power God is a fifteen episode serial written by Rex Taylor and Harry Haven, and directed by Ben Wilson who co-stars with Neva Gerber in the production. Each separate episode is one complete incident in the thrilling struggle to gain control of a marvelous engine, which generates power without the use of any known fuel.

Because of the great import of this marvelous invention, a syndicate in which is represented all of the power and fuel companies of the country, undertakes to get possession of the model and destroy it. The inventor, realizing the great importance of his discovery and fearing that the secret may be stolen, cunningly builds his engine in such a fashion that its secret can not be discovered even when the parts are completely assembled unless the secret of assembly is known in advance. He entrusts this final secret of assembly to his daughter, even keeping it from his trusted assistant who is thoroughly familiar with every other part of the mechanism.

The story begins with the unexppected death of the inventor and the struggles of the syndicate to wrest the secret from the daughter. An accident which causes the girl to lose her memory adds to the complications and but for the persistence of the inventor's assistant, who is also the girls' financee, the secret of the power engine would no doubt have passed into the hands of the syndicate and been delegated to oblivion. In a smashing climax in which the syndicate's representatives rushes for Washington with plans of the engine in order to take out the patent, the inventor's daughter and her lover attach the power engine to a "dead" locomotive and reach Washington with their model ahead of the others.

The Power God is a well-written, well-directed and carefully photographed story in which the episode climaxes build steadily and with sustaining interest to the final climax.

Released by Davis Distributing Division, Inc., this serial will soon be available to all exhibitors through Vital Exchanges, Inc., and its other distributors.

"The Mystery Box"

Good serials are sure-fire business builders which exhibitors can ill afford to let slip through their fingers. "The Mystery Box," featuring Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber, is a chapter play which is conclusively proving that it is constructed along box-office lines. Every one of its ten episodes is replete with thrills and suspense. It is positively the kind of serial that brings movie fans back to your house week after week with their mouths watering, so to speak, for the next exciting chapter.

In addition to the stars the cast consists of the following able players: Lafe McKee, Robert Walker, Charles Brinley, Alfred Hollingsworth and Jack Henderson. The story and direction is by Alvin J. Neitz, who handles both a pen and megaphone with equal skill and competence. Chapters in the serial are titled as follows: "The Fatal Box," "A Tragic Legacy," "Daring Danger," "A Leap for Life," "Defying Fate," "Trapped by Outlaws," "The Pendulum of Death," "The Miracle Rider," "Vengeance" and "Vindicated."

Dolly Hampton is left a "mystery box" with instructions to guard with her life. Her sweetheart, Jack Harvey, is accused of a murder but escapes the posse. Mysterious forces strive to gain possession of the troublesome box which brings ill fortune to many of its seekers. Airplane and other hair-raising stunts are interwoven in the plot which unfolds with rapid momentum until the much-anticipated explanation is provided and Dolly and Jack face a happy future.

"Haunting Hands"

"Haunting Hands" is a picture that was just naturally born to be a box-office knockout. In it the producers have managed to crowd every element that has ever helped push any picture over the top to success. Writteen by William T. Tilden, 2nd, for his first starring vehicle he has been able to put over the chamber he has elected to portray with the ease and adroitness of an old, experienced screen actor.

Thrills and Suspense in "Mystery Box"

Co-starring with William Tilden are Marjorie Daw and Ben Alexander; both box-office "names" with decided drawing power when shown in lights over the marquee. After signing up these three the producer apparently developed an insatiable taste for box-office "names" as the supporting cast bears witness.

In the scintillating array are: George Hackathorne, Walter Long, Kathryn Martin, George Nash, Hattie De Laro, George Marion, Edmund Breese, Effie Shannon, Tammany Young and Hugh Thompson.

The story, which has been deftly directed by George Terwilliger, is one of those "human interest" themes that has such a way of making smile and giving a swift tug at your heart strings at the same time.

William Tilden as a victim of asphasia and Marjorie Daw as a fugitive from the brutalities of a crook uncle are an extremely sympathetic pair; and Ben Alexander—running away from home rather than be parted from his beloved dog is a pathetic little boy. The sentimental part of the story is balanced with a counter-plot dealing with the activities of a gang of crooks and contains some breath-taking sequences.

"Haunting Hands" is a Davis Distributing Division offering released exclusively through Vital Exchanges and is one of the few pictures offering the exhibitor almost every type of exploitation in the category of showmanship.

Rex-Hedwig Laboratories

When Charles Davis, 2nd, president of Davis Distributing Division, Inc., put his o. k. on the slogan "Better Pictures For Less Money," he didn't lean back in his chair and call it a day by any means. He went into executive session with the other members of the firm to devise ways and means of making the policy expressed in the slogan come true.

One of the first steps was the selection of a laboratory with the same ideals which are the aim of the Davis Distributing Division.

Rex-Hedwig Laboratories which were established two years ago, bear on the firm's stationary a royal crown under which appears the words "Where Quality Reigns."

"Good!" said "J. Charles" when he saw it. "If they mean that fine!" An initial order was followed by other orders, each of which was turned out on schedule time and with the highest grade of workmanship, and the final result was a contract for the entire Davis Distributing Division product.

Rex-Hedwig Laboratories are much more than a workshop to W. K. Hedwig, President and organizer of the corporation. They are the realization of a dream that began when a boy in far-off Germany began delving into those branches of chemistry dealing with the art of photography and continued when as a student in the University Jena he won a scholarship which enabled him to continue his research work in Russia, Zapan, Argentine and Hungary.

Twenty years ago W. K. Hedwig came to the United States where he immediately became affiliated with one of the great American laboratories. He subsequently became manager, and then starting out "on his own," established the Rex Laboratories at Cliffside, N. J.

An acknowledged authority on all things laboratorial, Mr. Hedwig soon saw that his business was outgrowing his modest quarters so he moved to the present location at 220 West 19th Street, where, under the name "Rex-Hedwig Laboratories" he is still carrying on.

No matter how efficient and learned a man may be—he cannot put his high ideals into execution without a skilled and sympathetic personnel. For this reason Mr. Hedwig chooses the members of his staff carefully, and makes every effort to keep them when once they have been chosen.

One member of the Rex-Hedwig organization, who holds a diplomatic position, is J. A. Kent, an old timer in the film business who uses his vast acquaintenceship in the industry and his smiling personality as a medium for bringing Rex-Hedwig Laboratories and the Producers and Distributors together. The steadily increasing business at 220 West 19th Street is testimony of how well he accomplishes his mission, as is the fact that he was elected vice-president of the organization at a recent meeting of the stockholders.

L. L. Grotte is another member of the Rex-Hedwig Laboratories, Inc., who is partly responsible for the high standards maintained. of a million feet of film per week. They can do anything from destudent of Big Business in all its branches, Mr. Grotte administers the affairs of the organization with courtesy and decision. His attitude of genial co-operation is reflected in his entire staff and makes a visit to the Rex-Hedwig Laboratories a definite pleasure.

Rex-Hedwig Laboratories employ at a minimum from forty-five to fifty people, and have facilities for handling about three-quarters of a million feet of film per week. They can do anything from developing a roll of negative to evolving an elaborate art title and in every department "Quality" is the god which rules their performances.

Horsley Laboratories

Work on the newest addition to the Hollywood plant of the Wm. Horsley Laboratories, Inc., which will increase the capacity of this laboratory to one and one-half million feet per week, is being rapidly pushed forward under the personal guidance of William Horsley himself. To meet the increased demand for Horsley service, both by the "free lance" producer and those units having contracts with the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., and Vital Exchanges, Inc., Mr. Horsley is constructing a series of new buildings which will house the improved Thompson developing machinery, which, under pressure, can be speeded up to turn out nearly two million feet of positive prints weekly.

In a statement made public by Mr. Horsley, extolling the enterprise and business acumen displayed by J. Charles Davis 2nd., and his tie-up with the Vital group of exchange managers, he said:

"Mr. Davis' alignment with Vital Exchanges, Inc., will have a far-reaching effect toward the ultimate complete stabilization of the independent market.

"The independent producer who knows that a group of two-fisted and experienced sales executives are out to put his product over to the exhibitors cannot help but become imbued with the aggressive spirit displayed by the selling forces throughout the country; which means, in effect, that he, the producer will strive mightily to better the quality of each succeeding picture, thereby keeping intact the confidence placed in him by Mr. Davis and Vital Exchanges, Inc., when his release contracts were signed. More power to Mr. Davis. It's men of his measure who make the picture industry both interesting and profitable."

Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber in hair-raising moments from "The Mystery Box," the serial starring these two which the Davis Distributing Division will release through Vital Exchanges, Inc. The story centers about a mysterious little black box, coveted by the chief characters, and their struggle for its possession is said to lead them a merry and thrilling chase.

Strong Line-up of Stars for D. D. D.

"1001 Nights"

Over on the other side there is a director by the name of Mons. Tourjansky who, judging from the gorgeousness of the settings for "Tales of a Thousand and One Nights" might well be styled the "Cecil De Mille of of Europe."

Quick to appreciate the exquisite beauty of this Arabian Nights Fantasy The Davis Distributing Division Inc. has added it to their list of "Specials," and predicts for it a long career as a money maker.

Many of the most beautiful scenes are actual shots of the real places mentioned in the subtitles and the entire production gives one the feeling of having taken a ride on the well known Magic Carpet for a little jaunt through strange and far off lands.

Mlle. Kovanko and Mons. Rimsky, who as Princess Gul-Y-Hanur and Prince Soleiman head the cast, are players of rare ability and invest their roles with a humanness and sympathy rarely found in pictures of the Arabian Nights type.

"Red Love"

A fascinating, brimming-over-with-action melodrama of the American Indian of today is "Red Love," one of the Davis Distributing Division-Vital Exchanges Specials with which those two lively organizations are backing up their slogan—"Better Pictures for Less Money."

Photographed near an Indian reservation on the Dakota prairies this vivid story of the affairs of some of our "earliest Americans" is most convincing and realistic, and paints the Indian of modern times in a far different light than the generally accepted conception of the American Indian. There are some scenes taken in a school house on the Dakota prairies that are the real thing—and the "Fair" at which the Indians annually indulge in their native dances, in horse races and other sports is one of the few exhibitions of that kind that is all it seems to be.

The story is from the pen of L. Case Russell, who was born in South Dakota, knows the American Indian of today as few writers do, and has to her credit more than three hundred produced photoplays. It was directed by Edgar Lewis who has wielded a megaphone for most of the big producing companies in the industry at one time or another.

The cast is headed by John Lowell, whose career of cow-boy, civil engineer and army officer before going into pictures six years ago makes the role of "Thunder Cloud," the Carlisle-educated son of an Indian Chief, a particularly suitable one.

Playing opposite Mr. Lowell is Evangeline Russell, who has appeared with him in various other productions, notably "Floodgates" and "Lost in a Big City."

Others in the cast are F. Serrano Keating, William Calhoun, Anne Brody, William Cavanaugh who has probably played more Indian roles than any actor on the screen today, Wallace W. Jones, Charles W. Kinney, Frank Montgomery, Dexter McRaynolds and "Chick" Chandler.

Secret Service Series

It is a recognized fact that melodramas have a universal appeal — an appeal that finds gratifying expression at the box-office. That is why Davis Distributing Division, Inc., is offering thru Vital Exchanges, Inc., a series of eight Peggy O'Day thrillers calculated to strike the entertainment taste of the most critical of film fans. Comprising the series are: "Peggy of the Secret Service," "Peggy in Chinatown," "Peggy From Headquarters," "Peggy Under Orders," "Peggy on the Job," "Peggy in Danger," "Peggy Takes a Chance" and "Peggy Scores a Victory."

Miss O'Day, who causes an epidemic of thrills which saturates the entire series, is a versatile miss who acts and rides horseback with equal ease and distinction.

The series, produced by S. Cole, Inc., which Davis Distributing Division, Inc., is now handling comprises stories designed especially to give Miss O'Day every opportunity to display her wide range of work.

The Secret Service Series of stories were written by Finis Fox, the well-known author and film producer. In addition to writing the stories Mr. Fox is personally supervising each of the productions.

of the Secret Service" with captivating speed and charm. This picture, the first of a series of eight productions for Davis Distributing Division, Inc., is packed with box-office wallops — the kind that register with telling force on the house treasurer's books.

Miss O'Day, "The Thrill Girl," needs no introduction to movie enthusiasts as her performances with practically every Western star as brought her wide-spread popularity. Opposite her is Eddie Phillips, whose work in "Capital Punishment" brought him national commendation from the reviewers. Capable support is also contributed by: W. H. Ryno, Clarence Sherwood, Dan Peterson, Richard Neill, V. L. Barnes and Ethel Childers. The picture is produced by Mrs. S. Cole. Credit for the excellent direction is assigned to J. P. McGowan.

Al Ferguson Features

Six successes out of six productions might be spoken of as a "knockout" a "strike" or a "home-run" according to whether one happened to be a boxing fan, a bowling enthusiast or a follower of the national game. But no matter how one says it,—six out of six is a record worth talking about.

And that is what the reports to date show about the six J. J. Fleming productions starring Al Ferguson according to J. Charles Davis, II, President of Davis Distributing Division, Inc., which is releasing the series through Vital Exchanges, and its other distributors to the independent trade.

The six features which make the Fleming "perfect score" and which are rolling the dollars into the box offices of the exhibitors who show them are "Shackles of Fear," in which Al Ferguson is supported by Pauline Curley, Frank Clark, Les Bates, and Paul Emery; "The Trial of Vengeance" with Al Ferguson, Pauline Curley, Gary Sheilds, Frank Clark and Les Bates; "Phantom Shadows" with Al Ferguson supported by Lucille DuBois, F. Schumann-Heink and a splendid cast; "Scarlet and Gold," with Al Ferguson, Lucile DuBois and F. Shumann-Heink; "A Fighting Romeo" in which Al Ferguson is supported by Elaine Eastman, and "A Fighting Parson" with Al Ferguson, Lucille Dunbar, winner of an Oregon beauty contest.

Al Wilson

Al Wilson's interest in flying dates back to his boyhood days when he and his chums tinkered around with a home made aeroplane containing a motorcycle engine. Once he took a flyer in the jewelry store business at the inducement of his father and two brothers but the call of the open spaces was too great for him to resist and soon he was in the aviation school business in California. After acting as flying instructor to a Montana cattleman he made his debut in the movies. This was with Cecil B. DeMille in "We Can't Have Everything," in which he performed a hazardous stunt. His feat won the admiration of the producer, who engaged him as a personal flying instructor. Later, with DeMille he formed the Mercury Aviation Company and engaged in carrying passengers and running an aviation school.

Wilson next investigated the exhibition flights phase of aviation, refying the laws of gravity at fairs and carnivals. His fame soon landed him a contract to co-star in a picture.

Vital Has Strong Personnel at Head

WITH the formation of Vital Exchanges, Inc., under the leadership of David R. Hochreich, a new national distributing organization comes into being. Though national in scope this exchange system will be independent in action. It will handle exclusively the product of Davis Distributing Division, Inc. the largest independent releasing organization in the market.

Mr. Hochreich has long been identified in the motion picture industry and was for years one of the leading factors in the sales and distribution end of the Vitagraph Company of America. It was his original thought and is being carried out wherever possible to have the local exchange operated by former Vitagraph sales representatives.

The idea and the ideal of Vital Exchanges is to carry onward the spirit of Vitagraph, which lives in the men who were for so many years the guiders of its destiny for the various territories.

These men for many years have wanted to go into business for themselves. Loyalty to the old company prevented this. With the formation of Vital Exchanges, Inc. each local man will have an opportunity to share in the profits of his exchange.

One of the greatest problems which confronted the new organization when it was first conceived was to obtain the right kind and the necessary volume of product so that its exchanges could begin to function immediately. After many weeks of careful search and investigation of the companies and product available, it was found that Davis Distributing Division, Inc. was the one ideally suited to the plan. This resulted in the closing of a contract between Davis Distributing Division and Vital Exchanges, whereby the latter secured a five year franchise for handling the entire output of the former in the United States and Canada.

This contract covers all pictures now being released in territories where they had not been previously contracted for and all future releases of Davis Distributing Division, Inc., from the period commencing on September 1, 1925.

In territories where the Davis Distributing product is under contract to other exchanges the distributor has made provision to supply sufficient additional pictures for the Vital Exchange to operate efficiently. This will insure the operation of a complete group of Vital Exchanges as soon as possible.

Well-Known Directorate

Associated with Mr. Hochreich in the management of Vital Exchanges, Inc. is an extremely strong Board of Directors. The chairman of the board is Leo A. Price, President of the Associated Banking Corporation. Mr. Price is well-known in financial circles and his rise from office-boy to banker is an example of steady plugging. Years ago he started as office-boy with Abraham and Strauss, later joining M. & C. Mayer and after that Radley & Son. From there he went with R. H. White and Company of Boston. He later became associated with Rothberg and Company, one of New York's popular priced department stores. Within a short period of time he was made a partner and later bought out his partner, and became the sole owner. Subsequently he formed and is now the controlling factor in the Associated Banking Corporation.

The other members of the board of directors of Vital Exchanges, Inc. are David R. Hochreich, president of the company, Arthur L. Price, vice-president, J. Charles Davis, 2nd, the second vice-president and president of Davis Distributing Division, Inc., Walter Cohn, secretary and treasurer, J. K. Adams, vice-president and secretary of Davis Distributing Division, Inc., and William Hedwig of the Rex-Hedwig Laboratories, Inc. Senator Abraham Kaplan is the general-counsel for both corporations.

The home office personnel, in addition to Mr. Hochreich consists of Milton Kempner assistant to the president, Max F. C. Goosman assistant general manager and Henry E. Genet home office manager.

The home office now located at 218 West 42nd Street will transfer to new quarters at 729-7th Avenue, New York as soon as the premises can be made ready for occupancy.

Many in Operation

Many of the local exchanges are already in operation. Albany and Buffalo will be under the direction of Richard C. Fox. The Albany office is located at No. 4 Clinton Avenue and the Buffalo exchange is at 257 Franklin Street. The Boston Vital Exchange will be located at 44 Court Street under the direction of Henry L. Segal. Mr. Segal formerly had the Davis Distributing Division franchise for New England and when this was taken over by Vital Exchanges, Inc., he decided to stay with the product.

The offices at Cleveland and Cincinnati and one later to be opened at Indianapolis will be under the general managership of Harry A. Lande. The Cleveland address is 21st Street and Payne Avenue and the Cincinnati office is at Pioneer and Broadway. The New York Exchange located at 729-7th Avenue, on the same floor as the home office, will be under the management of Jules Sarzin. The Philadelphia office which is handling everything except the Davis Distributing short subjects is located at 1322 Vine Street. Dave Segal and Mike Levinson will take care of the Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware territory.

The Pittsburgh exchange is organized under the supervision of Otto R. Kurtz a former Vitagraph man with a staff composed almost entirely of ex-employees of that company. The Milwaukee exchange will be in charge of Walter E. Baier at 713 Wells Street. Mr. Baier formerly had the franchise for Davis Distributing Division product.

There will be five offices in Canada where the company will be known as the Vital Exchanges of Canada, Ltd. R. J. Homney, formerly with Vitagraph has established a home office at 27 Prince William Street, St. John, New Brunswick, and will have be known as the Vital Exchanges of Canada, Ltd. R. J. Romney, Building at Toronto, and at Van Couver and Winnipeg, at addresses to be announced later.

High Grade Product

Probably there is no name better known in the picture business as a box-office-draw than that of James Oliver Curwood.

A series of five pictures from the pen of this great author of the outdoors is being offered to the Independent exhibitor. "My Neighbor's Wife" and "The Gold Hunters" are both ready. "The Courage of Captain Plum' is in production and "Tentacles of the North" and "The Wolf Hunters" will follow along in that order. "My Neighbor's Wife" has a twenty star cast headed by Herbert Rawlingson, Mildred Harris, Tom Santchi, William Russell and a regular "Who's Who" of Hollywood. "The Gold Hunters" features David Butler, Hedda Nova, Bull Montana, Mary Carr and Jimmie Aubrey and was directed by Paul Hurst.

There are eight pictures which have been produced from the novels of General Charles King. He knows, probably better than any past or present writer, the hectic and the very stirring days following the Civil War, and as army officer and Indian fighter he has recorded the deeds and heroisms of that stirring era in his immortal works. The series includes "Under Fire," which stars Bill Patton. The seven which co-star Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber are, "Warrior Gap"; "Tonio, Son of the Sierras"; "Apache Princess"; "Starlight Ranch"; Worst Man of the Troop"; Way of the West"; "From The Ranks." This latter group were all made under the supervision of Mr. Wilson personally.

Of the eight Marilyn Mills de luxe specials which feature this charming young lady and her super-intelligent horses, "Star" and "Beverly" two have been completed. "Tricks" is read for release and "Three Pals" will follow it very shortly. The third picture is in production and is yet titled. "Long Odds" will have a National Advertising and Publicity campaign through a circulation syndicate in the Middle West in newspapers and magazines throughout the United States. Other pictures in this series will be "The Killer" "Fleet Foot" and "White Fury."

Three stills suggestive of the action in "Haunting Hands," starring Wm. T. Tilden, 2nd, with Ben Alexander, Marjory Daw and a strong cast, released by Davis through Vital.

Al Wilson, whose life story appeared in the Saturday Evening Post in September of this year is making a series of six pictures filled with aeroplane thrills. The first of these has been completed and is entitled "Flyin' Thru" in which he does enough air-raising stunts to fill a serial.

Finis Fox, well-known author and director has written a series thrilling detective melodramas based on the adventures of a secret service operative. This series will star Peggy O'Day, better known as "the Thrill Girl," and the first picture, "Peggy of the Secret Service" is ready for immediate booking. The others will follow in short order and will probably be released about one a month.

The newest star on the horizon of western characters in "Ken" Maynard. Every critic of every trade paper has given him high praise. Every exhibitor who has played his pictures wants more. One exhibitor in particular told his local exchange that he would pay two and one-half times as much for the second picture of the series as he did for the first. That is the real test of box-office value. The first five of the series have been completed and are "Fighting Courage"; "$50,000 Reward"; "The Demon Rider"; "The Hunted Range"; "The Gray Vulture"; The sixth is in production the other two will follow through to the exhibitors.

VITAL EXCHANGES, Inc. is a strong national releasing organization formed by my associates and myself to serve the independent exhibitors of the United States and Canada, with a good consistent volume of product at "Live and let live" prices.

VITAL EXCHANGES, Inc. uses in its transactions with the exhibitor the only fair and equitable exchange-exhibitor contract in the motion picture industry.

For the exhibitor we have rewritten the exhibitor's contract, one of the chief features of which provides for the submission of any disagreements to a board of arbitration, one of whom is selected by the exhibitor, one by the exchange manager and these two agree upon the third. We believe this is the fairest exhibitor's contract ever devised.

In securing the product to be sold by our exchanges, after a careful search, we selected the pictures of the Davis Distributing Division, Inc. as exactly the type of productions that would appeal to the independent exhibitor everywhere week after week, year after year.

Our contract with the Davis Distributing Division is for five years, and our confidence in the personal ability of J. Charles Davis 2nd, President, and J. K. Adams, Vice-president of the Davis Distributing organization assures us they can deliver the goods to Vital Exchanges.

Vital Exchanges proudly offers these productions to the Exhibitors of the United States and Canada.

Sioux City Blanketed For "Phantom Of The Opera"

The campaign for "The Phantom of the Opera" in Sioux City, where it played the Plaza Theatre, was designed to achieve as near "complete coverage" as the appropriation would permit. The range of stunts and advertising was such that "The Phantom" and the Plaza were carried home to about all of the prospective customers of the show.

The campaign opened with a "Phantom" face drawing contest in the Sioux City Journal as suggested in the Universal Press Book. For a week before opening, the paper carried a two column display ad containing a drawing of the "Phantom's" face with the features blocked out. Three cash prizes and ten tickets were offered for those who could best fill in these features as the Phantom would look in the picture. More than 175 entries were received in this contest.

To stimulate matinee business a tie-up was made with a local department store whereby in exchange for a complete window display the theatre gave passes to each woman who purchased a copy of Leroux's novel or a "Phantom Red" lipstick between the hours of 8:30 and 11 a.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Through the Home Office "Phantom Red" tie-up, the Fishgal store, an exclusive woman's specialty shop, put on an elaborate window of "Phantom Red." The Display consisted of "Phantom Red" dresses, gowns, coats, and hats with a display of tie-up photos and a card calling attention to the Plaza engagement. The store devoted a portion of its Sunday ad to "Phantom Red" and also induced the Journal to run a news story about the window display.

The "Showing the Making of a Motion Picture" display worked out by the Home Office and used by Scribner's during the New York "Phantom" campaign was placed in a kodak store window.

Through the Public Library, 300 "Phantom" Book Marks were distributed, and another hundred were given out by the book departments of two of the city's department stores.

Five thousand of the roto heralds were placed in the Chicago Sunday newspapers, which were sold in Sioux City on the day "The Phantom" opened.

Other tie-ups included drug stores, radio dealers, and the Postal Telegraph. The prologue soloist broadcast the "Spinning Wheel" song from Faust just before the Sunday afternoon performance of the opening day.

A large effect with star cut-outs. Lobby display for First National's "The Heart of a Siren" at the Strand Theatre, Nashville, Tenn.

Work Merchant Tie Up On "New Brooms"

Owing to the ease with which its title can be worked up into a co-operative stunt, "New Brooms" has had many tie ups with stores in towns everywhere. Two recent reports on the picture relate effective stunts which were staged in Pueblo and Lockport.

Manager G. T. Cruzen of the Palace at Lockport arranged a tie up with a local vacuum cleaner agency, the latter putting on a window display featuring their machines and some brooms. The reader directly tied up with the theatre by stressing the fact that the Palace was showing "New Brooms" and that the house was cleaned by "Torringtons."

At Pueblo a grocery store aided Manager E. P. Briggs of the Rialto theatre, by showing a broom in a window, with free tickets for prizes for those calculating most accurately the number of straws in the displayed article.

"White Desert" Atmosphere At Old Mill

As one of the leading items of a campaign for "The White Desert," the Old Mill in Dallas, Tex., staged a prologue which had atmosphere and the advantages of simplicity and inexpensiveness. A back drop featuring snow capped peaks with a log cabin represented beneath them was provided with an open doorway, in which a girl singer, dressed in a costume similar to that worn by Claire Windsor in the picture rendered "Colorado" and "Winter Memories."

The campaign included a tie up with the Hudson Bay Fur Company, which used a big window display. Representation in several other windows was obtained with scene stills and small announcement cards of the Old Mill engagement.

Leading feature of the campaign which Manager A. S. Grist of the Strand theatre, Asheville, staged for "The White Desert" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer), was the lobby display illustrated above. The title was displayed in a cut-out sign over the lobby arch. A mixture of sand and mica was strewn on the floor, and at night blue spot lights were used instead of the regular lighting. Navajo blankets hung as curtains in the doors of the "log cabin" were an effective feature of this picturesque display.

National Newspaper Advertising for Pathe News

In connection with the fifteenth anniversary of the first news reel a national newspaper advertising campaign will be inaugurated by Pathe. Thirty-four of the largest newspapers in the United States will be utilized for this campaign each one carrying seven different advertisements during the anniversary period. There will also be a series of special advertisements prepared for use in exploiting "front page" events that "break" during this period.

Vice-president Dawes and a large list of distinguished men will attend the fifteenth Anniversary Dinner, according to Pathe.

Kinograms Changes Office on Coast

Raleigh Nichol, Los Angeles staff man of Kinograms, has established an office in the editorial rooms of the Los Angeles Times, a morning paper in that city, so that subscribers to the Educational news reel release may get the most rapid service of news pictures of events on the Pacific Coast. This location, in addition to giving Nichol almost instant news of happenings of importance in his territory, also gives him the use of the various telegraph services with which the "Times" is supplied.

Kinograms to Get New Subjects

Has Signed Contract with Eugene Lamb to Supply Special Pictures of the Orient

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by E. W. Hammons, President of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., that the management of Kinograms, Educational's news reel, has closed a large contract for news reel pictures with Eugene Lamb of Shanghai, China. The contract, covering a period of three years with an option on an extension, provides for a continuous supply of news reel subjects in their original negatives from China, Japan, Mongolia, Indo-China, Turkestan and Tibet.

Lamb is a well known explorer and lecturer besides being an expert news reel photographer, having had more than six years experience in news reel work abroad. He has a staff of cameramen stationed throughout the Orient and is at the head of Trans-Asia Photo-Scientific Expedition, an organization exploring lands never before visited by white men in the Chinese interior, remote Tibetan cities and the heart of Turkestan. All subjects turned in to Kinograms by Lamb are guaranteed brand new. An intensive advertising campaign in trade papers, newspapers and fan magazines will be given each subject as it is received.

The first subject, "The Sunning of Buddha" will appear in Kinograms, number 5135, which will be released by Educational on November 15. This is a picture of a ceremony never before photographed by a motion picture camera, it is said, and seen by less than a dozen white men. It is one of the holiest ceremonies of the Buddhists and was obtained by the cameraman only after great hardships. The ceremony consists of the taking of a piece of silk tapestry 30,000 square feet in size from the monastery in Kubum, Tibet by the priests or Lamas who carry it to a hillside on a sunshiny day. The tapestry, bearing an embroidered portrait of Buddha, in the center, with pictures around it showing instances in his life, is brought out to give Buddha a glimpse of the world where he once lived so that he will not forget his followers. In the Kinograms picture a throng of from fifteen to twenty thousand people is shown.

This connection in the Orient completes the world-enveloping service of Kinograms, according to the management, which was started early last summer when Kinograms expansion was begun by a personal visit to England and Continental Europe of Forrest Izzard, managing editor of the news reel, who only recently returned to America.

Educational Benefits by Improvements

COMEDY units at Educational Studios in Los Angeles find the improved and increased facilities much more adaptable for efficient work than they have been in the past. The fourth stage is completed, bringing the total to 28,000 square feet of covered stage space available to the short subject producers. Lack of adequate room has slowed up production in the past.

Several radical changes in studio construction have been incorporated in the design of the new stages. Two of them are elevated fourteen feet, the first story being occupied with scene docks, storerooms for bulky props, a garage for the company trucks and a stock room for motor parts. The stages proper have been braced against vibration. One side of the building is finished to resemble an office or apartment front with store windows along the level of the street. This will, in many cases obviate the necessity of securing permits to photograph exteriors on busy streets.

F. B. O. Planning New Sam Hellman Stories

F. B. O. is planning a new two-reel comedy series by Sam Hellman called "Fighting Hearts." It will be started immediately upon completion of the "Mazie" series by Nell Martin, which is now nearing completion. Following "Fighting Hearts," F. B. O. will film "Bill Grimm's Progress," by H. C. Witwer.

Neal Burns Starts "Household Hints"

Production has been started on "Household Hints," Neal Burns latest comedy, at the Christie studios, under the direction of Harold Beaudine. Yola D'Avril, formerly of the Parisian stage and of the "Follies" will play opposite Burns in this current vehicle.

Directors of "Peaceful Riot" In Cast

Slim Summerville and Leon Kent, directors as well as actors, are being directed by Tweedy, well known as a comic, in Joe Rock's Blue Ribbon comedy, "A Peaceful Riot," which is now being filmed for F. B. O. release.

Scenes from "A Rough Party," a two-reel Century Comedy starring Al Alt and released by Universal.

Pathe Program Is Diversified

Chase and Graves Starred in Comedies For Release Week of November 15

CHARLIE CHASE and Ralph Graves are the stars in the short comedy features that head the Pathe release schedule for the week of November 15th. Chase will be seen in "The Uneasy Three" and Graves in "Take Your Time."

"The Uneasy Three" is a two-reeler produced by Hal Roach, with the "three" composed of Chase, Katherine Grant and Bull Montana, who aspire to be society crooks. Leo McCarey directed.

"Under the Buffalo Stampede" is the eighth chapter of the Patheserial, "Wild West," featuring Helen Ferguson and Jack Mulhall. A buffalo stampede provides the big thrill of the chapter.

"Shooting at Time" is the Grantland Rice "Sportlight" release. Rice shows how most of the big contests in the sporting world are races against time and that the Old Gentleman with the Scythe is very hard to beat.

Pathe Review No. 46 offers a diversity of entertainment: "Walking on the Water," one of "The Magic Eye" series of microscopic studies produced by L. H. Tolhurst; "Belles of the Black Forest," a fashion show in fourteenth century style; and "Brown-eyed Susan," the new series of American Wild Flowers in Pathecolor.

"More Mice Than Brains" is the release of "Aesop's Film Fables." "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News complete the November 15th schedule of Pathe.

Local Editions of Pathe News

Will Show Home City Happenings During Fifteenth Anniversary Celebration

LOCAL editions of Pathe News will be filmed and released twice each week during the fifteenth anniversary celebration of newsfilms period from November 15th to December 15th. These special local editions will show the important events in each of the thirty-four big cities where Pathe exchanges are located. They will picture well known people and familiar scenes. Many people will enjoy the novelty of seeing themselves and their friends in the pictures for the first time.

Emanuel Cohen, editor of Pathe News made all the arrangements for the making of the special local editions. It meant the building of a special organization for their preparation and distribution. The tremendous cost involved makes it prohibitive to maintain an organization of this emergency character over any extended period of time. Laboratories have had to be engaged in each of the thirty-four distributing centers and special equipment installed to insure the rapid handling of the prints for local distribution and exhibition.

Pathe has contracted for advertising space in the leading newspapers throughout the country to tie up the theatre with the Pathe News celebration. In addition definite provision has been made for special advertising to break in these newspapers concurrently with the release of the special local editions.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Scandal Street

(Arrow Pictures Corp.—6750 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A PEEP at the inside of motion picture life as it goes around studio-land is always relished by the fans, and this time they are given more than a passing glimpse, for "Scandal Street" offers a story whose principal characters are all connected with the films, and a production in the making is shown with realistic effect. It is a sort of "picture within a picture" so to speak, yet the main theme, the love affair between the young widow of the film star who meets with sudden death and the "double" who takes his place to wind up an unfinished production, is smoothly developed and easily followed. An original plot with general audience appeal, the feature should prove an excellent box office attraction. Niles Welch fills the dual role cleverly, you might even call it triple, for besides impersonating the dead Halliday before the camera, he has to pose as Sheila's husband outside the studio.

THEME. Drama of motion picture life, with hero impersonating dead star in production and finally wedding deceased's widow.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Intimate scenes of picture-making in studio. Realistic atmosphere. Love romance. Episodes where Sheila flies into jealous tantrums over Halliday and vamp. The sunshine climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Impress patrons with the idea that this film gives them 'low-down" on picture life and people. Stress studio scenes. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in average house.

SUMMARY. Has all kinds of popular appeal. A sort of—behind the scenes in filmland drama, with strong popular appeal. Studio shots very interesting to fans.

PRESS NOTICE

IF you want a complete and satisfying look at the inside of motion picture life, as seen in the studios and elsewhere, don't miss "Scandal Street," which is billed as the star attraction of the ——— Theatre on ———. This is a tense drama with deep heart interest, the plot hinging on the death of a male movie star, his impersonation by a "double" who takes his role, the death not being made public, so as to save the production he was working in just prior to his demise. And to crown all, the "double" falls in love with his predecessor's widow.

Madge Kennedy is the dainty heroine, Niles Welch the hero, with a talented supporting cast.

CATCH LINES

Looking exactly like a famous picture star, he assumed the latter's identity when the screen celebrity died suddenly. The public didn't know. Also he and the young widow fell in love.

Proud Heart

(Universal Jewel—8500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

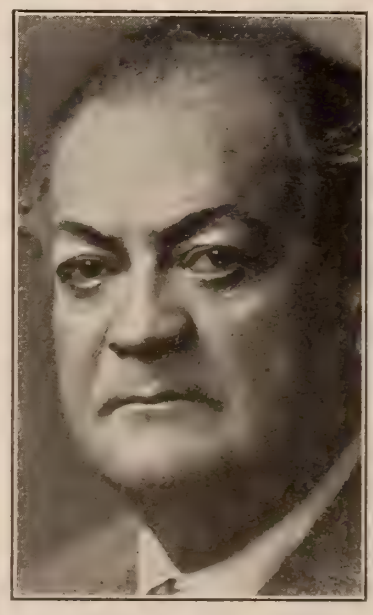
ONE of the chief charms of this story of Jewish life on New York's East Side is its unvarnished sincerity. While the sentimental angle is stressed throughout, there is not the slightest lapse into the maudlin stage. This happy result is due to careful direction and the artistry of the star, Rudolph Schildkraut, making his first appearance on the screen, whose natural, appealing performance rings as clear and true as a silver bell. There is every reason why the picture should prove a box office success. It deals with the sorows and ultimately the joys of simple folks, possesses that unfailing human touch which goes straight to the heart of the average person, with the necessary romantic suggestion lurking in the background; and winds into a delightful climax. Nor is the thrill element lacking, for that is attended to by a realistic championship contest, in which Sammy, the "box-fighter" son, proves victor.

THEME. Depicts life of Hebrew family on East Side, sacrifices of old father for two sons, one of whom turns boxer, the other seeking fame as lawyer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent atmosphere. Fine acting of star and supporting cast. Fight scene. Episode where father is supposed to be dying.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as touching human interest tale, with vivid East Side atmosphere.

DRAWING POWER. A good card for any house, large or small.



SUMMARY. East Side drama with great heart appeal dealing with fortunes of Jewish family. Cleverly acted and directed. Looks like box office winner.

A Little Girl In a Big City

(Gotham-Lumas—6073 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

SENTIMENTAL and sensational atmosphere envelope this adaptation of Kyrle McCurdy's ancient stage melodrama, which has been brought up-to-date and turned into a swift action picture with considerable mass appeal. It isn't an attraction calculated to win favor with sophisticated audiences, but there'll be plenty of fans ready to respond to its forceful thrills, weep over the innocent heroine's woes and perils, curse the villain and sigh with relief when the sunshine climax brings the true lovers together in a hearty clinch. No footage is wasted, the little country girl, from the time she lands in the big burg, has to keep side-stepping lively to evade the amorous rushes of the bad publisher of a scandal sheet where she won a beauty contest. And the hero, unemployed reporter, goes the strenuous pace at top-speed all the way through. Niles Welch, in the latter role, is at his best, Gladys Walton cutely appealing as the helpless country maiden, and the support satisfactory in every detail.

THEME. Melodrama. Country Girl wins magazine beauty contest, visits city, falls into clutches of designing publisher, is rescued by hero, whom she weds.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Sentimental appeal and sensational punches. Scene where hero thrashes villain, and that in which he leads police raid to rescue girl.

MONTA BELL has turned out another sure fire box office feature in this colorful picture of the days when New York history was in the making, when such personalities as Thomas A. Triple Action

(Universal—4800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A BREEZY Westerner that is well named, for it swings into a flying start and thereafter rattles along speedily until a scrapping, hurry-up climax, crackling with pungent thrills is attained. A sure way of winning audience sympathy for a hero is to have him get the worst of it right in the beginning of things, consequently Pete Morrison, as a disgraced border ranger, has the crowd with him when he commences the struggle to clear his name. Consistently good work by principals and supporting cast, along with such unexpected spectacular punches as the coming of an aeroplane at a crucial moment, with Pete dropping in upon the gang that has imprisoned his sweetheart, via the parachute route, help to lift this feature considerably above the ordinary level of its kind. Morrison is a clean-cut chap with lots of dash and energy, who registers well in the ranger role. Trilby Clark, an attractive heroine, and Harry Von Meter a sufficiently sinister villain. The photography is excellent throughout.

THEME. Western melodrama. Ranger outwitted by outlaws is temporarily disgraced, but finally rounds up gang and wins girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Good continuity, smooth action, fine camera shots, adequate acting. Scene where hero drops from aeroplane and captures gang.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up as exciting Westerner with unusually spectacular situations. Stress the aeroplane stunt. Feature Pete Morrison.

DRAWING POWER. Pleasing program attraction, should satisfy all admirers of lively Western stuff.

SUMMARY. Brisk Western melodrama. Crashes over the thrill wallops in hurricane style, is spectacular and full of action. Ought to more than hold its own in program field.

Crack O' Dawn

(Rayart Pictures Corp.—5236 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A PICTURE constructed very much along the lines of the automobile racing films made famous by the late Wallace Reid, "Crack O'Dawn," with that handsome athlete Reed Howes, in the leading role, is a good specimen of an out-and-out thriller and sure to please all movie-goers in search of exciting entertainment. The plot offers nothing very new, but director Albert Rogell has handled it so neatly and introduced so many unexpected twists and turns into otherwise familiar situations that the on-lookers never lose interest in the rapid progress of events. The big punch is, of course, administered by the actual race, but the entire feature is keyed up to high-speed action, as exemplified in the startling adventures experienced by the hero while the villains are endeavouring to prevent him reaching the track. Reed Howes makes good, not only in the stunt stuff but as a fond lover, the romantic touches and comedy relief are well developed, Ruth Dwyer scores as the heroine and the support is adequate.

THEME. Comedy-drama, with realistic auto race for climax and romance between son and daughter of rival motor manufacturers.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fast action, timely comedy, unabated thrills and love affairs. Howes' athletic stunts and sensational racing scene.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up as a whizzing, breath-taking thriller, with love interest and comedy. Boost big race and feature Reed Howes and Ruth Dwyer.

DRAWING POWER. Should make a hit wherever patrons like pictures that keep them at high tension watching for "what's going to happen next!" Good-looking star has particular appeal for women folks.

The New Commandment

(First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE vogue for stories laid against a World War background seems to have become popular once more and here is one of the best of this type we have seen in many moons. Not a pretentious picture, although there are many big scenes, but one possessing real entertainment every foot of its action-packed way. Melodrama, romance, comedy, pathos, love, all are found in this story of a millionaire's son who balking at being "married off," to a girl he does not love leaves his father's yacht off France, and with a pal, goes to Paris. There he meets "the girl," with whom he goes through the fires of regeneration. It is the kind of stuff of which box office successes are made.

THEME. Romantic drama of a youth of wealth who finds his true love in a French girl, forced to work as a model. The new commandment, "thou shalt not doubt" brings him back to her after misunderstandings and war.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The characterizations contributed by Mr. Lyon and Miss Sweet. The Paris cabaret fight. The bombardment from the air. The scenes of mobilization. The direction. The lighting.

EPXLOITATION ANGLES. Put it on a special Armistice Day special and tie up with the local American Legion. Play up the names of the stars. Invite Gold Star mothers and disabled vets.

DRAWING POWER. The best houses in the cities can entertain their audiences with this one and with a little exploitation should tack up satisfactory business.

SUMMARY. Entertainment all through. A fine cast. A real story. Excellent direction. A goodly quota of big scenes. Passionate love sequences. A self made hit.

The Unwritten Law

(Columbia Pictures—5355 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN average program attraction! It contains nothing new in plot formula, is rather slow in getting started, but increases speed after the first reel and thereafter hops along at a lively rate until the climax is reached. There's a murder mystery that doesn't develop until close to the end and doesn't remain a mystery very long, as the guilt is quickly fastened on the villain's housekeeper, who it appears he behaved badly to in the past. Wherefore the lady, after waiting an unnecessarily lengthy period, cut him short with a bullet. There are several melodramatic phases not badly handled, the story is a bit far-fetched, but folks who like this type of entertainment won't worry about that. As regards the acting, Elaine Hammerstein's admirers will be sure to approve of their favorite's appealing work in the role of heroine Helen Merritt, Forrest Stanley is O. K. as Helen's lover, William Mong shines resplendent as one of those old Kentucky colonels the screen knows so well. Support is adequate.

THEME. Melodrama, with love interest. Villain forces heroine into marriage, lover returns, groom mysteriously killed, wife accused but cleared, weds hero.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where Jack returns, immediately after Helen's marriage. Episode where lovers find Randall murdered, and real criminal's confession.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Elaine Hammerstein and Forrest Stanley. Advertise as startling melo, with romantic touches, murder mystery and unexpected finish.

DRAWING POWER. Should suit neighborhood and smaller theatres.

SUMMARY. Fair enough program attraction, follows sterotyped story trail; but is well acted and directed, melodramatic incidents and romance skillfully handled. Ought to get by, excepting with critical audiences.

His Master's Voice

(Gotham-Lumas—5827 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S quite a run on dog-hero pictures these days, and "His Master's Voice" adds yet another to the long list of films featuring canine actors. It compares very favorably with the average attraction of its sort, the new four-footed player, Thunder, being an uncommonly intelligent animal that seems to enjoy his work and has a quaint way of cocking his ears with head turned sideways, while expressing surprise, which is warranted to start any audience laughing. The dogs master is a timid chap, who is regenerated by his war-experiences, in which the pup shares, and clinches his heroic fame by whipping a bad egg who gave him the worst of it in the past, when he gets back home. The battle stuff is good, even if it has been done hundreds of times before, there are many melodramatic wallops slammed home forcibly and enough love interest to round matters off smoothly. Thunder registers the film's big punch when he saves his wounded boss, with George Hackathorne and Marjorie Daw effective as the lovers.

THEME. War melodrama, with dog star and timid master who goes to the front and finds his manhood on battlefield.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Thunder's appealing work. Incident in which he saves wounded master and helps to explode mine. The love interest and battle scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Thunder, George Hackathorne and Marjory Daw. Bill as exciting war melodrama with romantic lure. Go after juvenile trade.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for smaller houses, or wherever animal pictures please.

SUMMARY. This one holds its own with the average production exploiting dog stars. Story not original, but battle stuff vivid and melo punches put over well. Romance satisfactory. Thunder, the canine hero, makes good.

After Marriage

Dependable Film Corp.—5500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A FAIRLY interesting domestic drama which runs along somewhat familiar lines but is well acted and photographed and should satisfy audiences of a not too critical type. There is always a market for pictures of this kind, produced at small cost and sold at reasonable prices to exhibitors who find in such films a reliable source of box-office income; catering as they do to a class of patronage not over exorbitant in its entertainment demands. Although the story deals with the philanderings of a young married man, who becomes his fathers rival for the affections of a stage siren, the sex situations are handled so carefully that there is little fear of the feature offending the moralists or provoking censorial interference. Except in the case of the neglected wife, none of the leading characters are likely to win any sympathy. The vamp doesn't, of course; the husband, even if he does reform at the end, is very much cad, and his papa registers merely as an unsavory old roue. Dramatic honors go to Margaret Livingston, as the temptress, and Helen Lynch, as the wife.

THEME. Domestic drama. Hero young married man who yields to seductions of vamp, who is also entangled with his father but finally becomes reconciled to wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Pleasing photography with attractively tinted scenes, pretty water views and backgrounds. The golf tournament, episode where adventuress kills hero's father. General heart interest and happy climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title possesses pulling possibilities. Dwell on pathetic plight of loyal wife and baby and emotional appeal. Feature Margaret Livingston.

DRAWING POWER. A good card for the smaller houses.

SUMMARY. This drama, with its domestic complications, touches of pathos and occasional thrills, will please patrons who like to have their emotions stirred up.

THE CAST

The Bashful Buccaneer

(Rayart Pictures Corp.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN uncommonly good comedy-melodrama, speedy as they make 'em, alive with thrills, spiced with pungent humor, and decidedly the best picture in which Reed Howes, the new Rayart star, has yet appeared. It can safely be listed as possessing general audience appeal and likely to prove a winning box office attraction. In point of originality, neat direction and all-around satisfactory acting, it grades fifty per cent. higher than the average independent production. Here we have the unfailing lure of romance, a treasure hunt, pirates and daring deeds, with the funny angle developed by the fact that only two of the characters sailing the stormy main are aware that the hidden gold attraction is pure bunkum. And the big laughing finish comes when the adventurers bump into a film company making a picture at the mysterious port for which they have headed, and mess up the camera plans horribly. Reed Howes is excellent as the hero, with Dorothy Dwan scoring in the feminine lead, and support O. K.

THEME. Comedy melodrama, a search for pirate treasure which doesn't exist, an author hero, who turns adventurer; love, humor, excitement, surprise ending.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The zippy action, smooth direction, good acting. Mutiny scene. The landing and battle ashore, romance and astonishing climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Reed Howes and Dorothy Dwan. Play up former's athletic feats. Boost the story as far as you like.

DRAWING POWER. Should do fine business in the average theatre.

SUMMARY. They've mixed up sheer melo and bright comedy with gratifying results. Combines hunt for imaginary hidden treasure and consequent thrills, with funny situations which bob up when least expected. Interest never flags.

The Beautiful City

(Insp. Pic. Inc.—First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS is one of the most impressive character portraits Richard Barthelmess has contributed to the shadow stage in many seasons, in fact it looks like another "Tol'able David," in dramatic tensity, heart appeal and romantic interest. It shows what can be done when an author who understands the screen writes directly for it. Here is a little tale of Manhattan's east side that packs a big punch. It presents the star in a role for which he is eminently suited. Audiences will not soon forget Mr. Barthelmess' interpretation of the role of Tony Gillardi.

THEME. Romantic melodrama of an Italian flower vendor who fights his weak brother's battle against a gangster, with love spurring him on.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The robbery of the Automat lunch room and the arrest of Tony for the job. The fight between the gangster and Tony and the brother in the Gillardi which terminates with the shooting of the mother.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost the names of Barthelmess and Gish. Tieup with newspaper on Beautiful City Day. Tell the town this is another "Tol'able David." Put over flower store tieups using photos of Dick as flower vendor in displays.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of stars and strength of store should make this a box office hit anywhere.

SUMMARY. One of the best things Barthelmess has done to date. A story that grips all the way and some big fights that are realistic to the Nth degree. A mounting that is colorful and correct. A climax with a Dempsey-like punch.

Pursued

(Dependable Film Corp.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A RIP-SNORTING melodrama packed with thrills and sensational incident, which ought to do good business as a program attraction. Director Henderson has built up his situations skillfully, keeping the action revolving in giddy spirals and suspense stretched almost to the breaking point. That the plot takes wild leaps at intervals over the margin of probability doesn't hurt the picture's entertaining values in the least, so far as those fans are concerned who like to be stimulated by sensational incidents piled sky-high. And they'll certainly get twhat they want in "Pursued," where murderous crooks hold high carvinal, and an adventurous maiden hustles to the rescue of her gallant young district attorney lover, kidnapped and haled to the thug's lair. There's a sagacious police dog who also "does his bit" in great style, and taken on the whole, the film lists as an uncommonly lively specimen of its type. Dorothy Drew scores as the heroine, Gaston Glass and Stuart Holmes making good as hero and villain respectively.

THEME. Underworld Melodrama. Hero, an assistant district attorney, kidnapped by murder gang, is aided by sweetheart, who brings police and crooks are arrested.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Melo punches and comedy relief. Kidnapping of hero. Helen's adventures in thieve's den. Her escape. Raid by police.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can tell them this is an underworld story of the finest. Stress the thrills, fast action, romance and comedy. Feature Miss Drew.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for any house where lurid melodrama is in demand.

SUMMARY. A good program attraction. Has vivid underworld atmosphere, exciting situations by the score, comedy touches and romantic interest. Not for critical audiences, but develops strong mass appeal.

Law or Loyalty

(Davis Distributing Div.—4800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

LAWSON HARIS executes a smart triple play here, figuring as author and director, as well as filling one of the principal roles in the picture, and does remarkably well in each instance. It's no small feat to take a hero of the Northwest Mounted Police and build a round him a story with a semblance of originality that holds its interest throughout, for this particular trail has been well-nigh trodden into mush by the countless writers who have dragged scenarios along it. But this is just what Mr. Haris has done, for "Law Or Loyalty," while the old idea of love versus duty is utilized, is good drama, rich in suspense pathos and thrills and entertaining right up to the final shot. The direction is capable and the versatile Mr. Haris contributes a character sketch of Pierre, the hero's buddy whom the former is obliged to arrest, that is extremely appealing. Robert Walker registers well as the mounted cop, Dolores Dorian is O. K. in the heroine role and the support is nicely balanced.

THEME. Northwest melodrama. Mounted policeman does his duty by arresting wartime comrade who saved cop's sweetheart by killing assailant. Buddy freed by jury.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Attractive scenery. Swift action. Good work of principals. Romantic lure. Scene where Pierre kills Factor. Pierre's arrest. Fine climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title tells story, play it up, stressing "duty versus love and comradeship" idea. Boost as Mounted Police yarn with strong human interest.

DRAWING POWER. Good wherever they want melodrama with sentimental urge.

SUMMARY. A Northwest Mounted Police tale that gets melo punches across and has considerable pathos, as well as human touch. Will please a majority of fans.

THE CAST

Madame Behave

(Producers Dist. Corp.—5417 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

FROM all indications this new Al Christie feature comedy seems destined to go over big as a box office attraction. It is straight farce, an admirable combination of wildly amusing situations blown along by whirlwind action, one hurtling fast on the heels of another, a literal scream of fun from first to last. The story's trend carries a suggestion of "Charley's Aunt," although the basic principles of the plot are altogether different, and there is every chance that the film may duplicate the success of that hilarious comedy. Julian Eltinge, the world-famous female impersonator, scores a palpable hit in the dual role of Jack Mitchell and Madame Behave, dainty little Ann Pennington dances like a fairy and is irresistibly alluring as heroine Gwen. The work of Lionel Belmore, Tom Wilson and Jack Duffy deserves unlimited praise, and in fact every member of a remarkably fine supporting cast contributes heavily to the picture's artistry. Director Scott Sidney has reason to feel proud of this production.

THEME. Farce comedy; plot hinging on attempts of law-suit principals to locate missing unknown woman witness, impersonated by hero with comic results.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The swift action, and irresistibly funny appeal. Scenes in which Julian Eltinge impersonates Madame Behave. Rattling climax.

Clothes Make The Pirate

(Sam E. Rork Prod.—First National—7000 Feet)

(Reviewed by Oscar Cooper)

EVERYBODY is saying that the screen needs novelty. The average stuff won't do. A picture—any picture—must be 'way out of the ordinary to attract attention from the public—to say nothing of hitting the mark at the box-office. Well, here's a picture that satisfies all the demands for novelty—and a great deal more.

Leon Errol, in the role of the tailor who becomes a pirate chief, gives a remarkable performance—one of the finest ever seen on the screen. He is screamingly funny, and never once does he step out of character. A great screen comedian is Mr. Errol. Dorothy Gish playing opposite, is very fine. So are the others of a first-rate cast: James Rennie, Tully Marshall, Nita Naldi, Edna Murphy, George Marion, Walter Law and Reginald Barlow.

THEME. Comedy of character and situation, showing the evolution of a henpecked husband into a roaring pirate,

"Hot Doggie"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

WALTER HIERS has a very ordinary vehicle in this one, which tells a tale many times repeated on the screen. He must marry before the arrival of his uncle on the same day to receive a million dollar inheritance. He has the girl, but his difficulty is in reaching the church. As is customary in these pictures, he first forgets the marriage certificate and has to return for it and then he forgets the ring and dittos for that.

There being nothing around but taxis and other autos that may be used as conveyances in such an emergency, Walter stops to gaze in a sporting goods shop and decides to make the trip home and back to the church on skates. He is aided and abetted by a cleverly trained dog, whose antics are the best thing in the picture.

The Cast

The Fat Boy.....Walter Hiers
The Girl.....Duane Thompson
Her Father.....Lincoln Plumer
His Uncle.....William Irving
Her Mother.....Rosa Gore
The Dog.....Buddy

Story by H. M. Lawrence; directed by Earle Rodney; photography by William Wheeler and Fred Jacquemin; cartoons by Norman Z. McLeod.

The Story. The girl's parents are opposed to Walter as a suitor because of his poverty. He receives a wire from his rich uncle that the latter is arriving that day and will give Walter a million dollars of his wealth provided he is married. Walter conveys the news to the girl and her parents via Buddy, the dog. There are hasty arrangements for the wedding and the church is crowded waiting the bridegroom, who has forgotten the marriage license. He dashes back on skates to get it and then forgets the wedding ring and is compelled to go back for that. The wealthy uncle arrives and sees his nephew for the first time and because of complications following his arrival refuses to give him the million until he is vamped by the young wife.

Summary. A knockabout comedy with some fair situations, though both the situations and the gag stuff have been much overworked. The vehicle is hardly as good a one as the star is entitled to. It is good for a few laughs.

"Should Sailors Marry?"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

This is the second two-reeler for Clyde Cook under the Hal Roach banner and if the succeeding ones prove as good as the two already produced, they are bound to register as sure fire entertainment. James Parrott is the director and has made the most out of a goodly assortment of gags and thrills. Cook is given adequate support by Fay Holderness and Noah Young. In the last half many of the scenes are taken on the steel beams of a partly finished sky-scraper and it is here that the thrills take place.

The Cast

The Sailor.....Clyde Cook
The Wife.....Fay Holderness
The Wrestler-Husband.....Noah Young

The Story.—This one starts off with a rather unusual situation—that of a wife paying alimony to a wrestler husband who collects in very thorough manner. Times become hard and the wife finds herself in difficulties with the payments. The ex-husband threatens and in desperation the wife inserts an advertisement in the matrimonial columns of a newspaper with the idea of seeking a mate to help her provide the necessary alimony. The ad is answered by a recently discharged sailor who had joined the navy to see the world and spent the four years of his enlistment in a submarine. They meet and marry. After the wedding it slowly but surely dawns on the sailor that the ex-husband is a member of the household. He is given a room to share with the wrestler and forced to go to work. It is thru this part that plenty of comedy develops, and the thrills make their appearance with the sailor's efforts to escape.

Summary.—An amusing two-reel comedy, starring Clyde Cook and has some sure laugh getting gags that are followed by a series of thrills enacted on steel beams of a sky-scraper. It has been well produced and directed by Hal Roach and James Parrott who have provided the star with good support.

"Cleaning Up"

(Educational-Tuxedo—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

MUSSING UP would be a better title for this two-reeler that features Johnny Arthur. Maybe it will be a cleaning up in the picture houses but it is anything but that in the story. Johnny assumes the task of being housekeeper for a day, when after losing his job he tells his wife how soft it must be to have nothing to do through the day but keep the house in order.

It is one of those comedies that just makes a complete mess of a house even to the calling out of the fire department, which as usual, floods it with water and thereby all but destroys most of the furniture as well as the occupants. It affords a lot of knockabout comedy, some of which is good and some not so good. Napoleon, a big Newfoundland dog, is a well trained animal and shares the honors of the picture with Arthur.

The Cast

The Husband.....Johnny Arthur
The Wife.....Helen Foster
Her Brother.....George Davis
The Dog.....Napoleon

Written and directed by William Goodrich; photographed by Byron Houck.

The Story. Johnny and his wife quarrel when he loses his job for oversleeping. He tells how easy it is to have nothing to do but care for the house and she volunteers to let him do it for the day, retiring to her mother's in a huff. Johnny makes a mess of it and eventually the fire department is called in, completing the destruction he has started. The wife returns to find her brother there and Johnny promptly blames the calamity on to him.

Summary. This is a knockabout comedy with plenty of action and some humorous situations, but like most of its type it strives too hard and continuously for laughs. The cast is a good one, with Napoleon, the dog, sharing the honors with the comedian.

"A Speedy Marriage"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

THIS is a typical Wanda Wiley vehicle with a world of action, none of which, however, has not been seen many times before. They have taken the action out of about three oft-repeated comedy tales and crowded it into these two reels. Miss Wiley is certainly a lively young lady and a glutton for punishment. She takes many a hard fall and an equal number of rough knocks. She is also capable of better material than she is given to exploit in this one.

The Cast

The Girl.....Wanda Wiley

The Story—Wanda, prospective heiress to millions is aroused by an electrical storm. She is hit by a flash of the lightning and the electric spark, after going through her chases after all other occupants of the house, causing general bedlam. At the height of all her troubles her lawyer 'phones her that she must be married by 5 o'clock that afternoon in order to inherit the estate of her wealthy uncle. She makes a date to meet her fiancee in ample time for the performing of the ceremony but it detained by a detail of traffic cops whom she leads a merry chase, but finally eludes after many humorous and trying difficulties. She finally goes through with the contract just on the stroke of five.

Summary.—This is a fast moving comedy with plenty of action, but both the story and the action have been used many times before. It gives Miss Wiley ample opportunity to display her talents, though they could probably be displayed to better advantage in a vehicle that was not quite so hackneyed.

"Ko-Ko Packs 'Em In"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

THIS Max Fleischer cartoon is one of the funniest and cleverest yet seen by this reviewer. The business of the story is concerned with Fleischer's decision to move from his home and the help given him by Ko-Ko. Everything in and about the room is packed including the "windows" which are removed from the walls; even the "landscape" is rolled up by the pup. As a fitting climax to all this industry Ko-Ko sets the vacuum cleaner to work through a hole bored through the inkwell and in no time at all it has sucked up everything in sight and out, including heavy pieces of furniture, bric-a-brac and even the moving men. This should cause many a laugh.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Knicknacks of Knowledge"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is one of the Lyman H. Howe Hodge Podge series. It is as nicely worked out as those that have gone before and is both entertaining and educational. The actual photographic scenes showed varied activities and sights of different parts of the world and they are nicely intermingled with humorous cartoons. In this one of the Hodge Podges are shown among other things, the Woolworth building in New York, cotton pickers in Peru, Chinese Junks, Victoria Falls in the Zambesi River in Africa and different types of the Maoris, a queer race of people in New Zealand. It is an entertaining novelty that could be used to good advantage by any house.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Hot Feet"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

THIS is a lot of nonsense in which everyone in the picture strives to get a laugh with variations of the Charleston. Cliff Bowes is the wealthy cousin from the country and with the wealthy aunt visits the house at the height of the dance. The Rubes are shocked by the exhibition they witness, but a dash of liquor served in their punch soon has them striving to outdo the most expert exponents of the Charleston and eventually they carry off the prize. There is some fair comedy served up in this one.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

A very successful Hallowe'en Party was held at the Pathe New York Exchange at 1600 Broadway on Friday evening October 30th. The main sales room was turned into a big dance hall, illuminated by the customary weird lights and Jack-o-lanterns of this occasion.

A Jazz Orchestra provided music for dancing and also accompanied several professional entertainers who contributed their efforts to the delightful program.

One of the big events of the evening was a Charleston contest. So much talent was displayed by the contestants that it was very difficult to decide the winners. Prizes went to the Misses Mildred Barry and Ida Benjamin and Mr. Benson.

Exhibitors through Western North Carolina and the Piedmont section of South Carolina are complaining very much about business conditions. The severe drought in this section of the Carolinas has certainly worked a hardship on the moving picture industry, as it caused the power companies to restrict the cotton mills, and in fact, all industries to a running time of three days a week. This condition naturally affects the picture theatres and unless there is some heavy rains this condition cannot be eliminated.

MacIntyre, wife of the well known manager of the Paramount exchange here, and children, following a summer on the New England Coast.

Eugenia Gilbert, who portrays the role of Mary Reynolds in "The Trans-Continental Limited," Chadwick.

Mrs. Patrick Quinlan, wife of the owner of the motion picture house in Chateaugay, died recently.

W. H. Linton, better known as "Pop," and whose theatre which was the pride of his heart, was destroyed by fire last spring, is hustling night and day at the present time on the theatre which he is erecting in Utica, and which he hopes to have in shape for opening by the first of the year. Samuel Slotnick, a former exhibitor in Mohawk, is also erecting a new theatre in Utica.

The film boys who threw up their jobs and went to Florida in the hopes of becoming millionaires over night, are returning to town. The latest arrival was Jimmy Sper, who came back last week, and who is now endeavoring to interest his many friends in Florida land. Charles Walder, formerly of Fox; Sam Burns, former manager of Vitagraph, and Ben Apple, former owner of theatres in Troy, are all back, and now the report comes that William Shirley, who sold his theatres in Schenectady to W. W. Farley, and departed for Florida, is now optimistic over the future, and is planning to unload his holdings and come north in the near future. W. L. Sherry, well known in Albany, George Wright, formerly of Albany, are still in Florida.

Father Blais appears to be doing very well as a motion picture exhibitor, and is now running his theatre in Schroon Lake, four days a week. The Lyric, in Albany, formerly run by Joe Braff, and which had been closed for several months, is scheduled to reopen in the near future, but the parties who have taken over the house are not yet disclosed.

So fierce was the snowstorm that swept over the Adirondack region last week that Ray Smith, a salesman in the Universal exchange here, was obliged to leave his automobile in Lake Placid and continue over his territory by train.

The Auditorium in Utica, will be opened on November 14, by Poccio and Dennis.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Milligan are now operating the Broadway theatre in Schuylerville four nights a week.

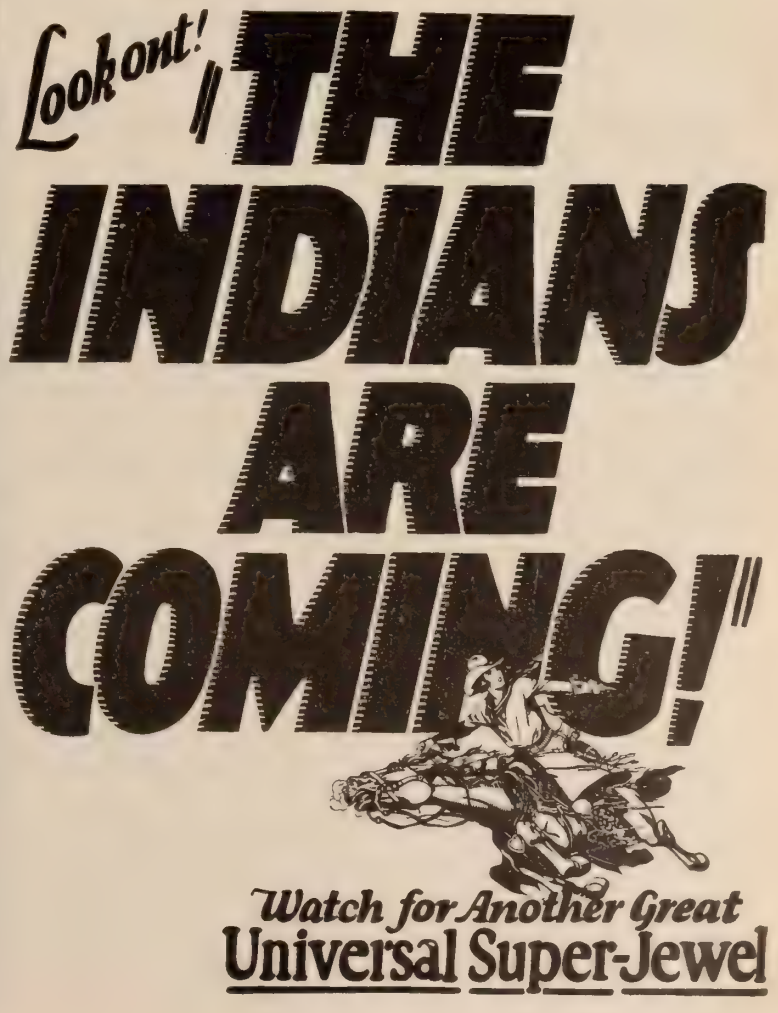
Edward Hochstim, who has been connected with the local Pathe exchange for some time as a salesman and who resigned recently, went with the local F. B. O. exchange last week succeeding L. L. Connors, who resigned and went to Boston to enter the ice cream business. Sidney Katz, assistant general sales manager for F. B. O., was in Albany for a portion of last week.

E. F. Walsh, of the Albany theatre in Schenectady, is meeting with much success these days in a "country store" that is being run every Thursday night along with the regular picture program.

A very valuable dog, owned by Ernest J. Wolfe, of the Bijou theatre in Lowville, was found dead the other morning in its kennel. The animal was probably the most valuable canine in all northern New York, and had taken first prize at all of the big shows in Eastern United States during the last year or so.

William Curray, who took over the Victory theatre in Cambridge two or three weeks ago, was forced to close his house two nights last week, due to failure of film to reach him on time.

Samuel Cummings, is again running the theatre in Victory Mills, which reopened on November 1. Mr. Cummings will run two nights a week at least for the present.



Joseph Schleiger, who has been connected with the Bond exchange in Albany, went with Charles F. Boyd this week, in doing the booking for Associated Exhibitors here. George Doolittle, poster clerk at the Pathe exchange, resigned in order to go with Bond where he will do the shipping.

Among exhibitors along Film Row during the week were Mike Kallet, of the Madison theatre in Rome, and Louis Buettner of Cohoes. Meyer Freedman, of Schenectady, journeyed down to New York for a day or two.

Acting very mysteriously, Ben Davis, who was formerly connected with the Schine circuit with headquarters in Gloversville, but who has been living in Albany since he resigned several weeks ago, came back from New York last week, and intimated that before long he would have an important announcement to make. According to one rumor, Mr. Davis may head a chain of houses operating in central New York.

In Schenectady, members of the city fire department visit the motion picture theatres every day and make an inspection of the booth and exits. The idea meets with the approval of the exhibitors who sign a slip each day which is turned in by the firemen to headquarters, as showing that he is doing the special work required of him.

James Roach, who came from the Middle West some little time ago to handle the Farley theatres in Schenectady, is now displaying a number of middlewestern ideas in lobby decorations and in featuring pictures. The idea seems to have caught on in Schenectady, for business has been on the gain at all of the theatres handled by Mr. Roach.

Baltimore

A GOLF tournament is being arranged now to take place Friday, November 6, on the links of either the Chevy Chase or the Green Valley clubs, Washington, D. C., under the auspices of the Film Board of Trade. Johnny Bachman, manager of the Washington office of Educational, is busily arranging the details. All members of the film industry in this part of the country, who care to enter the tournament are eligible, providing they know how to play golf.

In the morning of the day of the affair, those who wish to participate, will play nine holes and handicaps will be given when the tournament takes place in the afternoon, according to the scores made in the morning. Prizes will be offered; dinner will be served in the evening and following that entertainment will be provided.

The old Westminister Presbyterian Church property, Ninth and Main streets, Lynchburg, Va., has been purchased by J. Bruffey Trent, owner of the Trenton Theatre, there. The purchase price was $50,000 but the sale must be ratified by the church's congregation. The purpose for which Mr. Trent will use the property, has not been announced. The church was sold because its congregation has merged with another and will worship in a new structure soon to be opened.

Leslie F. Whelan, for a number of years connected with Paramount, Washington, D. C., office, and elsewhere as exploitation representative, was in Baltimore on Friday and Saturday, October 30 and 31.

Through the courtesy of Dr. J. H. Whitehurst, present of the Whitehurst Combined Theatrical Interests, the Century Theatre was loaned to the School Board of Baltimore on Saturday morning for a meeting of the School Teachers of Baltimore City.

Every Friday that is clear, a foursome of golf is played on one of the links near Baltimore, by three film men and one outsider. Those who enjoy this recreation are William Busch, First National salesman in Baltimore; Arthur B. Price, manager of the Aurora and New Preston; Frank Price, assistant manager of the Rivoli and W. Lineweber.

Col. George A. McDermitt, who has been District Manager of the Southern Enterprises, Inc., for Oklohoma and Arkansas, and has just gone to Washington, City, Col., managed Loew's Hippodrome in Baltimore for a number of years and after leaving that theatre was associated with the Whitehurst Combined Theatrical Interests as general manager, in Baltimore.

Frederick Clement Weber, formerly manager of the McCoy Theatre, Fulton avenue at Baker street, now the Fulton, who is now associated with the Metropolitan Theatre Company, is busily engaged arranging a banquet to be given Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, in the near future by the Special Deputy Sheriff's Association. About 500 persons will attend. It is understood. Many exhibitors are members of the association.

Fire in the projection room of the Royal Theatre, 1940 West Pratt street, caused about $500 damage on Saturday night, October 31, and severely burned an usher and the operator.

Leonard Davidson, the operator, whose clothes had been ignited by the blaze climbed through the window to the marquee and jumped to the sidewalk, breaking his leg. He fell in the midst of Hallowe'en revelers a blazing torch, near a woman and her baby. A blanket was snatched from an automobile by an unknown person who wrapped Davidson in it smothering the flames.

Morris Jaffe, the usher tried to climb into the projection room with a pail of water and a flame swept down searing his eyes.

Ruth Davis, the pianist kept on playing despite the excitement. According to Frank A. Hornig, proprietor of the Royal Theatre, there were about 50 persons in the playhouse at the time but with the exception of a few boys who ran out, the rest made the exit without confusion.

The blaze was confined to the projection room by firemen who arrived and soon put it out.

Davidson was rushed to Franklin Square hospital while Jaffe was taken to St. Agnes Hospital. The condition of both were pronounced serious.

The Lutheran Churches of Baltimore, Md., held their annual Reformation service at the Parkway Theatre, Sunday night, November 1, at 8 o'clock. The theatre was loaned for the occasion by Dr. J. H. Whitehurst, president of the Whitehurst Combined Theatrical Interests.

This was one of the three Winnipeg theatres which were acquired some few weeks ago by the Canadian Universal Films for a Western Canadian outlet for its attractions. The other two local theatres now under Universal direction are the Starland and the College.

CONSTRUCTION & EQUIPMENT DEPARTMENT

Building Supervision of Great Importance

Competent Execution of Plans and Specifications Just As Vital As Proper Design

By H. Robins Burroughs, Theatre Engineer

THERE seems to be a tendency on the part of owners to discount the value of supervision of construction. Any given proposition has two separate and distinct features; one is design and the other is execution of the design or supervision. It is just as important to have competent supervision as it is to have proper design. The two should go together and not be separated as is frequently done. The engineer or architect may prepare a good complete set of plans and specifications but, if their execution is not properly carried out, the results obtained may be far from those originally desired. It, therefore, behooves the owner to see that his plans and specifications are properly executed by having competent representation in the field.

The general practice is for the architect or engineer to prepare plans and specifications, but there is also a strong inclination for the owner to obtain more or less incomplete plans with or without specifications, it being the intention of the owner to have each sub-contractor supply the missing information. This is usually done where the owner operates as the builder and awards his own sub-contracts. The basis of this idea seems to be founded on the theory of economy. This may or may not be the case. If it does prove to be an economical one, there is usually great danger involved for the reason that the sub-contractor who submits his proposal based on an outline plan without specifications is permitted to compile his estimates on the basis of his own experience and, unless he be an experienced and responsible contractor, there is grave danger that he will undertake to do something that he is not qualified to do and, as a result, the owner will be the one to suffer, depending on the importance of the trade concerned.

This may be exemplified by considering the awarding of a structural steel contract by the owners direct to the contractor, in which case there have been prepared only general design plans by an architect and design engineering plans furnished by an engineer employed by the architect. The owner, with a view to economy, decides to let the steel contract himself and does so with the steel design drawings, only as a basis. Specifications are entirely omitted for the reason that it is thought that the contractor could submit a better price if he is not limited or tied down by any special specifications. The contract is awarded and the detail plans are prepared by a separate detailer. After considerable hesitation on the part of the owner, due to the additional expense involved, he decides to engage a consulting engineer to check the structural steel design and details. This is done merely as a means of protection, the importance of such a procedure, however, not being fully realized by the owner. Shop and field inspection of the structural steel work is eliminated on the grounds of not being necessary and the work proceeds on the basis of so-called economy. During the process of construction and erection of the structural steel, it is incidentally discovered that the steel work is being improperly erected, that bolts are being used instead of rivets and a general tie-up in the steel work is the result. The owners then find themselves in a helpless position. They are obliged to call in additional engineering services and field inspection. As a result, it is found that the entire job has to be gone over and in doing so, a number of serious errors are discovered, some of which are difficult to correct at this stage of the operation. It is found upon making reference to the steel contract that there are no specifications and consequently the matter of field riveting or bolting is not clearly defined or provided for. The contractor is in a strong position and, as a result, the owners are obliged to pay him whatever additional cost may be involved for correcting the work. This expense amounts to considerably more than what it would have cost in the beginning to have written the proper specifications and to have engaged the proper shop and field inspection and, in addition to which, it would have saved the owners several weeks delay.

Watch for Your Copy

NEXT week you will receive your copy of THEATRE BUILDING and EQUIPMENT BUYERS GUIDE, the first issue of our new semi-annual. This book, which will be published as a special supplement to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, is the result of months of study on our part to construct, editorially, a medium particularly devoted to the advancement of theatre building and equipment. That we have succeeded even beyond our own expectations is readily apparent: Mr. E. C. A. Bullock of C. W. & Geo. L. Rapp, architects for many of the world foremost theatres, tells the most enlightening, interesting and authentic story ever written on the modern theatre, presented in a compelling style, with profuse illustrations.

BUYERS GUIDE will also contain three other editorial features that will add to its exceptional worth. One of these features is a complete buyers guide for all types of theatre equipment and accessories—a guide that will prove of unusual aid to every exhibitor in making his house one of the most up-to-date.

BUYERS GUIDE will be your reference book, constantly in use for a period of six months when supplanted by our succeeding issue.

In the advertising pages of BUYERS GUIDE are represented reliable manufacturers of all types of equipment and it is in these pages that the real story of the modern theatre is told. Here is virtually an exhibition hall of all new and improved motion picture equipment. Actually, the advertising presented in BUYERS GUIDE may be considered its most valuable asset.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS takes great pride in presenting the first issue of BUYERS GUIDE—it is left to every exhibitor to make use of the valuable material it contains to the end of better equipped theatres and greater profits.

This method of procedure applies equally as well to other trades, except that mistakes in other lines are not as easily detected nor are of as serious a nature as those in the structural frame of a building; for if, by reason of negligence or carelessness on the part of the steel contractor, some part of the structure should be improperly erected and the collapse of the building result and, if this happen at a time after the building has been completed and is fully occupied, it would be of a serious nature and probably result in a loss of life. Mistakes in execution and lack of supervision along other lines may be serious from an operating point of view but they cannot contribute to either the destruction of the building or the loss of human life. As, for instance, if the heating system is improperly installed, only extreme cold may be the result, or, if the ventilating system is incorrectly supervised, serious drafts may result to the discomfort and inconvenience of the patrons; the illumination may be poor, due to improper electric work; projection may be bad on account of inferior projection equipment; or sight lines may be distorted, due to incorrect elevation of the balcony or insufficient slope in the orchestra floor. All of these may obtain and still the theatre can function and even successfully from a box office point of view. It is generally known that there are many theatres having such elements of equipment involved that are operating successfully in spite of them. These theatres, however, are for the most part old houses, which are gradually being eliminated and superseded by new structures.

It is evident from the above that proper supervision and inspection is equally as important as design. The design, therefore, must come first and the execution of the design naturally follows as a consequence. The designer should supervise the execution of the design. While the general conception may be pictured and illustrated in plans and specifications, there are always certain submerged points which are not evident or cannot be clearly stated or covered on the plans. These points can be indicated and should be in so far as it is practicable to do so, but in any class of work the actual construction brings out certain features that were not fully conceived and provided for. Certain minor interpretations of plans and specifications are constantly necessary in the field and frequently the full-sized picture, as there developed, suggests certain ideas that were not conceived in the process of the design. Usually these new ideas are developed to the benefit of the operation as a whole and, if taken care of, are an improvement. (To be concluded next week.)

Three Theatre Openings in Northwest

Three openings in the Washington and Oregon territories within the last few weeks indicate a general rise in motion picture business in the Pacific northwest. Henry Newman's Capitol Theatre at Hoquiam, Washington; Swan and Ward's new People's Theatre at Enterprise, Oregon; and Paine's Colonial Theatre in Eugene, Oregon, are among the houses to begin business since the opening of the fall season. All are modern houses of moderate size.

Elaborate Decorations for California Theatre

Contracts were let Oct. 8th for decorating and painting of the new Grand-Lake Theatre on Grand Avenue in Oakland to the Robert E. Power Studios of San Francisco and Los Angeles. It is said that this theatre will be one of the most elaborately decorated houses in northern California when completed. The Armstrong Power Studios, Inc., will equip the stage with all modern scenery, drapes and curtains. This part of the new house will embody every device to stage the most elaborate and scenic effects, for prologues connected with first run pictures. Decorative plans and designs were accepted last week

Inquiries and Comments

FROM out Ohio-way comes one of those famous tornadoes accompanied by a flood—a flood of questions. Vivien P. Bauglin, Spencer Theatre, Washington C. H., is the moving spirit behind this deluge of questions, and to tell the truth we did not think it was possible for any one individual to ask so many—at least at one time.

Carried away by a spirit of liberality, no doubt, Friend Bauglin recklessly gives us leave, in a P.S. to his letter, to "string these answers out over a month" or so if we find ourselves cramped for room to express ourselves.

No, Bauglin, we are sorry but we cannot allow you to monopolize this department for a month in order to answer questions which every projectionist, as such, should already know in order to obtain a job. We give you credit, however, for being the only person to date who has sent in a list of questions, to which, taken by and large, the editor has been unable to supply satisfactory answers. There are some posers among among them, we must confess.

Where did you get them? Did some inspector shoot them at you or are they really your own? We cannot conceive of any handbook on the subject asking such questions and yet remain in existence. These things have Mr. Edison crying for help.

However, here goes?

Try Your Luck

Q. What would happen if the neutral fuse on a three-wire system was to burn out, providing the system was balanced?

A. That's a tricky one, we were almost caught on it ourselves. We should say that if the system was reasonably balanced the fuse shouldn't burn out because little or no current would be returning to the generator through this fuse.

Q. Is the primary coil of an economizer connected in series or multiple on your line?

A. This is another good one. Strictly speaking, it is connected either in series or multiple whichever way you want to look at it. I suppose it really is in series with the generator circuit, yet it is really connected across the lines in the ordinary multiple fashion.

Q. What would you use to change D.C. to A. C.? Is this ever done for motion picture work?

A. That sounds like a really sensible question. Either a motor-generator set or a synchronous converter can be used for this. It is sometimes, (very rarely), done in the case of Mazda projection where only D.C. is available.

Q. With two 110 volt 25 ampere rheostats connected in series, how much resistance in ohms will there be in your line?

A. The resistance of a rheostat is not the result obtained by dividing its labeled voltage by its labeled current carrying capacity, so we cannot answer that question directly. However, the resistance will be doubled when they are connected in series.

Q. State if there would be any saving if you installed an economizer in place of a rheostat on a 110 volt A.C. circuit. Is this practical?

A. Yes, sir, there would be a very great saving and it is practical.

Q. With two, 110 volt, 25 ampere rheostats connected in multiple, how much resistance in ohms would there be in the circuit?

A. Another one of those tricky things. Ordinarily, we would say half the resistance of one rheostat.

Q. Suppose the output of a transformer was 2,500 watts, at 50 volts. What would be the amount of amperage?

A. That's another reasonable question. The current would be equal to 50 amperes if the power factor was unity (1), otherwise, it would be greater.

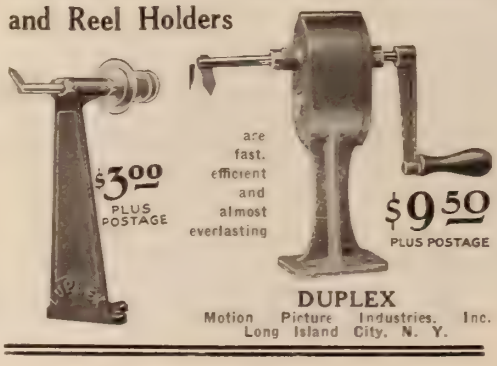
Deep Stuff

Q. What is the voltage if we have four and one-half ohms resistance on the line and are getting 35 amperes at arc lamp?

A. Somewhere in the general neighborhood of 200 volts. One guess is as good as another.

Q. Connected between the neutral and positive of a three-wire system are four and two-fifth ohms resistance. What amperage have we at the arc lamp?

A. Beyond us.



Q. On which coil of a transformer, the primary or secondary, is the most wattage and give your reason for this.

A. The greatest wattage is on the primary side, since the input is always greater than the output in any device.

Q. Is it possible to use cored carbons on D.C.?

A. We should certainly think so.

DUPLEX REWINDERS
and Reel Holders

DUPLEX
Motion Picture Industries, Inc.
Long Island City, N. Y.

Q. How would you determine the amount of amperage that would flow over a circuit in a given time?

A. Is it possible that we are being "kidded"? Is that really intended as a serious minded question? Let us explain, if possible, this important point. Electrical current, which is measured in amperages, means a flow of current, or, rather, a current of electricity. Hence it is really a rate of flow. There is nothing quantitative about it. A definite quantity or charge of electricity is measured in coulombs and when one coulomb of electricity passes a given point in a circuit in one second of time, one ampere is said to be flowing; if two coulombs pass in one second, or if one coulomb passes in one-half a second, the current is 2 amperes.

Q. Why do we get double the voltage and not double the amperage, when a certain load is connected between the two outside wires of a three-wire system?

A. For the reason that, for any constant amount of power involved, the current varies inversely as the voltage. Thus, if the voltage is doubled the current will be halved and vice versa.

Q. What would be the result if you connected two 110 volt, 25 rheostats in multiple on a 220 volt circuit?

A. The result would probably be two burned rheostats if the insulation was designed just for 110 volts.

All through your questions, Friend Bauglin, you have been guided by the mistaken belief that the only ratings necessary on a rheostat are those of voltage insulation and current carrying capacity. You have persistently neglected to give the resistance in ohms which should be and ordinarily is, placed on every rheostat rating plate. It is very necessary to give all three ratings. The voltage and current ratings alone mean nothing, as far as intelligent data are concerned.

Rheostats which are really electrical valves placed in a circuit to control the flow of current, are intended primarily for use in connection with other devices. When so used the combined characteristics of the rheostat and the other devices will determine the ultimate flow of current. The voltage rating refers only to the insulation of the coil elements. A 110 volt rating does not necessarily mean that the resistance will be used directly across the line.

Q. What would happen if a coil in a rheostat burned out?

A. The circuit would go entirely dead if it was connected in series in the line or less current would flow in the parallel loop if it was used as a shunt (connected in multiple) in the line.

And so we come to the end of Bauglin's letter, having answered, or at least attempted to answer, most of his questions. Some questions which seem entirely irrelevant were omitted, else we would have been at it yet.

Hertner Elec. Co. Comments On New Theatres

One of the interesting features of the Motion Picture Industry, says Mr. Hertner, of The Hertner Electric Company, is that regardless of the size of the town or city, Motion Picture Theatres are rapidly improving, not only in their seating and comfort features, but in the facilities for better projection.

This is evidenced, says Mr. Hertner, in one day's mail in which orders were received from cities ranging from Trenton, New Jersey to Mount Jewett, Pennsylvania.

Recent Transverter orders include the following Theatres and Managements: Dawn Theatre, Hillsdale, Michigan, Gaiety Theatre, Trenton, New Jersey, C. F. Oberg, Mt. Jewett, Pennsylvania and John E. Stahl, New Theatre, Homestead, Pennsylvania.

New Ambassador Theatre is Opened in Chicago

The opening of the handsome new three thousand seat Ambassador Theatre on Division Street by the M. & H. Corporation, headed by W. P. McCarthy, was the important event of the week in Chicago theatre circles. In anticipation of the big premier, a parade and other festivities were staged on Monday night and on the night of opening, tremendous crowds visited the theatre. In addition to high class first run pictures, the Ambassador will offer its patrons the massive productions produced and erected by Francis A. Mangan and Albert E. Short of the National Theatre Corporation's Capitol Theatre staff.

Marr And Colton Co. Issue New Booklet

The Marr & Colton Company of Warsaw, New York, have recently issued a new and very interesting booklet of 24 pages called "Building America's Finest Organ." The booklet shows photographs of the craftsmen, the workshops and intricate equipment needed to produce Marr & Colton organs.

The booklet is amply illustrated and the text with illustrations carry the reader through the various stages of operation in building an organ. The text is written in simple, understandable layman's language, without any intricate technical material and makes interesting reading.

The booklet is 5½″ x 8″, a handy size.

Chicago Suburban Theatre to Be Erected

R. Levine & Company, Inc., report that they are to be the builders of the twenty-two hundred seat motion picture theatre, which will be erected at the corner of Neva and Grand Avenues, Elmwood, by a company in which John Sharoukas of the Oak and Elmwood Theatres, Oak Park, is interested. In addition to the theatre the structure will contain twenty-eight apartments and seven stores. It is planned to start work on the new theatre in six weeks and to have it ready for opening early in the coming year.

New Birmingham Picture Palace Announced By Mudd & Colley Co.

Birmingham's first motion picture palace will soon be a reality when construction is started on a reported million dollar theatre at 1719–1723 Second avenue, North.

Announcement made by the Mudd & Colley Amusement Company, Inc., that contracts would be let this month and construction start immediately on a building, devoted exclusively to theatre purposes, which will represent an investment of from $750,000 to $1,000,000 when the new theatre opens in the next 8 or 10 months.

Negotiations for the construction of Birmingham's first picture palace have been under way for months. A long term lease was finally arranged on the property, which faces 75 feet on Second avenue and extends 140 feet back to the alley, through Ed S. Allen, of the Molton Realty Company. The plans were accepted a few weeks ago, and bids have been received from contractors throughout the South. The contract is expected to be let in time for work to start next Wednesday morning dismantling the present building in order that foundations may be laid for what is expected to be the handsomest theatre in Alabama and on a par with any in the country.

The motion picture palace, which is to be named later, is to be the latest in theatre building from the point of beauty, comfort and safety, it is stated. It will be entirely of concrete and steel, faced with granite finish terra cotta, with polychrome terra cotta trim. It will occupy the entire area of the lot and will be of the most modern fireproof construction. A departure from the usual in downtown building will be found in the roof, which will be hip style, finished in green Spanish tile.

The front of the building will be distinctive in its design, a modification of the Spanish with a more substantial tendency. Cleverly fashioned windows will add to the front, while a marque of metal will extend practically the entire length of the building.

This gives a fleeting impression of the striking exterior, as disclosed by the architect's plans, while the interior will be a place of beauty, offering such comforts as theatre patrons are not accustomed to finding, it is pointed out. The lobby opens directly to the street and extends for 35 feet across the front of the building. Marble tiled and with decorations of the Adam period, it serves as introduction to the architecturally beautiful foyer. Here, too, as is the case throughout the entire theatre, the decorations are after Adam, all finished in buff, old ivory and gold. The hangings will be of velour in tone with the wall colorings and carpets selected to harmonize. The foyer leads directly into the orchestra, where there will be more than 1,000 seats.

The sweep of the proscenium arch is said to be unusually graceful, with a 40-foot opening. The stage itself will be fully equipped for staging any sort of production. It will be a large one, 35 by 75 feet. There will be 16 commodious dressing rooms under the stage, with shower baths and rest rooms for performers.

An especial feature of the picture palace will be the ventilation. Six large fans will supply ample ventilation. There will be two 12-foot fans, two of 10-foot and two of 8. The projection room will be the most modern obtainable, equipped with six projection machines and a spotlight.

New Theatre at Boston Has Innovation

One of the innovations of the New Boston Theatre is the elevator back stage which carries the actors and actresses from their dressing rooms to the stage. The dressing rooms are particularly well appointed, finished in white tile, white individual dressing tables are provided and each dressing room has bath, toilet and shower. The appointments in the ladies' rooms for the public are equally elaborate and complete.

The Moorlyn Theatre at Ocean City, N. J. has added to the general attractiveness of its exterior by the installation of a fine new Marquise, built by The ProBert Sheet Metal Company, Covington, Kentucky.—(Adv.)

Bell and Howell Market New Portable Camera for Field Use

The Bell and Howell Company of Chicago, Ill., have recently announced the manufacture of a new light-weight, portable standard motion picture camera embodying some operating principles and quickness of operation with a minimum of effort.

The camera is entirely automatic and power is provided by a key wound, governor controlled motor that assures equal and uniform exposure for each frame. There is a trigger control on the motor which enables it to stop and start instantaneously. Thirty-five feet of film are exposed at one winding.

Adjustable speed control permits the taking of pictures at a normal speed of sixteen exposures per second and half speed (8 exposures per second) or any intermediate range. Single pictures are also readily made. The speed control lever may be worked while operating the camera.

Compactness is a feature and it may be held to the eye in the same manner as a spy-glass is used. This facilitates the following of a moving object and the camera is always ready for instant use. A matched view finder enables the photographer to see in the finder exactly what is being photographed on the film. Diaphragm opening dial and focusing dial as well as the spirit level are visible thru the finder and can be adjusted with one hand while the other is holding the camera.

A Universal socket is provided, however, so that a tripod may be used with an interchangeable long range lens. Regular equipment is the 47m/m Taylor-Hobson F 2.5 lens. Bell & Howell indicate that lenses up to 20" telephoto are regularly stocked and that the style of micrometer mounts employed will expedite interchangeability, giving the camera extreme flexibility for field use.

Standard film will be available in day light loading rolls of 100 feet and a capacity of 120 feet of negative loaded in a dark room. A footage dial indicates the number of feet exposed.

Measurements of the camera are but 4½ x 6 x 8 inches and the weight seven pounds.

On account of its portability, ease of operation and rapid set-up, it is expected that the camera will have an appeal to news reel men and others who wish to get around quickly and take pictures under difficult conditions. It should also find favor with theatre proprietors who take pictures of local happenings and with industrial concerns for business use.

Capitol Theatre Opens At Steubenville, O.

Dignified simplicity is the dominant note in the New Capitol Theatre which was recently opened in Steubenville, Ohio, by John K. Papalius and Angelos Constant.

The theatre is housed in a combination theatre and office building and the largest dance hall in the city is located on the second floor. The building itself covers 150 x 181 feet.

Lobby construction is of highly polished Alaskan marble in which French mirrors are inset. A Grecian frieze decorates the closed side of the foyer and the wrought iron mezzanine adds a desired effect to the ensemble. The Corinthian effect is carried out in the pillars of the foyer and their beauty is further enhanced by crystal side lights.

The balcony is of the new continuous type with a straight line of vision to the stage. The ceiling of the balcony is done in polychrome with chandelier drops suspended. Silk panelling is extended to the balcony.

Probably the greatest single feature of the auditorium is the proscenium arch and it has been done in Italian Renaissance style. It is enhanced by a cove of three hundred lights which throw a rainbow effect.

Construction of the balcony is considered a fine piece of engineering. It is built of reinforced concrete and is carried on an eight foot steel truss, 75 feet in length, weighing 52,000 pounds. There is not a pillar or column in the auditorium to impede the view.

The stage is 75 feet wide and 32 feet deep with a forty-two foot opening in the auditorium. Beneath it is space for ten dressing rooms.

Ventilation is taken care of by a plant of the plenum-mushroom type under each third seat and will be capable of renewing all air eight times an hour.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Last Edition"—F. B. O., Special, Cleveland

Times: "It is very exciting, thrilling and realistic. Oh, what a picture! Everyone of those old-timers of newspaperdom who had come to scoff, left to praise. Everyone admitted that never had he seen a picture more true in its realism, more suspense in its action, more gripping in its pathos. And this reviewer, who, in his career had seen many excellent pictures, can truthfully say that this picture is beyond the shadow of a doubt the most lifelike, thrilling and entertaining creation of screen art he has ever had the good fortune to view. Never before has there been a picture produced that deserves more praiseworthy comment from press and audience alike than Emory Johnson's 'The Last Edition.'"

"King on Main Street"—Paramount, Rivoli, New York

Times: "A sparkling light comedy entitled 'The King on Main Street' inspired waves of laughter and genuine outbursts of applause from the audience that filled the Rivoli yesterday afternoon. This new production is singularly refreshing because Mr. Bell has scorned to employ conventional methods in the handling of his players."

Daily News: "The picture was made for Adolphe Menjou, and Menjou nearly makes the picture with his highly imaginative performance as King Serge. He is thoroughly understandable. But what is more, he actually tugs at your heart strings. This picture has our unbounded admiration. It fairly glitters."

Herald-Tribune: "Adolphe Menjou is the star, and the cast included Greta Nissen, Bessie Love, Carlotta Monterey and Oscar Shaw. It is because of these charming people, not forgetting Monta Bell, who directed, that 'The King on Main Street' is the delightful bit of fooling that it is. Because Mr. Menjou is now a star he is not changed in the least and, as a matter of fact, it wouldn't be possible for him to be any better than he has been. The titles are as fine as the rest of the picture."

Morning Telegraph: "'The King on Main Street' provides a delightful bit of fun at the Rivoli, subtle, clever fun, heightened by the magic touch of this welcome newcomer, Monta Bell. Bell seems to have thrown away the good old rubber stamp before he entered a motion picture studio, that is if he possessed one. He doesn't deal in commonplace, and gets his effects by the simplest methods."

"Little Annie Rooney"—United Artists, Million Dollar, Los Angeles

Times: "A new popular triumph goes to Mary Pickford. Her picture, 'Little Annie Rooney' will be hailed far and wide as great entertainment. It is the most amusing comedy she has made in ages, and marks her return to the hoyden type of role in which she has always won the height of favor."

Examiner: "Laughter and tears struggled for supremacy at the opening of Mary Pickford's new film, 'Little Annie Rooney.' Mary is herself again! Mary is once more the delightful little hoyden to whom millions of hearts pay a tribute of sympathy and kindliness. Mary amuses with her waywardness, and touches the human heart strings at will as she turns from hoodlum mood to the tender moments. Drama is strongly evidenced, too."

Daily News: "In 'Little Annie Rooney' Mary Pickford scores what I consider to be the greatest hit of her career. Mary is a minx in a million. There is no doubt of it. Mary gets to you. She had the hard-shelled first-nighters crying with her pathos and guffawing without restraint at her comedy. Can any one say more?"

Express: "Mary Pickford, with a ripened technique for both comedy and pathos makes 'Little Annie Rooney' one of the most popular pictures of her career, and one that will gratify those who always have held that she is a consummate actress. 'Little Annie Rooney' tells a story that is highly dramatic, and which combines comedy with melodrama in a fashion wholly admirable."

Record: "'Little Annie Rooney' is made a film masterpiece through Mary Pickford's supreme acting, and there is no other actress today who could play the role and repeat the ovation accorded to 'America's Sweetheart.' Miss Pickford kept her audience between tears and laughter—but with the laughter predominating. The premiere justified the clamor that she is at her best as an appealing little girl with a sense of humor."

Herald: "The Mary Pickford we all knew and loved is back, Mary goes back in this picture to the type of photoplay which made her famous and brought the world to her feet, and now we again can sit enraptured as she plays her pranks and does the cute and cunning things that we expect and want Mary Pickford to do."

"Proud Heart"—Universal, Astor, New York

Post: "Impressively true . . . A realistic picture, with plenty of romance and melodrama included for those who insist upon all the ingredients for good all around entertainment."

Herald-Tribune: "It ought to run as long as 'Abie's Irish Rose.'"

Evening World: "The excellence of the acting and the obvious sincerity of the actors deserve nothing but praise. It is a play that leaves many a moist eye among the spectators. It has real heart throbs and dramatic power."

Telegram: "An offering that is calculated to bring joy to the heart of the tired business man and leave his spinal vertebrae at rest."

Sun: "Sentimental comedy melodrama of the Ghetto—a few dabs from 'Humoresque,' and a pinch of 'Abie's Irish Rose,' and various other screen, stage and magazine stories. It could scarcely fail to sound financial success judging by the evident enjoyment with which last night's capacity audience followed the unwinding of its plot."

Mirror: "What cool water is to the famished desert traveller, 'Proud Heart' is to this sex maddened, jazz crazed picture era. The ending warms to an endearing pitch, fading out with a smile and a tear . . . it strikes a realistic pace. In our opinion, 'Proud Heart' is an exquisite gem and ranks with the best pictures of the year."

Times: "A cleverly directed and wonderfully sincere picture entitled 'Proud Heart,' now to be seen at the Astor Theatre, a modernized conception of the biblical story of Jacob and Esau, with an attractive Irish Lassie introduced to widen the appeal. Realistically pictured, with an earnest depiction of detail in the scenes that are accompanied by clever captions. This film is splendidly cast, even to the Irish mother and her bright eyed daughter."

World: "True, sound, agreeable. Mr. Laemmle finds himself the possessor of a drama of life in the darker corners which is almost certain to make a strong bid for popularity. Much of its success will be due to the extraordinary acting of the leading player. I think Mr. Schildkraut's work is superb."

Telegraph: "A human document. In addition it is one of the outstanding good pictures of the year—and furthermore, it has all the earmarks of a box-office wow. 'Proud Heart' is one of those rare films that 'get' you. Without display of fireworks, with no pretentious sets or 'impressive' mob scenes, just by the smooth unfolding of its simple, human story, it stirs you and absorbs your interest."

Four Robert Mortons for West Coast

Four West Coast theatres, the Royal, of Los Angeles; the New Capitol of Sacramento and two others, now in process of contruction, but yet un-named, have purchased Robert Morton organs and will feature special organ recitals and musical features as program attractions.

This appears to be in line with the modern tendency to utilize the desire of communities for good music to the advantage of box office receipts.

Among other houses which will pursue the same policy are the new Levine theatre of Portsmouth, Va., which is about to install a $20,000 Robert Morton and Hancock's new theatre, now building at Stuart, Florida, which has ordered one of the new Robert Morton pit organs.

Both of these houses will exploit their musical programs as special features, which is quite practicable, at a moderate expense, as their instruments will provide them with facilities equal to that of a pretentious orchestra but at greatly minimized expenditure.

JAZZ COMEDY

WE take pleasure in announcing Mr. D. W. Griffith's first production under his new Paramount contract. We believe it is one of the finest pictures Mr. Griffith has ever made. A spectacular love-melodrama of the Chicago jazz belt produced in true sweeping Griffith style. Featuring the stars of "Sally of the Sawdust," lovely Carol Dempster and droll W. C. Fields. And reaching an amazing climax in a cyclone scene comparable only to the ice rescue in "Way Down East."

FRANCES MARION—Box-Office!

Something That Is Const

Frances Marion—Sales TNT

THE women of this country form a considerable percentage of all picture theatre goers. Sixty per cent would not be far from wrong. To enlist their support—ACTIVE support—is one of the fundamental principles of selling the picture to the public.

In a two-page announcement to our readers last week, Producers Distributing Corporation justly recognized the work of one of the great feminine brains in the country—the brains of Frances Marion. They told HER story in THEIR story on "Simon the Jester," which Frances Marion adapted for them from the novel by William J. Locke—her first for P.D.C.

The term, "scenarist," or "scenario writer," is a little cold. It is not a word that plunges into the imagination and comes up saturated in color

Producers Distributing Corporation have brought the word up where the sunlight of sales can play it up—sales to the exhibitor of this Metropolitan Pictures production—sales by the exhibitor to his public

"Adapted by Frances Marion." That line is sales TNT for P.D.C. and for the exhibitor.

Help Them Sell Her

THE exhibitor who has played such Frances Marion adaptations as "Humoresque," "Pollyanna," "Secrets," "Potash and Perlmutter," "The Eternal Flame," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "The Dark Angel," knows that he can put his money on the same horse—to win. It's a "future" bet, but a pretty safe one.

Here's a bet for you, Messrs. Flinn, Harvey, and Giegerich over at P.D.C.:

HELP THE EXHIBITOR TO SELL FRANCES MARION TO HIS PUBLIC.

Give him some of your portable, readable copy so that he can, in turn, tell HIS public that they are seeing a product of the brain that created the adaptations of "Humoresque" and the rest.

The Woman Angle

WOMEN are vitally interested in what other women are doing. They go to pictures to see not only the Novarros, the Valentinos, the Dixes, but the Talmadges, the Pringles, the Philbins. For many reasons. Besides, they cannot find enough "Exhibit A's" of women who do big things in ANY form of creative endeavor.

If Frances Marion could tour this country she would do a big job for you and for Frances Marion.

Failing this, provide the exhibitor who books "Simon the Jester" with copy for his advertising, for press notices, for his advance program, for circular letters to the women of his community, telling them what "adaptation" is all about, who Frances Marion is, what she has done, and what they may expect to see.

Frances Marion is a sales instrument for the exhibitor. Help him to USE it

P. D. C. Service

YOU may be 'way ahead of us on this idea, gentlemen. We know that you are getting out letters to exhibitors, pointing out to them PARTICULAR ways of pointing public feet toward their box-offices on PARTICULAR P.D.C. pictures. You don't give a college yell on your products in these letters. You plainly and calmly ANALYZE its ticket selling possibilities. This aside from the regular channels of service to the exhibitor. That's something CONSTRUCTIVE.

It is right to recognize Frances Marion as you did. She deserves it. NOW help the exhibitor to use Frances Marion as his BOX OFFICE deserves.

Yes Sir—CONSTRUCTIVE

WE ARE offering these pages as SOMETHING THAT IS CONSTRUCTIVE. We hope that varied elements in this business will find in them something that IS constructive.

The above, on Frances Marion, may be of use to individuals other than Frances Marion and to organizations other than P.D.C.

The whole idea brings up the subject: What is a contract with an exhibitor? When does the contract begin, and when does it end?

A contract does not end when the salesman walks out of a theatre with the dotted line tucked in his pocket, either for the exhibitor or for the salesman, or the organization he represents.

Making Money Makes a Contract

THE contract does not end until both sides have lived up to obligations other than those of credit and finance, and the picture or series of pictures has made MONEY.

When the exhibitor WORKS, and when the picture WORKS—that s when a contract is terminated. When a contract is terminated in that manner a NEW contract is already being written.

Let's Go to the Movies

With many people movies occupy a large and definite place in each week's program of entertainment. Fortunate is the theatre whose audience consist largely of these regular patrons.

Many theatres depend on a good selection of pictures alone to secure this class of business. But, invariably it's the theatre that gives the best presentation of pictures that attracts steady patronage. People know that most good pictures can be seen at any particular theatre, sooner or later, and they choose the one that shows them best.

Good projection equipment is therefore, of first importance. That is why so many of the most prosperous theatres have installed Simplex Projectors.

Simplex Type S Projector

Simplex

The Simplex Projector is built according to the designs and specifications of engineers whose many years of experience have given them a thorough knowledge of projection requirements.

The selection of material, the making of each part, and the construction of the whole machine is attended by the most diligent care and precise workmanship.

Simplex Projectors are made in several types to fit the requirements of every theatre. For arc-light or incandescent lamp projection it pays to buy a Simplex.

There is a Simplex Service man in your district who will gladly discuss your projection needs with you. Or mail the attached coupon and full description, prices and terms will be sent you without obligation.

Absolute Evidence

Mr. Tom McKean,
Film Booking Offices.
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Mr. McKean:

After a four day run of THE KEEPER OF THE BEES, it looks as if we will have to have a return on it in order to satisfy the hundreds that were turned away. Had we but known the drawing power of this wonder picture, we would have let it in for the entire week.

We had them standing out every night and Saturday was awful. We were filled early in the afternoon and they kept coming at night. We were compelled to turn away hundreds. Wednesday and Thursday we had both THE IRON HORSE and THE GOLD RUSH in competition. Friday and Saturday we had THE GOLD RUSH and other good pictures in competition.

For attendance it broke all records, and THE FRESHMAN is the only picture that has it beat on receipts. THE FRESHMAN was played at advanced prices. All that saw it pronounced it good, and I know of several who saw it twice.

One thing happened that we did not look for, and that was the drawing power it had on the children. It pleased the "kids" the same as a dog picture or Fred Thomson.

To sum it all up, it is a great picture and we only hope it will do as well for all exhibitors as it did for us. A picture like THE KEEPER OF THE BEES is a God-send to the exhibitors. and I sincerely trust we will have more of them.

Very truly yours,

WALTER WALLACE ORPHEUM THEATRE

Rushed in "Bees"

"Dear Van and 'Gang'—Am rushing you a report on 'Keeper of the Bees' as I am the first one in the State of Oklahoma to run this." So says Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre, Osage, Oklahoma. And here's the hot tip:

KEEPER OF THE BEES. (F. B. O.) Star cast including Clara Bow. Here is a PICTURE that will yank folks into the old joint that have never been known to jar loose. Had a cold, blustery night to run this; but they came till we were unable even to furnish standing room. We also had a hunch and raised our admission price to 25-50, which, in a small town, will generally sink you; but they dug up their four bits and came anyway. Oh, Boy! but it is a "Grand and Glorious Feeling" to fill up the old joint to the brim at four bits a throw. While the picture may, for some towns, be a little weak, it will satisfy them and you have enough left to pay the rent.

The Men at the Head

WHILE the mills of the trade politicians were grinding last week and amid all the interviews and whisperings, one man—just one, spoke to us some large and solemn truths.

We quoted his remarks in last week's editorial, in another connection. But they can be quoted again—and again.

He is an exhibitor, one of the kind we refer to as showmen—and hard-boiled. He controls the destinies of many large and small theatres, in cities and towns. He is a keen business man—buys well and sells well; has his mind sharply attuned to box-office success, and gets it.

A successful showman, but also a citizen of the country, alive to the welfare of the American home; alive, too, to the vast influence of the picture and therefore to the huge responsibilities of those who make and show them; alive to present day box-office success but mostly solicitous about its future, for he's a fixture in his community life and doesn't expect to sell out and cash in, while the going is good.

And, by and large, throughout the land there are a lot of exhibitors just like him, also showmen but also settled business and social factors in their respective communities, however small; and undoubtedly they are thinking just about as he does.

He said: "I don't care who runs the works here in New York. I don't want any of the big jobs. I want to go home and work. But what I do insist upon is constructive leadership, so I will get pictures that not only hold up the box-office but let me hold up my head in my community. I'll follow the right men, whoever they are and whatever their companies may be, just so I know that they are in this business for the sake of the motion picture and not merely for their own, that they are building up the industry and not merely their own fortunes, that they are men of their word, that they are constructing and not tearing down. And I want to say this: that if we haven't got this kind of men I'll be one to start a revolution—and get them."

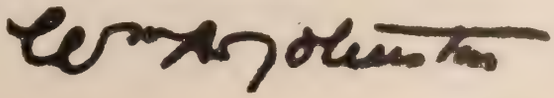
There's a lot in these bluntly spoken words —and a warning all around:

The stakes are tempting in this business today—for men whose ambitions for wealth or power or both are totally selfish.

Prosperous times—an era of great expansion are ahead of us. The industry itself is entering the era of Big Business. Alone of all American industries this one of ours controls the world market for its goods—a vast and unique commercial development.

But the responsibilities!

It is not merely that billions of dollars worth of theatre real estate here and abroad are dependent upon the American film.



The picture today is the advance agent of all commerce. So that far beyond the industry of the film the great industries of the world are involved in its progress.

But, again, even that is not its greatest force.

It is its social influence that counts most. And every exhibitor in America today and throughout the world is feeling all about him the steady compelling demand that his show be such as to advance the best interests of humanity.

All this we bring to the sober attention of those leaders of the American film industry in Hollywood and in a few buildings here in New York whose administration of film affairs today is felt, as is no other single force, throughout the low and high places of the world.

Their stature must be big. And their reward should be commensurate. But it cannot be selfishly desired and selfishly had. And they've got to be considerably more than showmen, considerably more than captains of industry, immeasurably more than Czars, and almighty humble.

AN EDITOR

An Editorial

THE success in this market of "The Voice of The Nightingale" indicates clearly enough that the way is wide open here to foreign pictures of merit. More than that, the American market is earnestly reaching forth—in any direction—for just such pronounced and excellent novelties.

"The Voice of The Nightingale" won the Riesenfeld prize offered for the best short subject. The prize, too, was awarded by a committee of experienced exhibitors with eyes trained to know box-office value.

This short feature will be played by the first run theatres of this country. It will be featured in their bills and in their advertising. With all classes of theatres it will roll up a record volume of bookings. Educational is backing it with heavy advertising. The picture will prove highly profitable to all concerned.

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational.

Does this savor of discrimination against foreign product? Isn't the contrary true? And why can we not have more—many more—such pictures from abroad?

The picture is exquisitely and painstakingly done. In this respect it is a work quite apart from the rush of the American studios. Perhaps, also, that is true of its conception. At any rate, we do not produce such pictures here; and Europe does. With so well proven a demand, why not increase the supply?

We have already spoken of the almost desperate need of novelty attractions for the American theatre. Our own pictures are too much alike. If pictures can be made of a different flavor to please the American taste, there can be little question of their very profitable success here. The reception given "The Voice of The Nightingale" points the way—a very broad way.

WE don't know just how seriously to take it, but the man who gave us the following tip has our utmost respect and never talks loosely.

According to him there's a bright silver lining to the cloud overhanging, just at present, the independent field.

Very quietly but surely the independent exhibitors—and there are many of them and many strong ones—are being lined up to support a program of independent production, to be released through independent exchanges.

What interests us, right now, is the entire practicability of the thing. Why not?

The idea cropped up at the Milwaukee Convention, and was considerably discussed. It took the form of a sort of "Second National," franchises being given, however, directly to several thousand theatres instead of primarily to key city theatres and then secondarily to others of smaller size throughout the country.

As to the present scheme we know nothing—the details of its structure. But it ought to be a fairly simple procedure, profiting by the experience of the industry and putting together the best of the various cooperative enterprises.

For instance, that was a basically sound proposition of W. W. Hodkinson's in the early days of Paramount, to-wit, that producers be held accountable to the distributor through box-office reports from exhibitors on each of their pictures.

On the other hand, the franchise exhibitors must obligate themselves to take the product scheduled—until the producer proves himself unfit. That is no more—and not so much, as they do today with any distributor when they book in block.

Then the Metro idea was an excellent one—and worked. The structure was composed of (a) the home company in New York, (b) independent exchanges, (c) independent producers. Each participated in a percentage of the gross.

There's a great opportunity here and plenty of workable ideas. In fact that is true right along of the industry in general. Big opportunities and plenty of ideas prevail. But to get the men—to execute the ideas to fill the opportunities! There's the rub.

The man to head this proposed organization must be one in whom the members of the co-operative scheme place complete trust. They've got to let him make the decisions—as to product and to distribution and franchise policy. Executive committees must function, but the man on the job is the force that will either make or unmake the edifice.

"CLASSIFIED" is being generally hailed as Corinne Griffith's best picture. So I visited the Strand Theatre at the second show last Monday afternoon to get the audience reaction. The house was packed and the eager faces, laughs and applause gave the impression that here was a spirited convention of Corinne Griffith fans. "Classified" is going over; no question about that.

E. M. Asher, producer of Corinne Griffith productions for First National.

The interesting fact here is that E. M. Asher, who insisted upon the vehicle and its treatment, did so against the advice and entreaty of most everyone. The star would never do in light roles, they opined. And lo and behold! She holds her large following and delights them. And one is led to conclude that about the best thing for motion pictures is to shatter as often as possible the pet studio traditions, and the pigeon-holed ideas in general, as to what constitutes a show.

WE gave the advance information several weeks ago that two new pictures—Valentino's "The Eagle" and Bill Hart's "Tumbleweeds" were going to be good. Well, "The Eagle" has reached New York and receives a hearty welcome from the critics; and the public stood in long lines on Broadway after the announcement that Valentino would appear in person. The Strand is holding the picture over for a second week. Now we're awaiting "Tumbleweeds." We still hear the most favorable reports.

Also we forecast from the coast studios "Stella Dallas" and "The Big Parade." Both open next week.

THERE'S more talk along Broadway right now about the Fox Film Corporation than any other concern. Bidding high, as he is, for the best the stage affords, and dipping right and left into the story market, William Fox is making his competitors step lively—and often unsuccessfully. This year the Fox line-up will contain another roster of attractions.

William Fox, head of Fox Film Corp.

W. R. Sheehan is at the coast studios, getting the stage all set for production. William Fox is to go out later.

Then theatres! Wherever you see a bit of smoke today in the big centres a story unfolds of a new Fox theatre, large and lavish. The Fox Theatre Corporation, the large assets of which grew out of only five thousand dollars, is evidently planned and geared to do some heavy financing.

Fox will prove a big contender.

JIMMY GRAINGER is off again on one of his remarkable sales trips. With many millions in the Fox books and a well laid campaign ahead of him, he says his firm will rank in gross business right up at the head of the list.

Jimmy's recipe of success is: work. Just that. There's too much golf in the business, is his private opinion, but that doesn't hold a candle, he says, to the time wasted in idle gossip. At lunch, over the telephone, in hotel lobbies, and worse still, in print, the chatter goes on like a brook. Boil the rumors all down, says he, and you haven't got left a penny's worth of fact. And while the magpies are chattering along the side lines, the big parade and its opportunities for them go by.

AND from the west coast another man—and also a hard worker—writes in the same vein: William Koenig, formerly in charge of the Universal Studios and now studio manager for Warners.

He says:

"It was with great pleasure that I read Messrs. Zukor's and Schenck's statements on Producer-Owned Theatres.

"Both articles are excellent, but what struck me as most wonderful was that each of these gentlemen stated: if the people in the motion picture business (by this I mean publishers, producers, actors and theatre owners) would mind their own business, and not worry about the other fellow, it would be much better off.

"This seems to be the only business in the commercial world where every time an executive is changed, an actor discharged, or a disgruntled employee let out, the entire industry gets up in arms and discusses the affair for weeks. When will we all realize that this is a business and not a playground?

"I blame the trade papers as much as I do the gossipers for this situation. The publishers grasp at scandal and immediately print it without taking into consideration why the change was made, and whether or not it was for the good of the organization. I hope that some day the business will be so adjusted that when an organization which spends hundreds of thousands of dollars on their productions, decides to make a change in management, cast or story—the people of the industry will realize that great thought has been given before such action is decided upon, and should commend rather than criticize the decision.

"In no other business do I know of a situation similar to this, where it would seem that everyone takes delight in 'panning' every move that is made. I had this experience when I was a theatre manager and secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners. We never could get a harmonious meeting—there were always jealousies which spoiled the meetings. It will be a great step forward when the picture business gets on a commercial basis, the same as any other big industry, and eliminates jealousy and gossip.

"I was particularly interested in Mr. Zukor's statements regarding his theatre deals. Having been an exhibitor I can readily understand why producers have gone into the theatre business. I used to think no matter what price was quoted me on a picture, that it was too high—but since becoming connected with the producing end of the business I see how unjust I was to the producer—knowing when I booked a picture, that I was sure to make a profit.

"Mr. Zukor strikes the nail on the head when he mentions the grief the producer goes through in mak-

WE sat in the crowded Embassy Theatre the other night and saw Cecil B. De Mille's first independently produced picture, "The Road to Yesterday." The hour was very late—in fact it was midnight when proceedings began and quite a little distance into the morning when they ended. But the picture held—every foot of the way.

All the De Mille magic was present. For thrills, there is a sensational train wreck,—quite the best the screen has ever seen. There is a love story, which gains through transition back to "Yesterday" and again back to modern times; it is well-acted, elaborately staged; compelling; highly interesting. Everything in this picture has been done well. It hits the mark—artistically, dramatically, and box-office wise. A fine picture, a great picture, a credit to De Mille and a golden thing for P. D. C. and the exhibitors who will play it.

PAUL LAZARUS is back with United Artists, cordially welcomed as a man and an executive of great ability. Paul is one of the most popular and admired men in this industry; deservedly so. All his friends—and they are legion—hail his return to Broadway with real pleasure.

THE Connecticut situation has at last been settled to the satisfaction of both sides. Governor Trumbull has pledged himself to modification of the law at the next session of the Legislature. Distributors are returning to the State and normal business is being resumed. Collection of the tax will, of course, go on for the present; but the great moral victory has been won. The statute is a hardship on Connecticut exhibitors. The Governor has freely and fairly acknowledged that fact. And congratulations are due, for the handling of a most difficult situation, to Mr. Hays, Mr. Pettijohn and Joseph W. Walsh, head of the Connecticut theatre owners.

THE theatre war goes merrily along. We hear this week that Finkelstein & Ruben now have 75 theatres. Universal has acquired an important house in Dallas. The Skouras interests in St. Louis are building up a vast chain. Mike Comerford is steadily adding to his string. A. H. Blank is expanding his theatre holdings. And—many more.

No doubt about it—this is the theatre era of the industry. It is a big job just to keep track of what is going on in that field. What the ultimate result will be nobody can foretell. But this is clear; in its main lines of activity the industry is prospering mightily; and the continuance of prosperity, no matter what magnitude theatre operations may assume, will depend, even more emphatically than ever before, on first-class pictures.

THE Hays organization has issued a bulletin entitled "Facts About Scenario Writing," which is very much to the point. The scenario editors themselves state that the demands of screen writing are great; advise aspirants to sell their stories first to a magazine; declare that experience is essential; published story or stage play is preferred; and screen writing is as difficult as stage writing. This is a useful piece of work. There is no department of motion picture activity whose requirements are so little understood by the public as this same business of scenario writing—a fact that is proved by the Bulletin's assertion that one hundred thousand people a year write one or more scenarios. Of these not more than three or four reach the screen.

ing pictures. If an exhibitor could only spend one month at a studio and see what has to be gone through with on every production, especially the ones which involve hundreds of thousands of dollars, they would be better able to see the producer's angle and more willing to pay what he asks for his product, as they would realize what an undertaking each picture is.

"And last but not least, I want to touch on the most amusing part of this business to me—which is that the papers publish a lot of scandal in which the public is not the least bit interested. After all, the public is only interested in big, fine, clean theatres with first class pictures, and if we give them these, and eliminate back-biting and jealousies that now exist, it will be a much greater and finer industry."

MARY and Doug may appear jointly in a picture to be made abroad. In fact, that is as definite a plan as they have, after "Black Pirate" and "Scraps" are finished. The latter picture, by the way, is said to be superior to "Little Annie Rooney."

At any rate, the two will go abroad shortly and look over the production ground. Should they produce over there, the interiors will be made at the Ufa Studios.

COSTUMES AND VALENTINO

DISCUSSION has been rife in film circles of late as to the status and popularity of Valentino, and the results which would come from his contract with Joseph M. Schenck. The first fruits of that association, "The Eagle," are on display this week at the New York Mark Strand theatre. This is dealt with in review elsewhere in this issue, and the popularity question remains to be answered at the box-offices of the country, but some highly interesting views on pictures and picture making were expressed by Mr. Valentino, who arrived in New York last Saturday to be here for the premiere.

The moot point of costume pictures was one of these.

"I realize fully," he said, "the feeling that exists among exhibitors in regard to costume pictures, and the reason for it. I have no desire to try to change public taste, even if that were possible, but I cannot forget that my two greatest successes, and those with which I am most strongly identified in the public mind—"The Four Horsemen" and "The Sheik"—were both costume roles. Since they still remember me as Julio and as The Sheik, isn't it reasonable to suppose that they like to see me in roles of that sort?

"Then there is another important angle, closely related to the other. The fans seem to want to see me in colorful, romantic roles and situations. That, in turn, demands 'costume,' for a very important reason. If a man attired in armor rides up on a white charger and carries off a girl dressed in velvet and silk, against a background of castles and moats and drawbridges, that is Romance—and the action seems perfectly in keeping with the setting. But if a young man drives up in a high powered roadster and elopes with a flapper from a modern apartment house—that is lurid melodrama. The things of today lack romantic glamor to us. Two

Carmel Myers is an alluring figure as Iris, the siren of "Ben Hur" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer), to which this photograph attests.

Joyce Compton, one of the promising youngsters among the "new faces," has been signed by F. B. O. for a part in "A Broadway Lady."

Sam Bischoff greets his partner, Nat Levine, in Los Angeles for a conference on the production line-up for the forthcoming season.

One of the gorgeous ballet scenes for "The Midnight Sun" (Universal), in which Laura La Plante essays the greatest role of her career, that of premiere ballerina of an opera company. She may be seen on the steps in the foreground.

Charlie Chase, being presented by Hal Roach in a series of comedies for Pathe, demonstrates that he is something of an acrobat as well as a screen funster.

hundred years from now, we will appear romantic to another day and age.

"The rum runner of today is much the same as the pirates and privateers of earlier days—but where a story of the Spanish Main would be picturesque and colorful, a modern story of rum runners and chasers would probably be classed as rather cheap melodrama.

"Mr. Schenck strongly champions the modern story, but he himself remarked that in 'The Eagle' he did not even notice the costumes, because the characters were entirely natural. And right there, I believe, is the crux of the whole costume situation. Too many costume pictures were all costume and no drama. If proper attention is paid to the human values and to the story, keeping the costumes in their rightful place, subservient to the characters, the audience will forget that it is a costume picture.

"My next picture will probably be a modern society story, for the sake of variety, but I still hope, some day, to do a smashing costume success which will demonstrate, once and for all, that the prejudice is not against costume pictures but against the wrong kind of costume dramas."

His next picture, he announced, would probably be directed by George Fitzmaurice, an arrangement which he felt would be admirable.

"It is difficult," he remarked, "to find a director for just that sort of picture. He must have a sense of the colorful and romantic, perhaps a bit of the Continental touch, and still be able to handle big human drama. That is a rare combination. I should very much like to have Von Stroheim direct me in a picture. He has exactly the blending of cynicism and sentiment that seems necessary. Other directors give the sophisticated, deft comedy touch, but they fail to arouse the emotions or to create sympathetic roles for the players."

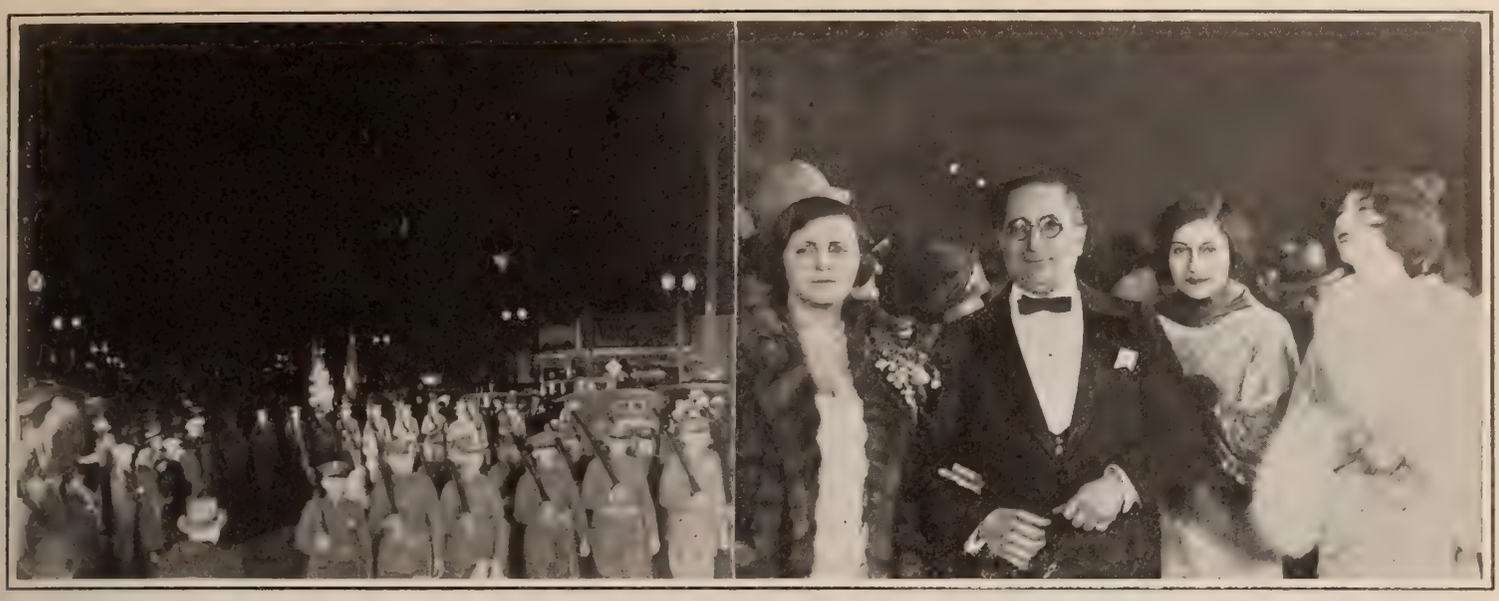
He also expressed the belief that a woman scenarist was desirable in his case. While warmly praising Kraly for his work on "The Eagle," he pointed out that a woman continuity writer best understood the sort of appeal it was desirable to create in his roles.

RUDOLPH ON LOCATION

YOU never know where or when you may run across folks from the old home town, a fact which is attested to by Gerald K. Rudolph, publicity manager for Fox, who recently accompanied Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager, to Los Angeles. Rudolph paid a trip to the Victor Schertzinger unit at Fort Huachuca, about 18 hours from Los Angeles, filming "The Golden Strain."

When mess was called in the evening, Rudolph joined the other members of the Fox company at dinner, which was served in the building known as the Club. After dinner Rudolph was seated at a table with Schertzinger, Madge Bellamy, Ann Pennington, Hobart Bosworth, Kenneth Harlan and other members of the cast. During the conversation an officer of the Tenth Cavalry entered.

"I was introduced to the officer," writes Rudolph, "but I did not catch his name. He was invited to join the party, and a few minutes later the telephone rang. One of the orderlies answered the telephone and as he placed the receiver to his ear he said into the transmitter, 'Buffalo Club.' Overhearing the remark, I turned to Schertzinger and said, 'I just heard something that will make a good story for me.' Schertzinger asked what it was, and I told him that inasmuch as my home was in Buffalo and that there was a Buffalo Club there, I would write a story for the Buffalo newspapers about the Buffalo Club at Fort Huachuca.



"The officer to whom I had been introduced, having apparently overheard my remark, asked me if it were true that my home was in Buffalo. I replied that it was true and he asked me where I lived. I told him that my home was on Richmond Avenue. Imagine my surprise when he informed me that his parents lived on Richmond Avenue. With an apology for not having remembered his name when he was introduced to me, I asked him who he was. He told me he was Frank Kirby Chapin, and that his father, Brigadier General William Chapin, retired, lives a few doors from my home on Richmond Avenue. Naturally the coincidence affected both of us more or less, and further enlightenment followed on both sides. The upshot of our meeting was that Major Chapin (that is the commission he now holds) directed an orderly to go to the quarters where I had been installed, collect my baggage and remove it to his home, where I became his guest during my stay at the post.

army life, there are entertainment features of various kinds. Not the least is a completely equipped motion picture theatre where the best pictures are shown once a week. There is also polo, baseball, golf, swimming, horseback riding, and other sports for the men, and there are social features in which the women play their customary parts. During the stay of the Fox company at the post some sort of entertainment was provided by the officers and their wives each evening, and in return for the cordial welcome extended the members of the Fox cast, the latter presented a vaudeville performance one evening. It is needless to say that Ann Pennington, late star of the Ziegfield Follies, was the hit of the show in a variety of dances which have made her famous. Other members of the Fox company contributed to what under the circumstances was a fairly complete vaudeville program.

"Fort Huachuca is about thirty miles from the one-time famous town of Tombstone, and it was my privilege to be taken there to see what was left of a once thriving mining community. I saw there the relic called the Bird Cage Theatre, which in the days when Tombstone was in its prime was one of the most notorious dance halls in the West. It is said that three hundred men breathed their last on the floor of that place, having for one reason of another intercepted a bullet or two from an adversary's gun. I also visited the town of Bisbee, with its famous Browery Gulch, and also dropped over about thirty miles beyond Bisbee to the Mexican town of Agua Prieta, where I saw a Halloween dance that reminded me of other days thirty years ago. My visit to the great West will always be remembered, and among the outstanding incidents will be those that occurred in connection with my week's stay at Fort Huacuca."

CONTRACTUALLY SPEAKING

SOME of the odd provisions in the contracts of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stars and featured players are revealed as follows: John Gilbert's contract provides that he must pass on all stories and have three months' rest each year; Conrad Nagel will never dye his hair, or appear as a brunette; Renee Adoree's contract is drawn up in French and English under the laws of both countries; Carmel Myers must not cut her hair; Claire Windsor must have every July 10th off for her son Billy's birthday; Pauline Starke must never be asked to work on Sundays or on legal holidays.

No wonder it takes a Philadelphia lawyer to draw up a star's contract! Next thing they'll be wanting a clause providing that they need not buy an interviewer's luncheon more than three times a week—and then where will the scribes eat the rest of the time?

MRS. J. I. SCHNITZER PRESENTS—

CONGRATULATIONS are being tendered around F. B. O. to J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president in charge of production, at whose home an infant daughter arrived on November 4th, weighing some seven pounds and declared by the proud father to be wonderfulest ever. Mrs. Schnitzer and Miss Schnitzer are doing very nicely.

NATACHA RAMBOVA HERE

AN important arrival of the week was Natacha Rambova (Mrs. Rudolph Valentino), who came in on the Leviathan on Tuesday afternoon and started work on "Do Clothes Make the Woman?" on Thursday for F. B. O.. The question in the title should be pretty well answered in the picture, since Mrs. Valentino brought with her 40 trunks of new finery, including 32 Spanish shawls from Madrid, for use in the photoplay. She was tendered a gala reception at the pier when the boat docked, and a luncheon was served in the main dining salon.

EARLE'S EARLY GAS MASK

EARLE FOXE, who stars in two-reelers for the Fox Film Corporation, claims that he invented gas masks long before the World War ever loomed on the horizon. It was when he was but a boy, a boy with a profound dislike for either the smell or taste of milk. He was born into a family of confectioners. At sixteen his dad put him to making ice cream. Earle had read about coal-miners and the contrivances they utilized to combat deadly fumes encountered in their work. So he got a description of the masks they wore and rigged one up along the same style — only better.

PAUL LAZARUS REJOINS
United Artists in Executive Capacity

PAUL LAZARUS, one of the most popular and capable of film executives, has rejoined United Artists in an executive capacity after an absence of about a year when he was engaged in the publishing business in San Francisco.

Mr. Lazarus returned to his duties with United Artists this week. He was formerly one of the heads of the distribution department and the new post which he now assumes is of equal importance.

As Director of Advertising and Publicity for Vitagraph, Mr. Lazarus first won attention in the industry. When United Artists was formed, he occupied a similar position with that company, and made a marked success, after which he transferred his activities to the sales department and was equally successful.

Sweden Likes American Films

"Hot Water" Probably Greatest Success, Says President of Swedish Film Company

CHARLES MAGNUSSON, president of the Swedish Film Industry, Inc., of Stockholm, who is at present visiting the studios around Los Angeles is author for the statement that "American motion pictures are teaching the people of Sweden to think like Americans, dress like them and act like them."

"It is impossible almost to find a woman in Sweden whose hair has not been bobbed," continued Magnusson. "They are all emulating the American screen stars, and bobbed heads are almost universal throughout the North country." Among other places, Magnusson visited the Harold Lloyd studio where he met William R. Fraser, general manager of the Lloyd corporation. He was shown Harold Lloyd and Jobyna Ralston filming several scenes for Lloyd's next Paramount picture "For Heaven's Sake."

"Out of the 140 pictures we use in our theatres in a year's time 90 or 100 will be 'made in America.' The Swedish public demands American pictures. The stars that are most popular in the United States rank the same in Sweden. Harold Lloyd's "Hot Water" probably stands as the greatest film success in Sweden."

Besides producing and distributing a large majority of the pictures made in Sweden, Swedish Film Industry, Inc., also controls 105 of its largest theatres.

"Our plant in Stockholm covers about 12 acres, but we have only two production stages. . . . We are now using virtually the same equipment in production one finds in the best equipped studios here. We have to depend almost entirely on artificial lighting. . . . During the past year we made only four pictures" continued Magnusson "but since we started producing in 1909 we have filmed approximately 200.

"Our greatest difficulty is distribution. Our 6,000,000 population is so widely scattered that we must overcome problems never met by American distributors. More attention is given specialization in music themes by Swedish exhibitors than to elaborate presentations" declared Magnusson.

"U" Fills Sales Directorate

Ralph Williams Appointed Third Member Under Recently Organized Plan

RALPH B. WILLIAMS has been added to the new sales directorate of Universal and will serve on the board with Lou B. Metzger and Earl Kramer. Williams was named sales director for the Southern division. Metzger is in charge of the Western division and Kramer of the Eastern division, including Canada.

Under the Universal Sales Directorate plan, inaugurated last year the exchanges of the country are divided into three grand divisions, and the supervisors or directors of those divisions have their headquarters in the Universal Home Office in New York. From time to time these directors swing around the circuit of their divisions. This system assures frequent contact between the Sales Director and his exchange managers, as well as between the Sales Director and the leading exhibitors of his territory, and also makes for constant liaison between the Sales Directors and the Home Office.

When first inaugurated, the sales Directorate system was understood to be on trial. It is of proven value now and the continuance of the system, under new heads, is proof positive that the directorate system of sales co-ordination solves many problems of the film selling business and eliminates many of its bad features.

Under the Universal plan, at least one Sales Director is always in New York, with power to pass on important emergency questions as they come up from day to day, whatever territory they may concern. He also is on hand to present the Sales Department point of view to the Universal officials at any time on any question.

East Coast Theatres Gets Another House

The East Coast Theatres Company, recently organized with Oscar Neufeld of the De Luxe Exchange as treasurer, Sam Stiefel also of the De Luxe as president and Isadore Epstein as secretary, has taken over the four-year lease on the Karlton Theatre, Pleasantville, Pa., from Mrs. Jeanne Guillernett, who has operated the theatre very successfully for several years.

The East Coast Theatres Company, interlocked as it is with the Stiefel interests, is planning to acquire extensive theatre holdings and eventually will acquire a chain of a score or more houses in this territory.

Famous Declares Regular Quarterly Dividend

At a meeting held Monday the Board of Directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share on the common stock, payable January 2nd, 1926, to stockholders of record at the close of business on December 15th, 1925. The books will not close.

Four Bloomington Houses Are Merged

Four theatres in Bloomington, Ill., have been merged into one organization to be known as Bloomington Theatres, Inc. The houses included are the Illini, Majestic, Irvin and Castle. Guy W. Martin will continue to manage the Illini, Irvin and Castle, while the Majestic will be under the management of Jack Spicer.

Admission Tax Repeal Discussed in Capitol

THE House Ways and Means committee in executive session at Washington, D. C., took up the question of repealing the admission tax on November 9, but ran into such a heated controversy that it became necessary to pass that provision by without action.

Representatives of the motion picture industry, headed by Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the Hays organization, and including a number of prominent men, placed their petition for repeal of the tax before the committee on October 24, declaring that the tax on popular-priced amusement is a deterrent to business which is causing a loss to the Government far in excess of the amount actually collected. They declared that the Government gets, it is true, over $30,000,000 a year from the tax on admissions, but contended that it so curtailed business that the Government lost more than that sum in income tax and surtaxes from the industry.

When the question of repeal of the tax came up in the committee, a number of members were in favor of eliminating the admission provision from the new bill, but others believed that the amount of revenue was too great to lose, in view of the other cuts that are being made and held out for its retention. The committee will return to this provision later and make an effort to come to some agreement as to the action to be taken.

Connecticut Tax Situation is Solved; Selling Resumed

Modification or Repeal of Law in 1927 is Promised

SELLING of motion pictures in Connecticut was resumed on Thursday of this week, with the exchanges being reopened as rapidly as possible, following a satisfactory agreement among all parties concerned and the promise of repeal or modification of the tax law when the Legislature convenes in January, 1927.

The rotating fund will be continued for the payment of the tax, which will necessarily work some hardship upon Connecticut exhibitors until the law can be repealed or modified, but a considerable moral victory has been won in that the state officials have publicly admitted that the law is a failure and means a hardship upon Connecticut theatre owners. This, it is hoped, will forestall similar legislation in other states, which might have followed if the Connecticut tax had been a success.

All elements of the industry have worked together solidly in the fight for relief in the situation, and Joseph W. Walsh, president of the Connecticut M. P. T. O. declares that it is a splendid example of the results of one hundred per cent co-operation. Walsh has worked in association with Charles C. Pettijohn, of the Hays' office, in maintaining this co-operation and conducting the campaign for repeal of the burdensome tax.

"Great credit should be given the Hays' organization for this victory," said Walsh this week. "If it had not been for their splendid co-operation with all of us in Connecticut, nothing could have been accomplished. Internal dissension in a time like this would have been fatal. Charles Pettijohn has worked unceasingly on this matter, and deserves a lot of credit for the victory, and the conference between Will H. Hays and Governor Trumbull on Thursday of last week was the final deciding factor.

"The exhibitors of Connecticut have stood in line splendidly, backing us up in every way, but it should be understood that the victory is one by the industry, and not by any single faction or individual. The value of one hundred per cent co-operation has never been more strikingly demonstrated."

The significant statement by Governor Trumbull, issued on Friday of last week, was as follows:

"It seems to be the consensus of opinion generally that this law works hardships upon the Connecticut theatre owners not anticipated, and that it should be amended or modified. I do not believe there is any necessity for the censorship feature in this bill and I have heretofore expressed myself on that phase of it. I intend to co-operate with the local theatre men in their efforts to modify this law to make it more equitable, and to eliminate the censorship feature, and I have already so expressed myself to these men."

Charles C. Pettijohn had this to say:

"In order to remove the disadvantages under which the Connecticut theatre owners are now operating, due to the changed method in the distribution of film, it has been decided to restore the former method of distribution in Connecticut. We are going to operate under this law until the next session of the Connecticut Legislature, in the belief that the members of that legislature will see fit to correct the situation. We intend to dismiss the lawsuit and continue our co-operation with the tax commissioner in the meantime."

With the reopening of the New Haven exchanges, employment will once more be given to several hundred persons. Prints and accessories are being shipped to the exchanges as rapidly as possible, and arrangements are being made for exhibitors to return prints to that point which were shipped to them from New York or Boston.

The work of the tax collector will be greatly simplified, since it will no longer be necessary to affix the trailers in New York, the full operation taking place at the New Haven exchanges.

Berwilla Studio Taken Over by Thomas

RICHARD THOMAS has taken over the Berwilla Studios in Santa Monica Boulevard and will remodel the plant at a cost of $100,000. The studio will be one of the most completely equipped on the coast when these improvements are completed early in December. It will be known as the Richard Thomas Productions Studio and will be available for independent producers when not being used by Thomas.

The present plans of Thomas, who is backed by Los Angeles and San Francisco financiers, calls for the production of eight all-star features a year. The first of these will be a screen version of William Dudley Pelley's Saturday Evening Post story, "What Women Love." Albert Shelby Levino has completed the adaptation. Thomas has to his credit twenty-seven pictures which he has produced and directed.

Christie Ballyhoo Car Is Wrecked in Utah

The Al Christie auto ballyhooing "Seven Days" in a trip from and to the west coast, came to an ignominous finish when it plunged into a deep, unlighted culvert and was completely wrecked near Cedar City, Utah, last week, while being driven by Mike Newman.

The car had made the trip in less than seven days from Los Angeles to New York and was maintaining much the same pace on the return journey when it met disaster. Neither Newman nor Edward Cox, who was accompanying him met with serious injury, though both were considerably shaken up. In the course of the journey the car had traveled twelve thousand miles and had visited three hundred and eighty towns.

Florence Mills To Build Big Harlem Theatre

Florence Mills, noted colored star and entertainer is to erect a 3,200 seat motion picture house in Harlem, the Colored belt in New York City. She will cater exclusively to Colored patronage and will conduct the theatre in the same manner as the Broadway picture palaces are conducted.

Miss Mills' plan is to book first run attractions exclusively with all of the modern presentation ideas. She will have a symphony orchestra, colored prologues and brilliant effects. U. S. Thompson, noted Negro dancer, will be the managing director. Miss Mills is said to have recently profited handsomely in a Florida land deal.

Exhibitors In France Prosper

Admission Figures for 1924 Show Big Improvement Over Those of 1923

EXHIBITION of motion pictures in France showed a decided improvement in 1924 over 1923, the percentage of increased business reported by 159 theatres showing an aggregate of 17.76. In 1924 these houses showed total receipts of 100,606,575 francs as compared with 85,428,746 francs taken in by 169 theatres in 1923. But for the difficulty of French companies in securing aid from banks a marked expansion in the exhibition field would be recorded.

Among the Paris houses business was particularly good, as indicated by the fact that in 1924 only ten houses did not show an increase in receipts. The total increase in Paris over 1923 was approximately 15,000,000 francs.

While the French theatres showed 17.76 per cent increase in receipts they also showed the astounding increase of 196.01 per cent in taxes. In 1924 the taxes totaled 20,479,416 francs as compared with 6,918,482 francs in 1923. These figures with the following were prepared by Reginald Ford.

Five first run houses show an increase of 4,244,435 francs in 1924 as follows:

Theater	1923	1924
Marivaux	4,080,745	5,852,422
Madeleine	1,974,827	2,777,667
Max Linder	1,831,999	2,311,393
Aubert-Palace	2,001,636	2,947,843
Corso	503,718	748,035
Total	10,392,925	14,637,360

The weekly program houses took in 75,035,821 francs in 1923 and 85,969,215 francs in 1924, or an increase of 14.57 per cent.

The following table shows how business at the ten leading houses fluctuated last year and the year before:

Theater	1923	1924
Marivaux	4,080,745	5,852,422
Gaumont-Palace	3,491,061	3,754,551
Lutetia	2,231,178	2,947,843
Aubert-Palace	2,001,636	2,777,667
Madeleine	1,974,827	2,579,847
Max Linder	1,831,999	2,316,357
Pathe-Palace	1,655,775	2,311,393
Palais des Fetes	1,605,808	1,956,022
Tivoli	1,588,696	1,943,909
Omnia	1,482,321	1,838,647

Admission Tax Unchanged

House Committee Report Continues Tax As It Exists at Present Time

THE House committee on ways and means has completed its work on the rate provisions of the new revenue law, passing over the admission tax without change. It is probable that the bill to be introduced by the committee will continue the present tax, from which the Government derives over $30,000,000 a year, but it is possible that exemption will be provided for admissions to the spoken drama and to high-class concerts, such as the philharmonics.

The admission tax provision was the subject of considerable controversy among the members of the committee, it is understood, but was retained, together with a reduced tax on passenger automobiles, because of the fear that the tax cuts already made might be too far in excess of the amount set by the Treasury as the "limit of safety."

It is quite probable, however, that when the measure comes up on the floor of the House, this tax, together with other levies retained, will be the subject of debate with a view to ascertaining whether their elimination is not possible in order that the slate may be cleaned of all war taxes.

The committee decided to call upon Augustus Thomas and William A. Brady to come to Washington to assist members in the framing of a provision which would exempt the spoken drama from the tax. There is no hope, however, that the proposed extension will also cover the motion picture theatres.

Legeros—F. P.-L. Case Settled

Minneapolis Board of Arbitration Decides for Exhibitor; Awarded $2,292.60

THE Arbitration Board of Minneapolis, in a decision handed down this week, in the case of Legeros vs. Famous Players-Lasky, ordered the defendant to pay the exhibitor the sum of $2,292.60. Instructions to A. B. Leak, Paramount exchange manager in Minneapolis, from the home office of Famous indicate that the company intends to abide by the ruling of the Arbitration Board.

Part of the instructions received by Leak, relative to the case, from the Paramount home office executive division were as follows: "We have carefully considered both sides of the Legeros arbitration matter and after considering the matter, we have decided that regardless of whether or not the award of the arbitration board was just or regardless of any legal possibilities in the case, we must abide fully by the decision the arbitration board made. Our previous and present attitude toward arbitration has not changed. Therefore any other stand than that of abiding by the arbitration board decision would be inconsistent and wrong."

The case arose out of a complaint by Legeros that Famous had failed to supply him with certain pictures for which he had contracted.

Film Renter Moves Into New Quarters

Announcement is made by The Film Renter and Moving Picture News, the English publication, that its editorial and edvertising offices have been moved to 58 Great Marlborough Street, London, W. I.

Substitution of Pictures Banned by Board

THE right of substitution when a producing company fails to deliver a picture sold under a tentative title was denied by the Philadelphia Board of Arbitration in the case of Metro-Goldwyn vs. Morris Wachs. Wachs signed a contract for an unmade picture under the tentative title "Fast Life in New York," sold to him as a social drama of life in New York City.

The tentative title, it was understood, was created in the local office. A picture similar in type was not made by Metro-Goldwyn units and they substituted "White Desert" a play with a Western atmosphere. Wachs refused to take the picture and when the case came before the Board, it sustained him in his stand that failure to deliver the original picture contracted for released him from further obligation.

Burglars Get $6,000 From New York House

The Cosmos Theatre, a motion picture house, at 176 East 116 street, New York city, was visited by yeggs one day last week sometime between midnight and eight o'clock in the morning. They burned the combination of the safe with an acetylene torch and escaped with $6,000 in cash. In burning the safe they inadvertently set fire to the theatre necessitating the use of fire extinguishers to put out the fire.

When the burglary was discovered by a porter the floor of the manager's office was charred and flooded with water. Scattered about the floor was several hundred dollars in silver and a number of checks. These were partly melted and burned. Harry Greenberg is manager of the house.

Albany and Buffalo Zones Hold Meeting

The directors of the Albany and Buffalo zones held a joint meeting at the Hotel Syracuse in Syracuse, N. Y., last Wednesday, with William Dillon, of Ithaca, president of the New York State M. P. T. O., acting as chairman. The meeting lasted for four hours, but when it was over, the only statement that was forthcoming from those present was to the effect that plans were being discussed for the future, and that no definite results has been achieved.

Aside from President Dillon, those present at the meeting included Meyer Schine, of Gloversville; Rae Candee, of Utica; George Dwore, of Schenectady; Uly S. Hill, of Albany; Jules Michaels, of Buffalo; and Charles Heyman of Niagara Falls.

Non-Theatrical Pictures Will be Discussed

A meeting for the purpose of discussing the regulations governing the use of non-theatrical motion pictures was called for the Senate caucus room at Harrisburg, Pa., for Thursday of this week. The Industrial Board of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry sent invitations to five hundred persons interested in non-theatrical motion pictures, urging them to attend. The regulations to be discussed have to do with fire hazards and paraphernalia to be used in the projection of non-theatrical pictures.

United May Distribute "Only Way"

Negotiations Pending For Release of British Picture Which Has Precipitated Spirited Controversy

UNITED ARTISTS may release "The Only Way" in the United States, if negotiations now pending come to a satisfactory conclusion, it was learned this week. This would have a significance far beyond the mere addition of one release to the United Artists schedule, since this picture has been the storm centre of the most acute crisis to date in the Anglo-American film situation.

To review the history of the case briefly, the picture was produced by Graham Wilcox, the foreign department of First National contracting to release the picture in all parts of the world except the United States. First National then had an option, it is understood, on the American rights, but made it entirely clear that it did not pledge itself to the American distribution of the picture. The feeling in England, however, seemed to be that this would natura'ly follow.

First National, after viewing the picture during the recent visit to America of Graham Wilcox, did not exercise its option on the film. In the meantime, the picture had registered a tremendous success in England, where Sir John Martin Harvey, the star, had played in this same vehicle on the stage for fifteen years throughout the British Isles, establishing a valuable advertising point for the picture version.

Presumably unbiased observers have reported that the film, while not up to American standards of entertainment value and technique, might be made available by severe cutting and re-titling.

However, the American rejection by First National, coupled with the local success of the film in England, gave the British trade and lay press fresh ground for the contention that the American film industry was banded together to throttle British production.

As a consequence of the capital which has been made of the affa'r in this way the acquisition of this picture for release by United Artists would have an important "diplomatic" significance and might help to allay the feeling that the American industry is not willing to lend a hand to the British producers.

Quota System

Confirmation of the British quota plan recommended by the trade is contained in a cablegram received by the Department of Commerce from its Commercial Attache in London, as follows:

"Committee composed manufacturers renters and exhibitors films propose following scheme for adoption board trade to encourage production British films. Commencing first quarter 1927 all exhibitors compelled run minimum ten per cent British films progressively rising to twenty five during third quarter. 1929. British film defined as manufactured by British owned controlled producing company made as far as possible British studio and three quarters of cost excluding fees to director and one principal actor paid to persons domiciled Great Britain. But dates on which various percentages come into operation postponable if supply good British film insufficient and any British film considered not good enough to be ruled out for quota purposes and exhibitor proving unable pay price demanded British films may be released from regulation. News scenic educational etc. films outside quota. To bust block booking system recommend exhibition date for for-e'gn films not more than six months after booking date. Whole scheme to be controlled committee appointed board trade."

Canadian Angle

Moving picture men of Canada have had their ears to the ground attentively for some weeks past because of the probability of the adoption of the "Kontingent Plan" in Great Britain as protection and encouragement for the British film industry. This has been so because it is the general belief in the Dominion that the adoption of a restriction on foreign pictures by the British authorities would immediately have the effect of throwing U. S. production activities into Canada in order to secure preferred entry into England and to obtain the advantages of preferential tariff existing between Canada and various other portions of the British Empire and foreign countries with which Canada holds special trade treaties.

The possibility of extensive picture production in Canada in order to offset a restriction by England against foreign-made films throws an entirely new light on the present situation. But, according to Raymond Peck, director of the Canadian Government's Motion Picture Studio at Ottawa, Ontario, the U. S. A. producers would be welcomed with open arms into Canada. It would be the most natural thing for American companies to transfer manufacturing facilities to the Dominion in order to make pictures on Canadian soil in order to qualify for British-made requirements, he says, because of the splendid transportation facilities into all parts of Canada and because of the comparatively short distances from New York to Eastern Canada and from California to British Columbia, the Canadian Rockies or the National Parks in Western Canada.

Every facility and courtesy was extended to moving picture companies who invaded Canada in recent months for the making of pictures in order to encourage them and others to come back for more. This was particularly so when First National sent a unit to Northern Quebec to make "The Knockout" and when Warner Bros. arranged for the taking of scenes at Toronto for "Lady Windermere's Fan."

It has been pointed out that a considerable number of producers, directors and players have looked over the ground in Canada in recent months for possibilities and wide developments are expected if England puts on a Kontingent restriction. Among those who have visited Canada in the recent past are Adolph Zukor, S. R. Kent of Famous Players-Lasky, New York, Ernst Lubitsch, Lambert Hillyer, Joseph Schenck, Colvin Brown, vice-president of Film Booking Offices, New York, Irene Rich, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, who was born in Toronto, Norma Shearer, who is a Montreal girl, Harold Lloyd who traveled from Vancouver, B. C., to Toronto, Milton Sills, Priscilla Dean, and others. They have all spoken of a growing tendency to consider Canada as a place in which excellent pictures can be and are being made.

It is noteworthy that the Government of the Province of Ontario has also fallen into line by the decision to produce five-reel dramatic features at the Ontario Government studio at Trenton, Ontario, under the general supervision of Hon. W. H. Price, K. C., Provincial Treasurer. Announcement to this effect was made November 6 and a start has been made on the first production. These features are intended for the British Empire market, as well as Canada. The Canadian Government studio at Ottawa, Ontario, has been making one and two-reel educational, scenic and industrial releases for more than six years.

There is a wealth of virgin scenery in the Dominion and it includes all types of scenic grandeur—mountains, lakes, streams, forests, snow, rocks, mines, fishing and sports, rolling prairies, industrial, civic, rural, pastoral, wild game,—everything, even to continuous summer in British Columbia on the Pacific Coast.

Canada looms b'g as a moving picture country, particularly if restrictions go up in England and France and other countries against American pictures. Incidentally, Canada has a valuable trade treaty with France which encourages the interchange of natural products and manufactured goo's that would also come in handy for the moving picture interests if needed. Canadian authorities point to the manner in which the automobile industry has been built up in Canada because of the desire of manufacturers of the United States to build cars on Canadian soil in order to take advantage of preferential tariffs between Canada and other parts of the British Empire and with many other countries through treaty channels. In the case of the automobiles, at least 65 per cent of a car must be Canadian in order to enjoy British Empire preference. The result has been that Canada is now just about the second most important automobile producing country of the world.

British Pictures Banned

Another interesting angle to the Canadian situation, as regards censorship and British films, is brought out in an article in the Montreal Herald of October 24th, as follows:

Roach Signs Theda Bara For Comedies

AN important development in the production policy of the Hal Roach studios was apparent this week with the announcement from Los Angeles that the famous comedy producer has signed Theda Bara for a series of two-reel comedies. This follows the acquisition by Roach of a number of other dramatic players, including Eileen Percy, George Siegmann, Lucien Littlefield, Mildred Harris, Walter Long, Gertrude Astor, and Stuart Holmes.

This follows out Mr. Roach's plan of securing well-known names to be featured in his comedies, and is said not to mean the production of short features.

New Deals Strengthen Skouras Chain

Many New Houses are Added to Their Already Large Holdings in St. Louis Territory

SPYROS SKOURAS, President of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, upon his return to St. Louis from New York confirmed the recently published story of the deal with the new theatre department of Famous Players and Balaban and Katz whereby the Missouri Theatre becomes a first run house under the supervision of a new Skouras corporation to be formed.

This deal and others recently consummated by the St. Louis Amusement Company controlled by Harry Koplar and Skouras Brothers materially strengthens the already dominant position of the St. Louis Amusement Company in the St. Louis motion picture world.

The St. Louis Company has completed a deal whereby eight more of the leading neighborhood houses of St. Louis passes under control of the organization. The deal also includes the new Columbus Theatre now under construction at Columbia and Southwest avenues.

Two of the houses, the Webster and Montgomery formerly were operated independently as the individual property of Harry Koplar and Associates. The Montgomery, 2701 North Fifteenth street, seats 1424 persons and has an adjoining 1381-seat airdome. The Webster, 2119 North Twelfth street has 935-seats and also has a 1750-seat airdome.

The other houses taken over were operated by George Skouras, who has been made a vice-president and director of the St. Louis Amusement Company. Sol Koplar, brother of Harry Koplar, also is now an executive officer of the dominant neighborhood exhibition company and holds a place on its directorate.

The George Skouras houses that have passed under control of the St. Louis Amusement Company are: Powhattan, Manchester avenue, Maplewood, 1200 seats and a 15,000-seat airdome; Maplewood, Manchester avenue, Maplewood, 1200 seats; Aubert, 4949 Easton avenue, 1599 seats and 2200-seat airdome; Chippewa, 3807 South Broadway, 575 seats; Congress, 4021 Olive street, 1096 seats; King Bee, 1710 North Jefferson, 1291 seats, and 1299 seat airdome, also 2000-seat Columbus under construction on Southwest avenue.

It is doubtful whether any company in the larger cities of the country owns the same proportion of leading houses as does the St. Louis Amusement Company in St. Louis, Mo. This company completely dominates the local exhibition field.

A check of the St. Louis situation reveals the following line-up of houses:

	Seats
St. Louis Amusement Company:
20 theatres operating	30,140
3 theatres closed	3,954
2 theatres projected certain	4,500
15 airdomes	25,613
Total seating capacity	64,207
Skouras Brothers Enterprises:
5 theatres operating	7,922
1 theatre projected	4,000
1 airdome	3,500
Total seating capacity	15,422
William Goldman houses (have a booking arrangement with Skouras Brothers):
3 theatres operating	2,660
2 airdomes	2,171
Total seating capacity	4,831
Grand total of seats in houses with which St. Louis Amusement Company has a direct or indirect connection	84,460
Other houses in St. Louis and St. Louis county are:
76 theatres operating	62,959
4 theatres projected	7,400
12 theatres closed	5,498
32 airdomes	32,120
3 combination houses	7,983
Grand total seating capacity	115,960

With the deals now under negotiation and contemplated it is almost certain that before another year the St. Louis Amusement Company will hold theatres with a greater seating capacity than all other houses in St. Louis. The average seating capacity of its houses is far above that of other houses in the city. With few exceptions the company now owns all of the leading neighborhood or outlying houses in St. Louis.

United Artists May Distribute "Only Way"

"A movement in parts of the British Empire to force British made photoplay films upon the people may or may not be successful. It is especially evident in Australia and New Zealand. In Canada there has been propaganda in press and platform in the same direction. In the meantime not only the highly finished productions of the United States are holding their own in Great Britain, but Norway is making films of superior photography, while France is giving some novel inventions, and France was the country in which the modern motion picture originated. Germany and Italy have made some good productions which we have had in Montreal. The trouble is that those in the business in the United States are willing to spend fortunes and draw to them many of the best people in every phase of production. Few more cosmopolitan gatherings in the world will be found than in Hollywood. All who habitually attend motion picture exhibitions cannot but be impressed with the number of artists from Canada, Europe, including Great Britain and even Asia and Africa and the Pacific Islands to be seen in photoplays made in the United States.

"In Canada that which was worthy in British-made pictures has been welcomed as a rule, not because the films were made in the Motherland, but because they were worth while. Attempts to force upon us that which did not favorably compare with work of other countries have not been particularly successful. It has always seemed to me that dramatic performances, whether stage plays or the pantomimes of the screen, should be considered much as works of literature are. I have yet to see pictures made in the United States which depended for their success to appeal to local scenary theme, sentiment or propaganda that get very far in Canada. Of course some exhibitors, perhaps not entering into the Canadian spirit, do bring in pictures which have been made entirely for United States consumption. That is as a rule both their misfortune and their fault. At the same time it is unpleasant to find that worth while British pictures are suffering from a handicap in Canada with which their merit has nothing to do.

"I have just received from John A. Cooper, President of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada, a copy of a letter which he has sent to a paper published in the Providence of Quebec, which presents conditions and difficulties which will be surprising to most Canadian readers.

"Why the censors took the course complained of I cannot say. It is not customary for a court to explain their decisions and the power of the court known as the Board of Censors is practically unlimited. 'Chu Chin Chow,' as a stage spectacle had a tremendous success in Great Britain which was repeated on this side of the Atlantic. It has been presented in Montreal twice to weeks of crowded houses. It is simply a big scenic and dramatic presentation of one of the tales of the age-old 'Arabian Nights', a story which has been done into children's books and stories for adults, in cheap forms and in elaborate bindings and illustrations. It has been presented as literature in all languages. The pictorial presentation seems to have been an outstanding success in the Old Country and why we have been deprived of the opportunity of seeing it in the Province of Quebec I am unable even to conjecture. Prurient or improper motion pictures are not tolerated in Great Britain. As to the 'Reveille' I know nothing, but have understood that it was a play with a military theme in the Old Country. To put it mildly it is very unfortunate that when those endeavoring to produce something of an outstanding character in cinematic exhibitor have their work sent to Canada they should be debarred from exhibiting it in one of the largest Provinces in which is situated the chief city of the Dominion."—P. New Technical Marvels at "U" City

Costly Experiments Under Way to Make Possible Novel Effects in Filming of "Gulliver's Travels"

SHROUDED in a veil of secrecy, pending final results, important experiments are going forward at Universal City on new technical developments of considerable moment, to be used for the first time in America in the filming of "Gulliver's Travels." Many of the details cannot be revealed at the present moment, for several reasons, but enough can be told in a general way to indicate that these will make possible effects on the screen, such as have never been obtained.

The first of these is the Schuefftan process, described some time ago in the News in a series of European articles by a staff member. This method, through a system of reflectors, mirrors, sliding mirrors, and so on, makes possible all types of double exposure work, photographed at one operation.

The second, still entirely in the experimental stage, is a radio-controlled automaton which can be used instead of actors in especially hazardous or unusual scenes. This, it is said, would be extremely expensive, but will be given a practical tryout at Universal City with an eye to using it in scenes where actors could not, for various reasons, be employed.

The purchase of the Schuefftan process was announced by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, while he was in Europe. The radio-controlled figures were disclosed in an exclusive cablegram to MOTION PICTURE NEWS from its correspondent in Berlin. Hans Winter, representing the inventor of these, proceeded to Universal City with Mr. Laemmle's party, where tests will be made.

The Schuefftan process is well beyond the experimental stage, and has been used with a considerable degree of success in Germany. Its greatest advantage is that it makes possible the photographing of difficult double exposure shots with less troublesome effort, as well as others which would be utterly impossible under current methods.

Eugen Schuefftan, the inventor, who has disposed of the North American rights to Universal, will arrive in this country shortly to assist in putting the system into operation. Curiously enough, the man who has solved a problem that has baffled inventors and technicians for fifteen years is not a motion picture engineer, but an artist. The process has been used with great success in several German productions, and Carl Laemmle at once realized the possibilities for the filming of elaborate fantasies—"Gulliver's Travels" foremost among them.

One test shot which has already been made for "Gulliver's Travels" shows Gulliver bound fast to the earth, with the tiny Lilliputians swarming over him.

Under the older methods, it would have been necessary to have first photographed Gulliver, masking out the portion of the film where the Lilliputians were to appear. Then this film would have been rewound in the camera and again exposed on the actors playing the tiny people, this time at a much greater distance to make them appear smaller. On this second "take" the portion of film previously exposed on G lliver would be masked out. This, in itself, is not especially difficult, but the real trouble has been in the proper timing of action.

If, for instance, Gulliver were to move his hand toward one of the Lilliputians, to which the latter responded by throwing a pebble at him, the action of the two (photographed separately) would have to be timed by counting—and probably several retakes to get it just right.

Under the Schuefftan process, the entire scene would be photographed at one operation, and the timing would be merely a matter of a little rehearsal.

The possibilities of the method are literally endless, and it brings a whole "new bag of tricks" to the studio technicians. Patents are now pending in the United States, and have been granted in the leading European countries. After completing his work here, Schuefftan will probably go to Russia, where the government motion picture bureau has purchased the Russian rights to the process.

The full working details of the process will probably never be revealed, if this is possible, since Universal takes the stand, quite rightly, that the various revelations which have been made to the public of double-exposure, "glass shots," miniatures, and much other trick methods, have been highly disillusioning and have practically killed the value of such methods.

The Schuefftan process is so flexible, and makes possible so many screen effects heretofore impossible, that Universal does not intend to have it suffer a like fate.

Putting this process into actual operation at Universal City will probably prove a costly measure, but the executives are so enthusiastic about the possibilities of the system in regard to "Gulliver's Travels" that they feel that the increased cost will be more than repaid in the new and unique screen effects which will be unfolded through its use.

H. M. Richey Tenders Well Wishes to Seider

IN response to a telegram from Motion Picture News, requesting a statement on the appointment of Joseph M. Seider as business manager of the M. P. T. O. A., H. M. Richey, general manager of the Michigan M. P. T. O., sent the following wire:

"Any man placed in the position of Mr. Seider needs the well wishes of everyone, and he certainly has mine."

Universal Buys Theatre and Site for Another

UNIVERSAL has purchased the Capitol theatre, Dallas, Texas from Charninsky and Stinnett. This theatre, one of the most important of the independent houses in the southwestern territory has been bid for by various theatre chains throughout the country but, until its purchase by Universal, the owners were steadfast in maintaining it as an independent house.

A site for a theatre, to be erected at a cost of $250,000, has been secured by Universal, in Omaha. It is near the Yancy Hotel, Grand Island, and has a frontage of 66 feet. The house is expected to be opened in the fall of 1926.

"Proud Heart" Changed to "Common People"

E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of the Universal Pictures Corporation, announces that "Common People" is the final title of the Rudolph Schildkraut picture now playing at the Astor Theatre New York City under the title "Proud Heart." "Common People" is an Edward Sloman Production, and was adapted from the original story "His People" by Isadore Bernstein. It marks the first screen appearance of the elder Schildkraut in an American play.

Musicians Strike at Portland, Me. Settled

The musicians strike at the Strand and Empire picture theatres, Portland, Maine, has been settled and the musicians are back in the pit at the Empire. The Strand players will return November 9.

A slight increase in pay and changes in working conditions are understood to have been granted the musicians. Boston orchestras have been playing at these theatres during the several weeks of the strike.

Ray Schrock to Remain At "U" City

WORD has been received at the Universal Home Office that Raymond L. Schrock, general manager at Universal City, the big studio plant of the Universal Pictures Corporation, has renewed his contract with Universal for one year. His resignation, handed in several weeks ago, has been withdrawn.

He will have as his first assistant, Harry H. Zehner, who for the past several years has been the personal secretary and aide to Carl Laemmle, the Universal president. Zehner is one of the best liked men in the organization.

Production at Universal City now is reported to be humming, and many big Jewels are going into work for the coming season. Carl Laemmle, who arrived on the Coast two or three weeks ago, is supervising the early season activity and is conferring with Schrock on next year's program.

Progress Reported in Negotiations Between Seider and Hess on New Contract

SUBSTANTIAL progress has been made in the negotiations between Joseph M. Seider, business manager of the M. P. T. O. A. and Gabriel L. Hess, general attorney for the Hays organization, on revision of the uniform contract and the arbitration rules. Two conferences have been held during the past week by Seider and Hess, the result being the drafting of a memorandum by Mr. Hess for submission to Will H. Hays. Mr. Hess declined to make any statement in the matter.

Interviewed by Motion Picture News, Mr. Seider said that while negotiations were still in a preliminary stage, the results so far were very encouraging in the direction of a contract that would be a step forward over the document now used.

Asked just what changes would be made, Mr. Seider said:

"The Hess memorandum incorporates all the additions and changes to the new form of contract recently submitted to us by the Hays organization. Additions or the contract itself would be premature at this time."

Mr. Seider announced that an important meeting of the administrative committee would be held in New York next Tuesday with a full attendance of members.

He also announced that Tom Waller, formerly a special writer for Moving Picture World, had joined the Seider staff. Mr. Waller has had 11 years experience in metropolitan newspaper work and in film industry. He was drafted from Associated Exhibitors through the courtesy of Oscar Price, president of that company.

Miss Joyce is at present in Europe and will start on the new production immediately upon her return to the United States. To further his plans, Powers has departed for the West coast.

Stohldrier Injured When Taxi Hits Post

Harry Cohn Will Take Vacation in Europe

HARRY COHN, vice-president of Columbia Pictures, is back from the coast after having completed production on this year's entire Columbia program. So well satisfied is he with the way things have been progressing he plans to take his first vacation in five years. With Mrs. Cohn he will sail for Europe on the next trip of the Leviathan. If he finds conditions favorable there he may produce one picture in Europe before returning to the United States about January 1st.

Mamoulian Stage Director Of Eastman

Eric Clarke, general manager of the Eastman Theatre in Rochester, N. Y., has announced the appointment of Rouben Mamoulian as stage director of that institution. Mamoulian has been associated with the Eastman School of Music as dramatic director of its operatic department and with Vladimir Rosing he organized that department and for two years served as dramatic director and joint producer of the operatic productions presented in the Eastman Theatre and Kilbourn Hall.

He gained his first experience in the theatre in Russia where he was a producer and conducted his own dramatic studio. Later he went to London where he directed several stage productions at the St. James Theatre. Among his notable productions there was the "Beating on the Door," an elaborate spectacle presenting a cast of sixty players.

Mamoulian has been making a study of picture presentations since his association with the Eastman and as a result of his investigations and experiments advances the opinion that the picture theatre requires something more than straight dramatic or operatic performances or straight dances to form an artistic and entirely satisfactory entertainment in combination with a photoplay.

"The present day theatre," he says "is invaded over-measure by literature. The theatre is the art of expressive movement and music stands closer to this art than literature, or even the spoken word. It is our idea now to develop in the Eastman Theatre a new form of stage presentation along the line of rhythmic dramatic action to music, which will be a combination of drama, dance and music."

Commerce Dep't Reports Decrease

Negatives Have Fallen Off for Month of September, but Positives Show Over 2,000,000 Feet Increase

PRELIMINARY figures just released by the Department of Commerce show that while our exports of negatives for September, 1925, have fallen from about 645,000 linear feet in September, 1924, to 500,000 linear feet with a corresponding decrease in value of from $115,000 to $95,000, American exports of positives have increased from about 16,000,000 feet in September, 1924, to about 18,100,000 feet in September, 1925.

With respect to individual markets, the most noteworthy feature of these figures is the large drop in our exports of films to the United Kingdom, this drop being from about 3,700,000 linear feet in September of last year to only a little over 600,000 feet in September of this year. France, on the other hand, which took about 750,000 feet of film in September, 1924, from us boosted this total to over 2,000,000 feet in September, 1925. This places her in second position among individual markets, Canada being first with about 2,300,000 feet in September, 1925. Of our other markets, Argentina ranks third and Australia fourth.

For the first 9 months of the calendar year 1925 there has been a substantial increase in our exports both of negatives and positives over the same period last year. The figures for the first 9 months of 1925 being approximately 8,000,000 feet of negatives valued at $1,500,000 and 170,000,000 feet of positives valued at a little over $5,000,000, as against about 6,300,000 feet of negatives valued at $1,000,000 and 121,000,000 feet of positives valued at about $4,500,000 for the first 9 months of 1924.

In spite of the fact that exports of motion pictures to England dropped off during September, she still remains by far our largest market for these as reflected in the figures for the first 9 months of this year. Her total for this period of over 33,000,000 feet exceeds her total for the same period last year by about 15,000,000 feet.

Australia, with 17,000,000 feet for the first 9 months of 1925 as against about 14,000,000 feet for the same period in 1924 comes second. Canada is third with exports for these two periods of about 16,900,000 feet and about 14,000,000 feet respectively. France, finally, stands in fifth place as the only other foreign country which has taken over 10,000,000 feet of film, her total standing at just this amount as against as low as 5,000,000 feet for the first 9 months of last year.

Preliminary figures for September, 1925, just issued by the Department of Commerce show that 61,761 cameras were exported at a value of $214,507. This is more than double the quantity of cameras exported in September of last year, the figures for that month being 24,687 valued at $113,649. For the first nine months of this year 264,393 cameras valued at $977,067 have been exported as against 223,544 valued at $1,189,832 during the first nine months of last year.

Exports of parts of cameras, except lenses, reached a total of 39,555 pounds valued at $26,651 and 414,476 pounds valued at $309,821 for the first nine months of this year as against 15,019 pounds valued at $16,855 and 463,512 pounds valued at $366,615 for the same two periods last year.

Figures just compiled by the Department of Commerce show that for September, 1925, 169 motion picture machines valued at $31,274 were exported as against 122 machines valued at $27,956 for the same month last year. Exports of stereopticon magic lanterns and other projection apparatus for September, 1925, amounted to 15,884 pounds valued at $31,996 as against 7,308 pounds valued at $13,204 in September, 1924.

Kent Outlines Sales and Production Policies at Paramount Session

A 100 per cent representation of Paramount district and branch managers attended the annual fall convention, held at the Drake hotel in Chicago, November 6, 7 and 8, and heard Sidney R. Kent, general manager, outline the sales and production policies on the new season's attractions.

This spring and summer schedule, with the sales policy adopted, will be announced shortly.

George W. Weeks, general sales manager, presided at the sessions which were addressed by Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and other executives from the home office. On Sunday the assembled managers previewed a number of the productions which have been finished, among them being "The Wanderer," "Volcano," "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," "The Vanishing American," and "The Song and Dance Man."

Short Feature Ass'n Is Formed

Organization is Launched to Increase Prestige of Short Subjects

THE organization of an association of film men interested in increasing the prestige of the Short Feature was completed Wednesday, November 11 at a luncheon meeting in the Hofbrau, 1680 Broadway, New York City. The association is to be known as the Short Feature Advertisers Association and it has as its purpose "to increase interest in Short Features on the part of the public, exhibitors, trade papers, magazines and newspapers."

Plans were furthered for a nation-wide comedy exploitation month to be held in the near future. This will be a comprehensive drive to interest the public in Short Features and to acquaint picture fans with the importance of this part of their film-fare.

The meeting at the Hofbrau was presided over by P. A. Parsons, of Pathe, who is the leader protem of the organization. Gordon White of Educational is vice-chairman, and Julian Solomon of Davis Distributing Division is secretary.

A constitution for the organization was adopted and the following committee appointed to plan the nation-wide Short Feature exploitation campaign immediately. It is expected that this campaign will begin without delay, building up to a month of unprecedented interest in one and two-reel comedies on the part of exhibitors and the public. Cooperation will be obtained from civic organizations, societies, newspapers and magazines all over the country.

The campaign committee consists of P. A. Parsons, Gordon White, Julian Solomon, Nat Rothstein, of F. B. O., Dr. Shallenberger of Arrow, Paul Gulick of Universal and W. C. Hill of Fox. Jerome Beatty, who conducted the Greater Movie Season for the Hays organization, will consult with and advise the committee.

Goldburg Discusses State Righters

Declares Independent Market Has Already Collapsed, While Commending Motion Picture News Editorial

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON, Publisher of Motion Picture News, is commended for the candor of his editorials and this publication praised for its fairness in matters of interest to the picture industry, in a letter from Jesse J. Goldburg, President of Independent Pictures Corporation.

Commenting on an editorial of Mr. Johnston's in the issue of October 24th, under the title of "A Plain Matter of Business," Mr. Goldburg declares Motion Picture News is too conservative when it says there are "rumors" of a collapse of the independent market. The collapse is already an actuality, according to the Goldberg letter, which follows:

My dear Mr. Johnston:

Your editorial headed "A Plain Matter of Business," published in the October 24th issue of the Motion Picture News, has been under my eye ever since its receipt.

Of the many admirable qualities possessed by you, one stands out most forcefully, and that is "candor."

Neither you nor your publication deem it necessary to beguile the motion picture industry with optimistic statements in order to cull from the producer or distributor additional copy for advertising, in the hope they will swallow your optimism and spend more money.

The only error in your article is that you state "there are rumors of the collapse of the Independent or State Right market." "Rumors" doesn't fit the situation. Your article should have stated "it is a fact that the Independent or State Right market has collapsed." The reasons for it might be summarized as follows:

Lack of financial backing on the part of Independent Exchanges, to properly operate their business.

Jesse J. Goldburg, President of Independent Pictures Corporation.

Lack of ethical business methods on the part of Independent exchangemen.

The failure of Independent exchangemen to meet their obligations when due.

The failure of Independent exchangemen to properly exploit worthwhile productions.

The lack of cooperation on the part of Independent theatre owners to support Independent product.

The inability of Independent exchangemen to differentiate between good and bad product.

Over-production.

Lack of cooperation among Independent producers.

In the thirteen years I have been connected with the Independent Producers and Distributors of motion pictures, I have never met with a situation paralleling the present one.

The Independent Association may be functioning to some good advantage, as to that I do not know because my company resigned months ago, only because it seemed to us we had a lot of speech making and quite some publicity without any effective results.

The Independent theatre owner doesn't seem to recognize that he was kept in business only because of independent product, but instead of booking independent product, he used its existence in order to secure more favorable terms from the larger companies.

Independent Pictures Corporation has ceased production for the Independent or State Right market, at least for the present, and only because we wanted to avoid bankruptcy.

If the Independent or State Right producer would realize that he is the goat and stop fooling himself, and also stop the State Right exchangemen from fooling him, and cease production or distribution for six months or a year, perhaps the State Right exchangemen and theatre owners might be pinched a bit and return to the fold.

Yours Very Truly,

(Signed) JESSE J. GOLDBURG.

Elinor Fair to Play Lead in "Volga Boatman"

CECIL B. DE MILLE has selected Elinor Fair to play the leading feminine role in his second personally directed production for release through Producers Distributing Corporation, "The Volga Boatman." De Mille decided on Miss Fair after screening several pictures in which she appeared recently. "Ability, beauty and youth are the three qualities for which I selected Miss Fair," said De Mille. "She must portray a Russian aristocrat, patrician in ideas and appearance, yet possessed of a keen sympathy for the peasants she has been educated to ignore. She must mix with her portrayal of aristocratic reserve something of the fiery temperament of the East, and her emotional potentialities must be deep."

"Wanderer" Big Exploitation Picture

A BIBLICAL spectacle has been chosen by Paramount to head the list of box office attractions which will be released during the spring and summer season beginning on February 1.

"The Wanderer," a story of the prodigal son, is the picture.

Many who have viewed the picture during its four important showings, two for indefinite runs, have declared it to be "infinitely better done than 'The Ten Commandments,' a spectacle, and a tremendous one."

It ran for eight weeks at the Criterion theatre in New York city, the engagement being concluded while the picture was doing fine business to accommodate "The Vanishing American," another of the new season's specials. It played at $2 top with an overflow standing at many performances.

The first week at the Criterion, the box office took in $11,000, and the house seats only between 600 and 700.

The picture had its second opening at the Aldine theatre in Philadelphia, where it drew $1,100 the first matinee—a hot day—and $1,400 at night.

Newspapers have not hesitated to accord this picture high praise. The same is true of the magazines.

In Life, Robert E. Sherwood wrote that "'The Wanderer' is probably the most marvelously beautiful picture that the movies have produced. The players have outdone themselves, particularly William Collier, Jr., who gives a startling impression of the Prodigal."

"The Wanderer" offers unlimited exploitation possibilities. They might be enumerated as follows:

Obtain a list of "missing persons" from the police department and run in this ad:

Can You Help Find Any of These Chicago WANDERERS?
(Names)

at the (theatre name) and you'll never want to wander.

Tieup with the Salvation Army. Get the organization speakers to talk about The Wanderer at their meetings. Display placards. Invite wanderers to see the picture.

Tieup with newspapers: Who are the Great Wanderers of Today? Stories regarding the wanderings of our great explorers and discoverers.

For a ballyhoo, a man dressed as the Wanderer could parade the streets riding a donkey.

Tieups may be effected with churches, schools, Y. M. C. A. and kindred organizations. Sell blocks of tickets to these organizations. Ministers will talk about it in their pulpits.

The picture has had two showings at popular prices—the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., and in Lockport, N. Y.

The Charlotte News said of this picture: "Conceived on an epic scale and carried out with lavish attention to detail, as well as with rigid fidelity to historical background, 'The Wanderer' held a big audience in awed admiration Monday night at the Imperial theatre.

"The settings are magnificent and replete with all the details essential to create the atmosphere of the gorgeous East. It is more elaborate than 'The Ten Commandments' and attains a majesty of historical perspective that few pictures of the kind have attained."

Greta Nissen, in the opinion of the newspapers, established herself in this picture as one of the outstanding screen stars.

"Greta Nissen," said the New York Sun, "is unbelievedly seductive and lovely."

The New York Evening Post said: "Certainly Greta Nissen is the most amazingly lovely temptress a picture ever had. She is an entirely alluring vampire with whom it is conceivable that any man might fall in love."

The Herald-Tribune had this to say: "As Tisha, priestess of the pagan gods, who is also a versatile lady of the evening, Greta Nissen is ravishing in every sense of the word."

Raoul Walsh, who has received the plaudits of public and press alike for his direction of the opus, confesses that he joined Paramount because it owned the screen rights to this stage attraction. He said:

"I have a confession to make. I had an ulterior motive in coming with Paramount. I signed that contract because Paramount owned the screen rights to 'The Wanderer.' I saw that wonderful story on the stage. Ever since it has haunted me. Always I have had visions of the marvelous picture it could be, the greatest picture in the world."

This sentiment undoubtedly influenced Mr. Walsh in producing what the press and public call "a picture infinitely better done than 'The Ten Commandments.'"

Besides Nissen and Collier, the cast includes these noted players: Ernest Torrence, Kathlyn Williams, Wallace Beery, Tyrone Power, Kathlyn Hill and George Rigas.

Some of the highlights of the Paramount production, "The Wanderer," in which Ernest Torrence, Greta Nissen, William Collier, Jr. are featured players. It was directed by Raoul Walsh.

Scenario Staff Increased by Metropolitan

Metropolitan Pictures have signed Percy Heath and Monte Katterjohn as members of the scenario staff. Both are newspapermen of wide experience and have contributed a number of successes to the screen. Katterjohn wrote the story and scenario of "The Flame of the Yukon," and "The Sheik" was made into a screen play at his instigation. He wrote the scenario for Gloria Swanson's first starring vehicle and did several for Bebe Daniels.

"Danger Girl" Chosen For Priscilla Dean

Priscilla Dean's first starring vehicle for Metropolitan Pictures is to be released under the title of "The Danger Girl," instead of "The Bride." It is a picturization of the play of the latter name by Stewart Oliver and George Middleton. The scenario has been completed by Finis Fox and production will get under way next week under the direction of Edward Dillon.

Parade a Mile Long Among Features of Opening at Grauman's Egyptian

SID GRAUMAN was responsible for a sensational premiere showing when "The Big Parade," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture starring John Gilbert, opened at his Hollywood Egyptian Theatre. Among the many features was a parade a mile long containing six bands, innumerable floats, artillery, fire-fighting apparatus and many other features.

The entire opening ceremonies were broadcasted over KNX in a tieup with the Kellogg-Dixon chain of some twenty-two newspapers throughout Southern California. Five microphones were placed inside of the theatre and several outside. Word pictures of all going on were broadcast. Misses Kay and Marsh, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer fashion designers, described gowns worn by stars as they entered the theatre. Musical numbers were broadcast from the orchestra pit together with the ceremony of introducing stars by Fred Niblo.

The parade staged by the military and civic organizations of the city was headed by Major Chambers of Fort McArthur as Grand Marshal. The entire line of march was under a blaze of red fire torches at each street corner.

The picture was enthusiastically received by the capacity audience, which included motion picture stars, directors and the leading executives in the industry. Fred Niblo introduced King Vidor, the director, John Gilbert the star of the picture, Renee Adoree and Tom O'Brien who have prominent roles, and executives of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

PATHÉ presents

THE AMU POLAR

The authentic motion picture log of the Amundsen — Ellsworth Expedition, the first attempt to reach the North Pole by airplane.

Pathépicture

Into the terrors of the unknown!
For 24 days the mystery of mysteries!

The most daring deed in the history of exploration!

Only the boldest would have conceived the plan of flying to the North Pole; only the bravest could have survived the hunger, cold and terrors of the unknown Arctic when the airplanes had to descend only a few miles from the Pole.

For twenty-four days Amundsen's party was lost to the world; for more than that their flight and disappearance was a big first-page story.

Millions of persons will want to see the picture record of this most unusual adventure, which has received the most unparalleled publicity.

Your audiences are waiting for you!

One of the big advantages to the Liberty theatre, Niagara Falls, acruing from its tie-up with the American Legion post on Fox's "The Iron Horse" was the demonstration held in front of the theatre by the post's band. The theatre used flags and bunting to decorate the marquee and strings of pennants strung up the front of the house from the marquee to the roof.

M. G. M. Wages Novel Contest

Child Movie Star Competition with N. Y. American Winning Wide Popularity

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER, in conjunction with the New York American is conducting a Child Movie Star contest which is gaining some exceptional publicity both for the producing company and the newspaper. The idea was conceived, with all of its embellishments, by Howard Dietz and Pete Smith, publicity chiefs of the east and west coast offices of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The contest has been under way for a month and it is said that to date some forty thousand photographs have been submitted to the American of children between the ages of two and seven.

Each day up to December 1st the American prints an entry coupon and at least a column of editorial matter pertaining to the contest. In addition there are printed daily photographs of various entrants from Greater New York and suburbs within a radius of fifty miles. The American also runs full page and half page ads in its own pages and in the Evening Journal.

Further interest is added to the Contest by the Metro-Goldyn-Mayer Scout Train, which tours the city and the suburbs. The parks and playgrounds are visited daily in search of interesting youngsters and the New York American publishes her itinerary daily. As a consequence mothers and fathers flock to the locations with their children.

A cameraman mounted on the train films groups of children, then comes down among them to shoot close-ups. The films are shown in series form in all of the Loew theatres within the Contest limits and the New York American publishes a list of the theatres each day.

In the lobbies of all the Loew theatres are displayed photographs of various children entered in the Contest from the particular neighborhood in which the theatre happens to be.

Press Book Campaign Put On For Denny Feature

The practical working out of a press book campaign was demonstrated in Worthington, Minn., in connection with the engagement of "California Straight Ahead," which was exploited by the Grand Theatre there strictly according to a drive outlined in the Universal press book.

One of the stunts was the distribution of 400 "Gas Record Cards" by filling stations and garages. At the bottom of the card, below the spaces for dates, number of gallons of gas, etc., was the title of the picture and the name of the theatre and play date. On the reverse of the card was copy on the picture.

The lobby display, out of the Press Book, showed eleven automobile tires, each with a sign in the middle, suspended from the marquee and placed on the sidewalk in front of the house. A banner was mounted over the entrance and under the marquee with this copy on it: "The Day of Denny is Here" and two arrows below with "California Straight Ahead" on them. Cut-outs on the marquee and in the lobby completed the decorations.

Tie-up stills provided by Universal were placed in a radio store, auto accessory store, optometrist and garages.

The two weekly papers in Worthington played up the opening and advance dope on the picture and other Universal productions. The Globe used a cooperative page with the "California Straight Ahead" ad in the center.

Radio Street Stunt Used On "Lights Of Old Broadway"

The first theatre to make use of the radio and broadcast its stage entertainment to listeners in this section was Loew's Warfield. It was done to try the experiment in conjunction with "Lights of Old Broadway." It is a Fanchon & Marco idea and proved very popular. The station was mounted on a high-speed Packard chassis, so that it could be used anywhere. Marco brought the special entertainers from Los Angeles. Eight microphones from the Warfield stage were hooked up with a loud speaker placed on the Marquee of the theatre and the performance was thus broadcasted to the different radios.

An attractive lobby attractor for First National's "Her Sister from Paris" was used by Saenger's theatre in Shreveport, La., as shown above. The electrics framing the circle were worked on a flasher circuit, green, red, amber and pink bulbs being used alternately. The center-piece was a shadow stage which flashed a silhouette of a nude dancer.

Sells Balto Picture With Newspaper Displays

The management of the Web theatre, Niagara Falls, Ontario, singled out "Balto's Race To Nome" as the main item in a newspaper campaign for a recent program, which as usual included a feature picture. The advertising concentrated on the appeal to the natural love of humans for animals which serve them and are faithful to man.

Use was made of three columns by four and one-half inches of display copy to emphasize the extraordinary heroism of the renowned canine hero, "Balto." It was done in a way that would appeal to every true lover of dogs and make him or her want to witness the film itself, so stirring was the word message put across on this wonder-dog of the northlands.

Incidentally, the space used to advertise this short feature was more than four times that devoted to the longer film on the program—a policy which many showmen follow today, when the short reel has superior patronage building value.

Puts "Excuse Me" Sign On Parked Automobiles

Tags reading "Back Up!" on one side and "Excuse Me" on the other were attached to parked automobiles in Altoona, Pa., and created comment on the showing of "Excuse Me" at the Capitol Theatre. Several thousand throw-away dodgers also proved effective in exploiting the run. Window displays featuring clothes, leather goods, travelling bags and drugs were obtained and numerous tie-ups were made with barber shops and shoe and hat cleaning establishments.

A tie-up with the leading department store, resulted in window displays and full page ads in both daily papers. Special stories and cuts got space in the foremost local daily, and half-sheet posters were placed on all public waste paper receptacles by special permission of the municipal authorities. One hundred window cards were placed on exhibition in the downtown section

Display for Universal's "California Straight Ahead" built in a one-sheet frame and used by the Howard theatre, Chicago. It was designed by Manager Charles Hicks. A composboard box was built behind the frame. This was lined with black sateen, to which the cut-outs were fastened.

Brooms and broom straw furnished the display Acting Manager A. M. Avery used in his lobby at the Capital theatre, Oklahoma City, for the presentation there of Paramount's "New Brooms." The title was spelled out on a banner with letters formed of straw."

Screens 'Thank You' in Church

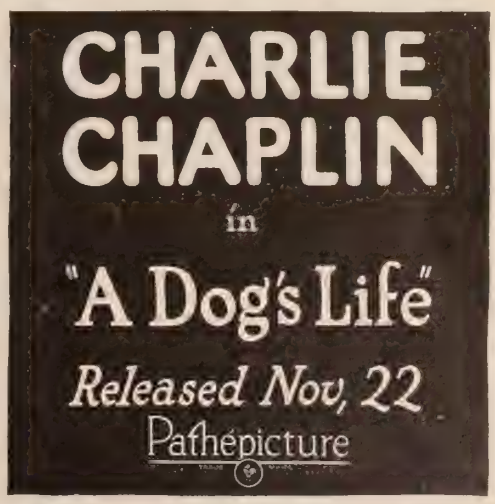
Chicago Minister Presents Fox Film to Invited Clergymen and Club Women

THE hearty endorsement and active co-operation of Chicago ministers proved the outstanding feature of a unique campaign for "Thank You" in that city. The support of the clergy was gained as a result of a special screening before an invited audience composed of ministers, one of whom, the Rev. John Charles Knox asked the Fox officials for permission to show the picture in his church to those Chicago clergymen who were unable to be present at the first showing.

At this second showing there was among those in attendance, the Rev. H. V. Norton. So completely did "Thank You" win the Rev. Norton's approval, that in the following Sunday's issue of the Chicago Tribune, there appeared an article written over the Rev. Norton's signature, especially commending the production.

The Rev. Knox on the Friday night preceding the picture's premiere at the Monroe Theatre, broadcast a speech from the Chicago American's Radio station, in which he advised his listeners—regardless of their religious affiliations to give the production their support.

The support of the Checker Taxicab Co. of Chicago was also enlisted in the campaign, with the result that throughout the engagement 1,000 taxicabs carried "Thank You" advertising stickers. The mail trucks operating from the Chicago Post Office also bore these stickers, while the Boston Store attached twenty thousand to outgoing bundles.



Other tie-ups effected were the United Cigar Stores—which number 145 in Chicago, and the Walgreen chain of drug stores—which operates 72 Chicago stores, which displayed signs which read "Every week is Thank You week here, as our employees always say Thank You. See 'Thank You' at the Monroe Theatre."

By way of rounding out the "Thank You" campaign, a statement was secured from Mayor Dever, endorsing "Thank You" week. This statement appeared in the newspapers.

Ties Up "Havoc" With War On Jay Walking

About the time that "Havoc" was to play at the Youngstown Hippodrome, Youngstown, O., the management of the theatre decided that the city was about ready for a drive to correct some of the evils of "Jay Walking" and accordingly approached the police officials to institute a week's drive to promote more careful observations of the city traffic regulations.

The theatre worked into the drive by having its name on banners which urged the people to follow the safety first formula, the signs reading "Havoc. Do Not Jay Walk. It Creates Deathly Havoc." The Mayor issued a Havoc Week proclamation and the signs were stencilled on sidewalks at danger points by the police department.

Three Century Units Are Busy

New Buster Brown, Wanda Wiley and Edna Marian Comedies in Production

COINCIDENT with the arrival on the coast of Julius Stern, president of Century Film Corporation, three comedy units started work on Spring releases of the Century Comedy schedule.

The Buster Brown company, making a series of two-reelers, was the first to go into production. Gus Meins, noted gag man and director was engaged by Stern to work on these comedies. The company is now working on the seventh picture.

Edna Marian who was loaned to Universal during the Summer for an important role in "The Still Alarm," a forthcoming Jewel picture, got back to work in two-reel comedies. She is scheduled to complete twelve releases for the 1925-26 schedule, some of which, however, have been finished. The first of these, "The Big City," under the direction of Francis Corby is scheduled for release in February. "Say It With Love," the second, will probably be a March release.

The Wanda Wiley unit has also started work for the season on a series of twelve two-reelers, the first of which, "Playing the Swell," has been completed. Earl McCarthy plays opposite to Miss Wiley, and Virginia Bushman, daughter of Francis X. Bushman, has a prominent role.

Miss Wiley's second picture, now going into production, will be directed by Jess Robbins, who made many of her early 1925 successes. Robbins will be assisted by Leslie Goodwin, while Victor Sherrick will be camera man.

Lige Conley Starts New Mermaid Comedy

Lige Conley has started another Educational-Mermaid comedy under the direction of Stephen Roberts, the latter's second directorial effort for the company. Estelle Bradley has the leading feminine role.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

9 and 3/5 Seconds

(A. G. Steen, Inc.)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

CONSTRUCTED to exploit Charles Paddock, world's champion sprinter, this stunt drama registers the new star as a very pleasing personality and actor of considerable merit for a novice. They didn't show dazzlingly acute judgment in the choice of a vehicle, however, for the story is decidedly thin, nor has the director succeeded in showing off Paddock's athletic ability to the best advantage. As it stands, the picture isn't strong enough to stand the test of an all-the-week run, but will answer very well as an attraction for houses where bill is frequently changed. The hero's race against a horse and his victory in the Olympic Games are the big punches. The first episode doesn't convey the thrill it ought to, because of poor staging, but the second gets over in cracking style. Charles Paddock plays his part with creditable vim and is never camera-conscious, George Fawcett plays the stern papa to perfection and the work of the cast as a whole is excellent.

THEME. Stunt drama, featuring world's champion sprinter, Charles Paddock, with love interest as side issue.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Hero's hobo adventures. His meeting with heroine, race against horse and scene in which he breaks sprinting record.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Make a strong play for the sporting contingent by boosting star's performances on running track. Stress the romantic angle.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for theatres operated on daily change schedule. Story interest too slight for critical audiences.

SUMMARY. A stunt drama in which Charles Paddock, champion sprinter, shows surprising dramatic ability. Narrative rather weak, acting fine all-around.

The Ancient Highway

(Paramount—6034 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ANOTHER James Oliver Curwood story of the open air adventure variety which runs true to that author's usual plot formation of brisk action and sensational melodramatic incident. This time it's a logging camp locale, with hero Jack Holt risking his life with careless ease to keep the villain from interfering with the business plans of the girl in the case, and beating up the scheming gent in a lively scrap. Old material, most of it, but put over with plenty of ginger. Not the sort of picture likely to make a hit with high-class audiences, but ranking as a fair enough program attraction. There are a good many spectacular episodes, among which that of Holt setting a dynamite charge to free a log jam, and rescuing his assistant just before the blast goes off, registers as the banner thrill. The scenic shots of the Canadian country, wood and water, are very attractive.

THEME. Western melodrama, logging camp locale, hero defeating plans of villain to ruin financially girl who owns lumber land tract.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Jack Holt, Billie Dove, Montagu Love. You can safely promise patrons lots of excitement, and stress story's romantic side.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fast action and scenic charm. Holt's fistic battle with villain.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. as program attraction. Should please fans who like action plus, and aren't particular about actual story values.

SUMMARY. An average melo with Canadian logging camp backgrounds, crashes over several spectacular punches, plot ordinary, action fast, offers many beautiful open-air views, ought to score in program field.

The Road to Yesterday

(Producers Distributing Corp.—9980 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A UNIQUE and highly interesting picture which gives every indication of proving a big box office success. The plot pivots on the theory of reincarnation, starting out amid modern settings. Suddenly, after one of the most vividly sensational train wrecks ever filmed, the various characters, while in a state of coma, revisit the scenes of their former lives in seventeenth century England. These medieval sequences, which include the burning of a gypsy witch at the stake, a passionate love affair and flashing of swords in a desperate duel, are intensely dramatic and marvelously well handled by director Cecil B. De Mille. Then comes the swift change from the splendor and tragedy of ancient days back to the present age, with relief, peace and happiness enveloping the temporary wanderers in the land of dreams. A notable production, beautifully photographed, and one in which principals and members of the supporting cast work with uniform smoothness and great appeal.

THEME. Drama in which modern characters are transported back to scenes of former lives in ancient England, awake from unconsciousness and find happiness awaiting them among surroundings of to-day.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Superb direction, and acting, colorful atmosphere, thrilling medieval scenes, sensational train wreck and double romance interest.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Stress story's novel plot, its wonderful sequences of early times, the great train wreck, and feature the principals.

DRAWING POWER. A fine first-run feature for the big houses, with tremendous heart interest appeal and thrills which should win in smaller theatres also.

SUMMARY. A Cecil B. DeMille screen triumph. Has general audience pull, offers telling contrasts between seventeenth and twentieth centuries, flush with exciting situations, ablaze with gorgeous settings, thrills and romance.

"THE ROAD TO YESTERDAY" a Cecil DeMille super-picture, which comes to the ———— theatre on ————, is hailed by critics in general as one of the most unique and interesting films of the season. The story details the love troubles of two couples. They are aboard a train which is wrecked. While unconscious the various characters are transported back to the scenes of their former lives in ancient England. Awakening, they find happiness and peace in the prosaic present age. The railroad accident is a fascinatingly vivid bit of camera work, and the episodes showing life in medieval times are masterpieces of color.

Heads Up

(F. B. O.—5482 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ANOTHER South American revolutionary picture, with a resourceful Yankee hero cleaning things up in the Republic, rescuing an imprisoned President and winning his handsome daughter. An old formula, but they've mixed up comedy, burlesque and heroics plentifully and kept the action going at top speed, with the result that good entertainment of the program variety is attained. It's just the right sort of vehicle for the athletic Lefty Flynn, who with Harry McCoy and Raymond Turner as his comic aids, displays his muscular frame and good looks to great advantage, works at high pressure all the way and gets full value out of the thrill shots. Played as straight melodrama the film would be merely absurd. But the good comedy relief balances matters nicely and by preventing the spectator from taking the yarn too seriously, wards off hostile criticism. Lefty is well supported, Kathleen Myers an attractive Spanish heroine and the support as a whole is excellent.

THEME. Comedy-drama. Action takes place in South American Republic, American hero foiling rebel plot against Government and marrying President's daughter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Colorful atmosphere, rapid action and thrills. Scene where Lefty and pals break jail. The comedy situations and romantic appeal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Lefty Flynn. Tell patrons this is one of his most exciting pictures and in many respects the most humorous.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for both neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Offers familiar plot of young Yankee mixing up in South American revolutionary troubles, but holds interest all the way, due to clever intermingling of comedy with romance and thrill punches. A good program feature.

THE CAST

Cobra

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

WHILE this one may please the great army of feminine admirers of Valentino its reception by intelligent audiences is doubtful. Here is a commonplace story transplanted to the screen in a lifeless manner. The plot lacks suspense, while the star has little to do but pose for a decidedly tiresome number of close-ups displaying "what a well dressed young man" should wear. The picture is weighted down by an overabundance of subtitles and the photography is below par.

While "Cobra" may have been a stage success, it is not especially good material for the screen. Summed up it is just another society drama with the everpresent vamp, the nice, sweet young thing, the hero who is a wrecker of women's hearts and the upright youth. Valentino and Nita Naldi are seen in some passionate love scenes. The settings at times are quite elaborate.

THEME. Modern society drama in which an Italian nobleman finds himself helpless in the power of a feminine cobra and who sacrifices a true love to make his best friend happy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fight in the New York Night club. The love scenes between Valentino and Miss Naldi. The settings. The climax in which Torriani gives up the girl he really loves to make his friend happy.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Valentino. It is best bet here. Use stills of Nita Naldi in fashion show tieups. Play up the love scenes

DRAWING POWER. Fame of star may make this suitable for the best houses, but don't promise your audiences too much.

SUMMARY. Just a fair picture with nothing new in plot construction and lacking suspense. Elaborately mounted. Lacks punch.

THE CAST

Count Torriani	Rudolph Valentino
Elsie Van Zile	Nita Naldi
Jack Dorning	Casson Ferguson
Mary Drake	Gertrude Olmstead
Victor M nardi	Hector V. Sarno
Rosa Minardi	Claire de Lorez

Lord Jim

(Vic. Fleming Prod.—Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed

LOVERS of adventure yarns will find this picturization of Joseph Conrad's exciting novel thoroughly enjoyable Victor Fleming has made a faithful film version even to the unhappy ending in which the hero finds the everlasting peace for which he long has been seeking. The ending, by the way, is perhaps the only fault that film fans will find with the picture.

"Lord Jim," is an action picture. It starts off with a punch and delivers several fine wallops as the plot progresses. There is a great sequence in the opening reel in which a large ship hits a derelict during a squall and the cowardly officers, thinking only of their own skins, desert the natives laden boat, forcing Jim to do likewise. There are some fine scenes in the jungle as the pirate crew is cornered in the trading post by the savages.

THEME. A romantic drama of the East Indian seas and the jungle country in which a sailor, ruled an outcast by a high seas' court, becomes a power among the savages of the natives, finding real love and at last peace eternal.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The character portrait painted by Percy Marmont. The fine cast. The crash at sea and the desertion of the ship loaded with natives during the storm. The battles in the jungle.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with book stores on Joseph Conrad novel. Play up names of stars. Put on a South Sea dance as a prologue.

DRAWING POWER. Should please all lovers of action drama and popularity of stars should make it a box office winner. O. K. for the best houses.

SUMMARY. A thoroughly enjoyable picture, in spite of its unhappy ending, which is admirably acted, faultlessly directed and exquisitely mounted. A credit to any screen.

Three in Exile

(Truart—4471 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

RELYING chiefly on its appeal to animal lovers and produced at little cost, this picture, while not strong enough to meet the demands of critical audiences, registers as satisfactory entertainment for the smaller houses, and juvenile patrons in particular are sure to be pleased with the adventures of Black Beauty, the equine star, and his canine comrade, Rex. The plot, which hinges on the attempt of an unscrupulous gent to get possession of a mining claim worked by the heroine, following the lines of the usual Western formula, so far as thrills are concerned, but the sentimental angles are stressed to a greater degree than is common with this class of films. The desert experiences of the hero and his two four-footed companions in their search for much needed water make up the most interesting part of the feature. Art Acord and Louise Lorraine fill the human hero and heroine roles acceptably, and the intelligent work of the hoof-and-paw actors is a pleasure to witness.

THEME. Western melodrama. Hero, horse and dog, lost in desert, go through many adventures together and aid girl in maintaining right to mining claim.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Meeting of Flanders, Rex and Black Beauty in the desert. Scene where Rex, the dog, puts out fuse and stops mine explosion. Defeat of heroine's enemies and happy conclusion. Good animal stunts.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the animal stuff, boost as Western thriller, and go after juvenile trade strong.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for small houses, or might get by in neighborhood theatres if supported by bill of lively short subjects.

SUMMARY. Western melodrama with talented dog and horse executing remarkable stunts. Familiar plot, but moves briskly. Hasn't enough depth for critical patrons, but appeals to animal lovers and will please the kiddies.

THE CAST

Art Flanders has a fight with a foreman of a railway construction gang, and thinking he has killed him flees into the desert. He meets Rex, and the two pursue a quest for water. They are joined by Black Beauty, a spirited horse that, resenting his treatment by rough-riders in a ranch corral, has broken away. Reaching a stream the trio encounter Louise Lorraine, who takes them to her cabin. She is owner of a mining claim which certain conspirators are attempting to deprive her of. No Man's Law

(F. B. O.—4042 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THEY managed to get a little of everything into this lurid border tale, romance, melodramatic punches, comedy, horsemanship stunts and a bit of sentimental flavoring, with cyclonic action all the way through. Result—a vigorous Westerner which ought to get the majority fan vote. The humorous situations are developed to a greater extent than is usual with this type of picture, a fact adding greatly to its entertaining values. Bob Custer plays the leading role with commendable dash and spirit, and many of his admirers will probably pronounce this his best screen vehicle up-to-date. He is well supported, with Adalyn Mayer a satisfactory heroine; Ralph McCullough giving an excellent performance as her weakling brother and Bruce Gordon as a convincingly desperate villain. The scenic effects are extremely attractive, picturesque backgrounds abound, and some remarkably fine long shots add to the feature's artistic charm. There is no superflous footage, the film registering within the safe five reel limit.

THEME. Western melodrama, with comedy effects, hero rescuing girl and weakling brother from gambling crooks and winning her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Gambling resort scenes. Fake bandit raid. Hero's rescue of heroine from fall over cliff. The fast action, comedy, thrills, atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as a crackerjack Westerner, as funny as it is exciting. Feature Bob Custer, tell patrons this is one of his best thrillers.

DRAWING POWER. Wherever they want live action pictures, with the romantic melodramatic and humorous elements in full swing, this picture ought to win.

SUMMARY. As Western melos go, this one should more than hold its own at the box office. Bob Custer is given plenty to do in the line of daring exploits, there's a pleasing romance and the comedy stuff goes over big.

The Arizona Sweepstakes

(Universal—5418 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

HOOT GIBSON scores again in this rollicking Westerner which fairly crackles with snappy action and mixes up thrills and comedy in equal measure. There's ten times the variety to the plot than is usually found in the regulation cowpuncher pictures, the story opening in the East, with Coot Cadigan of Arizona getting tangled up in a Chinatown gang-fight, which is being staged for the benefit of sight-seers, and later mistaking a genuine scrap for a fake affair. Later the action switches to the West, and here Hoot dodges detectives and rides a winning horse-race in real Gotham style. The yarn is chockful of amusing complications, nor is the necessary romantic touch neglected, for, of course, Hoot not only stops the foreclosing of a mortgage on the ranch of the heroine's father by dint of his race victory, but gets the girl into the bargain. The star's admirers will surely wax enthusiastic over their favorite's showing, and the film lists O. K., wherever Westerners are popular.

THEME. Western comedy drama. Hoot Gibson as cowboy who visits East, gets into amusing scrapes, returns West, wins Arizona Sweepstakes race and girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Hero's escapades in Chinatown. His flight back West. The brisk comedy and thrills. Big punch scene where Hoot wins race.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Hoot Gibson. Play up cowboy's adventures in big city. Tell patrons this is a wonder for laughs and thrills. Boost horse race.

DRAWING POWER. Will surely please the Hoot Gibson fans, and ought to get the money wherever Westerns are in demand.

SUMMARY. Lots of action, fun and adventure. A speedy comedy-drama, with first part of action taking place in large city. Gibson at his best. An excellent attraction of its kind.

THE CAST

HOOT GIBSON comes to the fore again in one of his most amusing and thrilling pictures, a comedy drama entitled—"The Arizona Sweeptakes," scheduled to be shown on the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. The film opens in a big city, where cowpuncher Caddigan is visiting. He becomes involved in a series of Chinatown escapades, is accused of murder, escapes to Arizona and finds Colonel Savery has bet his all on the result of a race in which Caddigan is to ride for him. Hoot Gibson makes a great hit in this feature, assisted by a sterling cast, with Helen Lynch as the heroine.

CATCH LINES

A riot of fun and thrilling adventure. A pleasing love story in which Hoot Gibson outdoes all his former exploits as a skilled horseman? A great Western, with a bit of the East sandwiched in.

Counsel for the Defense

(Associated Exhibitors—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

BURTON KING has succeeded in transferring Leroy Scott's widely read novel to the screen in a thoroughly pleasing and entertaining manner. In this he has been aided by a cast of players who make their characters "live," and who are convincing at all times.

House Peters is an ideal selection for the fighting editor, Betty Compson is seen at her best as the girl lawyer, while Jay Hunt who is winning laurels in "Lightnin'," is excellent as the lovable old Dr. West. The heavy roles are well taken care of by Rockliffe Fellowes and William Conklin. Outstanding features include the arrest of Dr. West on a framed charge, the trial in which the doctor's daughter acts as his counsel but fails to save him from jail, the discovery of the conspirators by the girl and the wrecking of her car in the storm, the arrival of the typhoid epidemic and the work of Dr. West in saving the townfolk including the mother of the man who sent the doctor to jail. There is also a good climax which will please the fans.

THEME. A dramatic romance in which a modern Portia rounds up a gang of crooks and clears the name of her father.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting of every member of the cast. The arrest of Dr. West. The trial scene. The discovery of the plotters and the injury of the girl in the auto wreck during the storm.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost the name of House Peters and Betty Compson and play up Jay Hunt who has been well advertised in "Lightnin'." Book displays of the Scott novel.

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of stars should draw business on this well known story.

SUMMARY. A well acted version of a widely read book which has a number of well placed punches and a wow of a climax. Will please the majority of the fans.

PRESS NOTICE

HOUSE PETERS and Betty Compson are co-starred in "Counsel for the Defense" a thrilling adaptation of Leroy Scott's famous novel, which comes to the ———— theatre, commencing ————. Prominent in the cast of well known players is Jay Hunt, who will be remembered for his excellent work in "Lightnin'," and Rockliffe Fellowes is seen to advantage in a strong role. The picture is filled with big scenes, dramatic situations, pathos, comedy and moments that strum on the heart strings.

CATCH LINES

A modern Portia fighting against seemingly insurmountable odds to clear her father's name. Big interests remove the one obstacle to their ambitions but fail to reckon on the woman in the case.

The Pride of the Force

(Rayart Pictures—5139 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE sentimental angle predominates in this melodrama with an Irish cop for hero, so much so indeed that its physical thrills count for little compared with the tearful and sympathetic lure. City fans aren't likely to be impressed by the story or the leading blue coat character, both being obviously "off color" so far as genuine realism is concerned. In the smaller towns it may get by by virtue of its heart appeal, which is of the strictly hokum brand but likely to awaken tender yearnings in the breasts of spectators of the not too hard boiled variety. The queerest thing about the picture is that Tom Santschi, the screen's renowned rough-and-tumble scrapper, plays the big cop role without engaging in a single fistic battle. This is a novelty—but we rather fancy the average movie patron will resent Tom's lack of walloping activity. However, the muscular Mr. Santschi shapes up as a lovable sort of chap, and shows that he is not altogether a peace-complex victim by shooting the villain full of lead toward the finish.

THEME. Melodrama with police hero who wins promotion after being unjustly set back.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Sentimental appeal, heart interest and scene where hero pursues and shoots villain.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title has pulling power. Get in touch with local police organizations. Stress story's human sympathy side and occasional thrills.

DRAWING POWER. Outside of the large cities where audiences are a bit too sophisticated to find picture convincing, it possesses box office value.

SUMMARY. A heart interest melo, thrills subordinated to excess sympathetic pressure. Tom Santschi shown as a soft-natured cop. Fans will miss his usual scrapping exploits.

Old Clothes

(Metro-Goldwyn—5915 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

JUDGING from the hearty applause and laughter which greeted Jackie Coogan's latest picture during its initial showing at the Capitol Theatre, New York, that talented juvenile has lost none of his far-flung popularity and "Old Clothes" seems to possess all the elements of a box office winner. It is a more precocious and mature Jackie that greets one in this picture, less of the kid and an advance into grown-up boyhood, but the role is well suited to the little star's present age and his acting as full of natural appeal as ever. The story has sympathetic as well as humorous values, also plenty of hokum of the kind that pleases the average fan, and taken all-in-all it lists a bully good entertainment. The film is well directed and they were careful to select an excellent supporting cast, Max Davidson contributing an amusing character sketch as the lad's business partner, and Joan Crawford scoring as Mary Riley, the girl whose love affair is manipulated into a happy conclusion by versatile Jackie in the part of Timothy Kelly.

THEME. Comedy drama. Tim Kelly, little Irish lad, and Max Ginsberg, elderly Hebrew, lose go into the junk business and finally win out.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Jackie's natural and amusing pantomime. Uniformly good acting. Scenes in the junk shop. Development of Mary's romance. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play this up strong as a typical and successful Coogan film. Boost sympathetic interest as well as bright comedy. Feature principals.

DRAWING POWER. Has universal audience appeal. A sure-fire box office attraction for big and little houses.

SUMMARY. Jackie Coogan makes good in this one. Picture possesses unfailing human interest lure, comedy is excellent. Should pull 'em in anywhere.

Rose of the World

(Warner Bros.—7506 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS film version of Kathleen Norris's popular novel fails signally to score as first-class screen entertainment. The best that can be said for it is that it may get by as an ordinary program attraction. None of the characters evoke the slightest degree of sympathy. The hero is a weakling, the woman whom he jilts the heroine for and weds, an uninteresting, neurotic creature. And the heroine, who marries a sulking, animal-like suitor in a fit of pique, is so sugary sweet and annoyingly patient under the indignities she suffers, that she arouses feelings of irritation rather than pity in the breasts of the on-lookers. The story is starkly artificial throughout, an atmosphere maintained up to the climax, when the neurotic wife and sulky chap are killed off so as to bring the gutless hero and his former sweetheart together and thereby provide a conventional happy finish. The work of the principals is forced and ultra-theatrical, for which impossible roles are largely to blame.

THEME. Heart drama. Wealthy youth jilts sweetheart, weds another, girl marries unworthy chap in revenge. Both marriages unhappy, but lovers are finally united.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where Rose denounces recreant lover. Discovery of missing contract. Emotional sequences. Reunion of lovers at old trysting spot.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Better go light on praising story. Several names in cast worth featuring. Bill as record of emotional heart conflicts.

DRAWING POWER. Has scant appeal for critical audiences. May pass as average program offering for neighborhood and smaller huses.

SUMMARY. Presents unconvincing story with characters hard to "warm up" to. General trend of narrative decidedly artificial. A dubious heart interest yarn.

THE CAST

Jack Talbot	Allan Forrest

Wandering Footsteps

(Banner Productions, Inc.—5060 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD "buy" for the state rights market. It is a well produced picture, with an original plot, strong in sympathetic values, moves briskly and has decided audience appeal. There are some real human touches skillfully developed and a strain of comedy relief that brightens up the action wonderfully. Also, there's an ironical hit or two at the type of woman who poses as a philanthropist and gains a sort of reputation as a Lady Bountiful by condescending to visit the poor, without ever probing and relieving the actual miseries of life among the human understrata. Thus director Phil Rosen manages to point a moral, and does so very effectually without in the least interfering with the entertaining qualities of the film. He is fortunate in his selection of a cast. Bryant Washburn makes a favorable impression as the scapegrace young millionaire, Estelle Taylor fills the heroine role acceptably, and Alec B. Francis scores in a fine character sketch of old Timothy Payne.

THEME. Heart interest drama. Deals with fortunes and love affair of young, convivial millionaire and old derelict, both men being regenerated at end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Sentimental and comedy appeal. Meeting of hero and old chap he adopts as father. Scenes where heroine tries to part them. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Bryant Washburn and Estelle Taylor. Bill as tense heart drama, with good comedy relief. Stress wealth and poverty contrasts.

DRAWING POWER. A good card for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Shows up the better and inferior sides of human nature. Has big general audience appeal and cast with box office pull. An appealing heart-interest film.

THE CAST

Hal Whitney	Bryant Washburn

The Scarlet Saint

(First National—6880 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A SOCIETY drama, superbly photographed, richly mounted against picturesque backgrounds, this film offers pleasing entertainment and should roll up a good box office score for any house. Especially attractive are the scenes showing the New Orleans Mardi Gras in full swing. These are the real thing, having been taken during the carnival last winter, as well as the grand Alexis ball, and add greatly to the feature's artistic appeal. The plot, dealing with the love affairs of a young American girl, who weds an Austrian nobleman in order to save the man she really cares for from jail, is unconvincing in spots, but swift action, skilled direction and capable acting are dominant factors in holding its interest, the heroine wins lots of sympathy and a surprise climax caps the romance nicely. Mary Astor, as the perplexed but loyal Fidele, is charming and very effective in the many emotional situations which fall to her share, Lloyd Hughes a gallant lover, and Frank Morgan gives a fine performance as the not too scrupulous Baron Badeau.

THEME. Society drama, New Orleans locale. American girl weds foreign noble to save real lover from prison, gets her freedom at the finish and man she wants.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Atmospheric effects, Mardi Gras Carnival, the ball. Duel, and scenes where Fidele threatens to take poison. The unique finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost the New Orleans carnival scenes, the racetrack event, story's thrills, suspense, romance. Feature Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes.

DRAWING POWER. A likely box office attraction for any theatre.

SUMMARY. Has audience appeal, account of colorful surroundings, romantic trend and thrill sequences. Puts Mardi Gras glow and glitter stuff across well.

The Eagle

(United Artists—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

VALENTINO'S first picture under his contract with Joseph M. Schenck is at last on view, and the results are in every way gratifying. "The Eagle" is a good picture—and we use the word "good" in no disparaging sense. It barely misses being an exceptional picture. It is well mounted, splendidly acted and sumptuously staged. Valentino gives one of his most intelligent and likeable characterizations, and the men should like this as well as the women. The picture's faults, such as they are, are in what it lacks. The lighter touches are splendid but the big moments have not been developed as fully as might have been. Direction and continuity are good, but fail to make the character as sympathetic or the emotional situations as potent as would have been desirable. However, its a beautifully produced picture and should satisfy the fans. Vilma Banky again justifies all the nice things said about her, and Louise Dresser is splendid as the Czarina. The Russian types are good, as a whole, and the atmosphere convincing.

THEME. Russian drama of young Cossack who sets out to avenge father's wrongs and death, but finds himself in love with wrongdoer's lovely daughter, with love triumphant.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Light comedy touches. Portrayals by star, Vilma Banky and Louise Dresser. The runaway. The scene with the bear. Scene in which hero seeks revenge. General mounting of production.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the star, of course; also the Misses Banky and Dresser. Tell them this is an exciting story of Russian Cossacks, court intrigue and love versus vengeance.

DRAWING POWER. Big enough for the best.

SUMMARY. Beautiful produced version of a classic Russian novel, well cast and lavishly mounted. Excellent Russian atmosphere, beautiful settings and photography

"Failure"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

O. HENRY'S the "Hypothesis of Failure" is the latest offering in the series of two-reel screen presentations of that author's works by Fox Film. The picture, like the others in the series, has the advantages of a good cast and fine technical qualities, but the story presented difficulties which the scenarist could not overcome. Beatrice Van wrote the scenario and she is responsible for some fine work in the comedy line, but here is an instance where the issues are a little too obscure. As a consequence "Failure" is somewhat confusing, and that spells "failure" for short screen comedy, because the average spectator will not search for issues in this form of entertainment.

Some gags have been added to enliven the play and a good bit of invention must be credited to the scenarist for putting in the action about Lawyer Gooch's inability to pay his office help. He works hard to get retainers out of the three clients who state hypothetical cases and is about to receive them into his eager hands when the stenographer or Archibald the office boy step up and grab the "advances" to satisfy back pay claims.

The Cast

Lawyer Gooch.....Harvey Clark
Tilly Jones.....Kathryn McGuire
Oscar Spiffen.....Maine Geary
Egbert.....William Bakewell
Thomas Billings.....William Norton Bailey
Mrs. Billings.....Vivian Oakland
Henry Jessup.....Roy Atwell

The Story—Lawyer Gooch, specializing in divorces, receives a visit from a man who tells him that a certain Mrs. Billings will not be happy until she gets a divorce from her husband, and without stating his name, the man says he will pay Gooch $500 if he obtains a divorce. A woman enters the office and states another "hypothetical case" saying that she is unhappily married and wants a divorce. She says her name is Billings and will pay $500 if Gooch will get her a divorce. She is scarcely out of the office when another man enters and pleads with the lawyer to patch up the differences of a Mr. and Mrs. Billings, saying he will pay $1000 if Gooch will effect a reconciliation. Gooch accepts the latter proposition, and thinking that the last man is the husband of Mrs. Billings he brings them together, only to find that the last man is the very man Mrs. Billings is pursuing, and who is interested in having her reconciled to her husband in order to escape her.

Summary—A well acted and staged presentation of an O. Henry story that seems too elusive for the screen. It is a frail tale and in the original was concerned with a lawyer, a central character, and therefore furnished no material for the scenarist or director to transpose into action.

"The Uneasy Three"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Here is a clever burlesque of "The Unholy Three"—a recent feature that has been going in good shape. Furthermore, it is a distinct departure from the usual slapstick gags and thrills and the result is a good, clean cut comedy, done in entertaining style.

Leo McCarey directed this latest one from Hal Roach and Charlie Chase, Katherine Grant and Bull Montana who aspire to be society crooks, make up the "Uneasy Three."

The Cast

Crook Number One.....Charlie Chase
Crook Number Two.....Katherine Grant
Crook Number Three.....Bull Montana

The Story—"The Uneasy Three" who aspire to be a trio of high grade society crooks, consult on their first big job and decide to annex the "Kadjir brooch," a famous jewel given much publicity by the newspapers. A Mrs. Van Courtland has just presented the brooch to her daughter and is further holding a party in the latter's honor. On the night of the party the crook trio proceed on their way to the home of Mrs. Courtland and during the journey, collide with an auto bearing three performers who have been hired to entertain at the party. The crooks convince the performers that the party has been postponed and gain entrance to the house by this ruse. On their arrival they are immediately besieged with requests from the guests to start the entertainment. They plan to have one of their trio steal the brooch while the others are playing but a detective who becomes suspicious on account of their unfamiliarity with the musical instruments, continually frustrates the plan.

In the meantime the original entertainers have telephoned to Mrs. Van Courtland to verify the postponement of the party and on finding out that they have been misled, proceed at once to her home. The crooks finally succeed with the theft of the brooch—only to reform before the end of the story.

Summary—A clever take-off on a recent feature picture, presenting good, clean cut comedy without resorting to a lot of slapstick. It will probably get the biggest laughs from those who have seen the feature, but should prove entertaining to other audiences.

"The Amundsen Polar Flight"
(Pathe—Three Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

With the world-wide newspaper publicity that was given the Amundsen airplane expedition to the North Pole, these three reels that record the exploits of the members, cannot fail to interest the average audience for they are packed full of the heroic hardships that were attendant in a flight of this nature.

It is probably one of the most remarkable screen documents that have been recorded.

The camera man is not named but a lot of praise could also be given to the man who cranked his machine thru all sorts of trying conditions and helped make the showing of this film possible.

There must have been scenes enacted during this expedition that were more dramatic than anything ever produced for the stage or screen—but there isn't any cast so here are the names of the air-voyagers.

Captain Raold Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, was accompanied in one of the giant planes by Lieutenant Riiser-Larsen of the Norwegian Navy and Master Mechanic Karl Feucht. With Lincoln Ellsworth, the American scientist who commanded the other plane, were Lieutenants Omdal and Dietrichson.

At a Norway port, the planes were placed aboard a freighter and hauled to Kings Bay, Spitzbergen—a distance of 600 miles. It was from here that the two planes took off at a speed of eighty miles an hour and not far from this point the strange and impressive Arctic scenery begins to loom up. The first aerial pictures of the glacier chain above Spitzbergen are also revealed.

After being caught in an Arctic fog and within a distance of 134 miles from the Pole, the Ellsworth plane was forced down in a disabled condition. Two days elapsed before a strange freak of fate—that of the breaking and drifting ice floes—brought the two planes within signaling distance.

Communication established, the two crews joined forces to seek a way out of the serious situation of being stranded in a field of ice. With much labor and hardship, the gasoline and other supplies from the disabled Ellsworth plane, are hauled over treacherous ice floes to the point where Amundsen's plane rests.

Twenty-four days go by in preparation for the return flight—and in the meantime the world gives up the expedition as lost.

In order for the giant plane to effect a take-off, it was necessary to prepare a smooth runway of 600 yards. Large blocks of ice had to be trimmed and leveled with small crude instruments. At last the huge task is completed and the plane makes a successful take-off for its return trip.

Entering Oslo Harbor they are greeted by the entire population and carried in state to the Kings palace where they are decorated for valor.

Summary—Photographed under the most trying conditions, this is one of the most interesting adventure films that has been shown. Should prove successful with all audiences.

"Take Your Time"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Ralph Graves is starred in this one out of the Sennett studios and in a role depicting the many troubles that a love sick traffic cop must experience when confronted with the task of presenting a summons to his sweetheart.

Lloyd Bacon is the director and has handled the subject in good style; in fact, there can be no doubt that "Take Your Time" measures up to the average Sennett product.

Vernon Dent is a particularly watchful Sergeant and Thelma Parr a consistent traffic law breaker. William McCall is Thelma's father.

The Cast

Officer 999.....Ralph Graves
The Sergeant.....Vernon Dent
The Young Lady.....Thelma Parr
Her Father.....William McCall

The Story—Officer 999 is a traffic cop on a busy corner and is attending to his duties in an admirable manner until a certain young lady appears on the scene in an automobile and then the officer's sheik characteristics assert themselves. It is love at first sight but the next time they meet the cop is confronted with the embarrassing duty of handing the girl a summons on account of her disregard of the traffic rules. He is reluctant to do this but his post is being closely watched by a hard boiled Sergeant. However, the summons is finally handed over much to the chagrin of his new found sweetheart. In the meantime, to further damage his standing with the family, he gives another summons to the girl's father who is hurrying to catch a train.

The cop is much worried and invents a scheme to save his lady love and while the case is being tried, kidnaps her. They drive away and are married—later returning to the court in a care free manner for the reason that a husband cannot testify against his wife.

Summary—A good average two-reel comedy from the Sennett studios, starring Ralph Graves who has adequate support. It is suitable for the general audience.

"Too Many Bucks"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

AS a temporary relief to that sameness which has characterized all of the two reel westerns, comedy predominates in this Mustang picture, with Ben Corbett and Pee Wee Holmes as the featured players. There is a decided western atmosphere, but the attempt is made rather to get laughs than thrills. It's knockabout comedy and not too humorous at that, but it is different and probably will be highly approved in the neighborhood houses.

The Cast

Magpie Simpkins.....Pee Wee Holmes
Dirty Shirt Jones.....Ben Corbett

The Story—Magpie and Dirtyshirt are rivals in love with Lucy Whittaker. Dirtyshirt beats Magpie with an invitation to take Lucy to the rodeo, so Magpie disarranges the steering gear on Dirtyshirt's flivver. He happens along at the psychological moment and persuades Lucy to accompany him to the rodeo. Magpie, to make an impression with the girl agrees to ride the untamable horse, Ajax, but he is promptly thrown. Dirtyshirt conceives the idea of painting a docile animal the color of Ajax and then volunteers to ride him. Magpie detects the ruse and switches the names on the stalls of the animals, with the result that Dirtyshirt also has a rough time with Ajax. Magpie then leads out the docile painted animal and has no trouble winning the prize offered, until Dirtyshirt turns a hose on the horse and shows up Magpie.

Summary—A western comedy, with comedy predominating. It has some humorous situations with a lot of slapstick and knockabout stuff. It will probably be pleasing as a relief from the regular run of two-reel westerns.

"The Honor System"

(Pathe-Aesop Fable—One Reel)

THIS time the pen of Paul Terry has revealed the true story of the system employed in a cat's jail—where vicious, night prowling cat criminals are kept from breaking the peace. The "Honor System" is used but does not work out so well. A get-away is staged by a hardened old crook cat and a mighty chase develops with the armed guards in close pursuit. The escaped criminals are finally herded back to jail

The picture is done in the usual, entertaining style.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

"On Edge"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is a typical Lige Conley comedy. It is just a potpourri of hokum and gag mixed up with a humorous situation or two and the usual aerial angle which is being so much overworked by these short comedy producers in an effort to squeeze out a laugh. It might better be titled Fun in a Sporting Goods Store for Conley as the salesman demonstrates all the devices in the store with disastrous results to himself and the customers. Eventually, accompanied by a darkey he is projected through a window and lands on a safe which is being hoisted to one of the upper offices in the building. From then on to the end Conley and the darkey try hard for laughs while suspended in mid air from one of those trick Hollywood buildings.

The Cast

Egbert Eggleston.....Lige Conley
Dolly.....Estelle Bradley

A Mermaid Comedy, written and directed by Norman Taurog; photographed by Leonard Smith.

The Story—Lige is a sporting goods salesman in a retail store and is compelled to demonstrate the different devices in the store, which he does to very poor advantage as an irate boss looks on and threatens repeatedly to fire him. Eventually Lige shows the ladies how to "pin the tail on the donkey." He is blindfolded and walks through an open window to land on a safe being hoisted to an upper floor. A negro in an effort to rescue him, also winds up on the safe in midair. After a lot of horseplay that is not too funny, they are rescued.

Summary—There is not much to recommend in this picture, which for the most part is too silly in its antics to be humorous. It might be appreciated where a lot of young children are gathered.

"Fair But Foolish"

(Educational-Christie—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is a story to this comedy in which Jimmie Adams is featured that is far above the average for these two reelers, and while the picture is a conglomeration of knockabout and slapstick stuff it also has some situations that should be good for many laughs. The action is laid largely in the customs offices and on an ocean liner and it develops so many complications that Jimmie is fairly running wild throughout the two reels. The cast is a good one with Molly Malone showing to advantage opposite the star in the leading feminine role.

The Cast

Jimmie, a Clothing Salesman.....Jimmie Adams
Jimmie's Girl.....Molly Malone
Betty's Father.....Lincoln Plumer

A Jimmie Adams Comedy, directed by William Watson; photographed by Gus Peterson and Alex Phillips; cartoons by Norman Z. McLeod; produced by Christie.

The Story—Jimmie receives a wire from his girl telling him her father is taking her to Italy on the Romania in a half hour. He decides to make the boat, but is held up by the customs officials and detained temporarily as a prisoner with a gang of immigrants. Jimmie changes clothes with one of them and makes his getaway. He is then recognized as a dangerous immigrant tabbed for deportation and is ordered deported on the Romania. Molly evades her father and joins Jimmie in the steerage. Later the first class passengers, among whom is Molly's father, look down upon the steerage passengers and witness a marriage ceremony in progress. As the bride and groom turn around at the end of the ceremony they are recognized by Molly's irate father.

Summary—This comedy is well above the average for pictures of the type. The story is a good one with numerous complications, some lively situations and an abundance of slapstick. It should go fairly well in all but the first run houses.

"The Rustlers from Boulder Canyon"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A FAIRISH sort of story is revealed in this western, though the action is much the same as all of those that have gone before. Edmund Cobb is the featured player and a careful tally would probably check up to the usual number of fist fights in which he engages in all of these two reelers. He has yet to lose a decision despite the number of his antagonists and an apparent lack of a punch. However, he saves the girl from the advances of the unscrupulous foreman and provides a home for her and the little boy, which is the main thing.

Ned Carter.....Edmund Cobb

The Story—Ruth Noble and little Bobby have been given permission by the late owner to occupy the abandoned cabin on the Maltby Ranch. A new owner arrives and Dan Hodges, the foreman, who is in love with Ruth, advises her that she must leave the premises, on the order of the owner unless she agrees to marry Dan. Ned Carter arrives in time to order the furniture put back into the house, as he too has fallen in love with Ruth. Meanwhile little Bobby overhears a plot of the rustlers to run the balance of the horses that night. He tells Ned of it and the latter thwarts the rustlers, turns them over to the sheriff and then reveals himself as the new owner and offers to share the ranch with Ruth, who promptly accepts.

Summary—A western with a little better story than usual. It contains all of the customary action including fist fights, reckless riding and an abundance of suspense. Audiences that like the short western will approve this one.

"Eats Are West"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is one of Pat Sullivan's Felix the Cat series and a little better one than the general run of them though it is rather long drawn out for the laugh or two it contains. Felix, riding on an improvised airplane is desperately in need of food and descends into the rations being conveyed to the boys by the pony express. The rest of the reel is devoted to the actions of Felix in making his getaway.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Wild Cats of Paris"

(Pathe-Aesop Fable—One Reel)

MOST all of these are good—this one is a wow!

It's a story of the cat underworld of Paris—the cat's Montmartre district—and the wicked life of these night prowlers is entirely exposed. The original Apaches never had anything on these felines for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

Regional News from Correspondents

Houston

R. O. ROBERTS, manager of the Southern Theatre Equipment Co. was in Houston for several days last week. Mr. Roberts is making a tour of south Texas.

J. A. Weinberg is in Houston for a short visit. Mr. Weinberg represents Enterprise Distributing Exchange.

Work on the new million dollar theatre which is being erected for Southern Enterprises, Inc., and the new popular price theatre erected by local interest is at a complete stand still on account of the rainy weather which has had Houston in its grip for more than ten days.

Jack Meredith, Dallas publicity man, has been in Houston for a week in the interest of Universal productions.

Mrs. Milton S. Goss, manager of the Houston office of the Milton S. Goss interests, has returned for a two days' trip to Ft. Worth.

Paul Barraco, owner of a string of popular price theatres, has announced a s pecial show for white people only one night each week at his colored vaudeville theatre.

New York and New Jersey

IN these days when news of the expansion of theatre circuits seem to fill the columns of all the trade papers, it is noticeable that Mayer and Schneider, the two "big butter and egg men" from the East Side of New York, are doing very nicely in the process of building up the M. & S. Circuit. Not only are they progressing in the acquisition of theatres but Milton Kronacher reports that they have plenty of coal in their cellars which also adds the diamond business to their interests.

Present holdings of the M. & S. Circuit consist of the following theatres: The Clinton, Odeon, Palace, Waco, Majestic, New Law, New Stand, M. & S. Delancey, Orpheum and the recently added houses which are the Forsyth (a new theatre), The Casino Playhouse, New Atlantic Garden, New Delancy and the Florence.

Mayer and Schneider have also taken over a theatre site on Clinton St., near Grand, and will construct a modern 3,000 seat playhouse with a roof garden that will seat an additional 1,800. Altogether there are five M. & S. theatres under construction on the East Side.

All this activity will undoubtedly have its effect on Louis Goldberg, the quietly busy booker of the M. & S. Circuit, who besides having the entertainment responsibility of all these theatres on his shoulders is further saddled with the tsk of operating a free clinic on the "Curb." Many a film salesman has been advised by Louis to "see the doctor." It will be remembered that Louis Goldberg was at one time the manager of the theatre that is now known as the M. & S. Majestic on Second Avenue and that is where Louis made a reputation for himself as a theatre manager. He is now traveling at express train speed and an appointment needs about three weeks advance notice.

James Sammons, who has a theatre over on Coney Island Avenue, Brooklyn, called the Sunshine, does not worry about competition despite the fact that a new 2,000 seat house has just opened near himm and another large theatre that has been closed for alterations has also re-opened. "Jimmy" gives them their money's worth and a whole family can see a show at the Sunshine for the price of one ticket at a Broadway house.

Louis Gold, of Newark and with three theatres to his credit in that city, is reported as looking about for new theatre sites in New Jersey.

Joe Hornstein, of Howells Cine Equipment Co., will leave for Philadelphia and Washington some time during the week in the interest of The Supply Dealers of America. Joe is an executive member of this organization. Recent installations reported by Howells include the Olympia, a new Famous-Players theatre at Miami, Fla., the Rivoli at Newark and Louis Rosenthal's Lyceum and Colonial at East Orange, N. J.

E. J. Smith, General Sales Manager of Associated Exhibitors paid a call to the local exchange on Tuesday of this week. Eddie O'Donnell, formmerly with the Fox-Educational department, is a recent addition to the Associated Sales staff.

Theatre construction continues to be active in this zone. The Glen Cove Amusement is building a 1,700 seat house in Glen Cove at a reported cost of $300,000. Contract has also been let for a proposed million dollar theatre on the Broadway Country Club property in Flushing, L. I., and Mineola, L. I. is to have a new brick and steel theatre building at Mineola Boulevard and First St., that will house 1,700.

Sam Roth, managing director of the Chrystmos and Roth circuit and one of the best showmen in this section recently put on a "Circus"at the Orpheum in Yonkers and needless to say, it went over big. The Yonkers daily paper raved about the idea.

Louis Rosenthal's Colonial and Lyceum theatres at East Orange, N. J. will have their opening on the night of November 14th. In as much as this opening was postponed at one time, it is reported that this date is positive.

The Seventh Avenue Theatre, formerly called the Atlantic Playhouse at Seventh Ave. and 51st St., Brooklyn ,that opened up a couple of weeks ago under new management, has again closed its doors.

The United Theatre, Myrtle Ave. and Flatbush Ave. Extension, Brooklyn, closed on November 3d in order to begin work on the enlargment of the house.

Pollack and Bratter's new theatre in Newark, the Hawthorne, will hold its opening on November 17th.

Up around 174th St. and Jerome Ave., New York City, where the grass still grows, there seems to be considerable building activity. Manager Blendes, a former exhibitor is constructing an 1,800 seat house in that neighborhood and it is further reported that The Consolidated Amusement Co. is putting up two more in the same section.

A Prudential Film Delivery driver was recently called to police headquarters in order to scrutinize the faces of two suspects that were being held in connection with the robbery of the Heights theatre. It will be remembered that this robbery took place a few months ago. The Prudential man failed to recognize the two men.

CONSTRUCTION & EQUIPMENT DEPARTMENT

Building Supervision of Great Importance

Competent Execution of Plans and Specifications Just As Vital As Proper Design

THE practice of having the design made by one individual and the supervision executed by another, who is entirely disassociated, is to be discouraged, if best results are to be obtained, for the reason that it is not possible for a disconnected party to read the full intention of the designer through the medium of plans and specifications. There must be a personal contact and the individual attention if the full realization of the original conception is to be developed.

The main point of issue is the absolute necessity of proper supervision. The writer in his practice makes virtually mandatory the handling of the supervision of the work for the reason as already stated. It is a dangerous procedure for an engineer or architect to design a structure or any part of it and then leave the execution of his plans to others. In some cases, it may be possible to obtain competent supervision from others but, if there is to be competent supervision, it should be kept within the jurisdiction of the designer.

The practice of preparing plans and specifications or plans without specifications for an owner, even with the understanding that no responsibility is attached thereto, is highly unsatisfactory from every point of view. Should the work not turn out satisfactorily, even though the designer may not actually be responsible, the tendency is to accuse him of deficiency from the mere fact that he is connected with the work and it always has a tendency to reflect on the ability of the designer. The writer is, therefore, strongly of the opinion that designers should insist upon having control of the execution of their work and, if this is done, both the designer and the owner will be properly protected and better results in every respect will certainly be obtained.

The opinion seems to prevail among not a few of those who contemplate building theatres that the matter of construction is one to be more or less lightly considered and that the entire operation leans or depends on the plans and specifications. This is a fallacy which should be eliminated, not only from the architect's or engineer's point of view but equally so from the owners' or builders' viewpoint. The organization for construction in order to get proper results must be as carefully considered as an organization for any business concern.

There are two objectives to be obtained in any building operation. One is the execution of plans and specifications and the other is the execution of plans and specifications within a specified or reasonable length of time. The coordination of the construction work is also of great importance. It is not possible for an inexperienced person to undertake to do something that they are not familiar with. This applies as well to supervision of construction as it does to any other line. It is necessary to have a head to every organization and the head, in order to get results, must have had an extensive experience in that particular line of work.

Of equal importance is the awarding of contracts. This is usually a part of the contractor's job. Frequently it is attempted by owners who are not qualified and, as a result, they usually learn sooner or later to their sorrow that a mistake has been made. Much of this trouble is due to over-confidence of the owner in his own ability and his extreme desire to reduce the cost. Were these two objectives obtained by pursuing the course above mentioned, there might be some justification for its consideration. The usual result is, however, just the opposite. The desired end is not obtained and, on the contrary, the cost of the work is greatly increased.

There is only one proper method of procedure which will lead to both efficiency and economy and which will produce satisfaction to all concerned. This method is to place any building operation in the hands of a competent engineer or architect in whom the investors have absolute confidence and whom they know from investigation are absolutely reliable and honest. With this done, the

Projection Standards

VERY recently a person supposedly well informed on the motion picture equipment field remarked to us concerning the lamentable lack of interest on the part of exhibitors toward a high standard of projection. This party vouchsafed as his estimate that eighty per cent of the houses now operating could not boast of projection showing any material improvement over that prevalent eight or ten years ago.

By what method of reasoning or set of statistics this conclusion is reached we do not know, though this person's opinion is by no means unsupported in the equipment trade.

But let us take just obvious facts into consideration: first, the physical characteristics of the average theatre of today as compared with the average of ten years ago; second, the importance that is now fairly generally attached by exhibitors to the physical characteristics of their houses; last, but most conclusive, the quality and quantity of apparatus being sold by equipment manufacturers.

The average house of today, excepting of course, town hall shows and the like, is built on a relatively elaborate scale, representing many times over the investment of show places of a decade ago. The presentation of pictures in old time theatres, in an elaborate setting, would obviously be a mark for deriding criticism.

Again today exhibitors realize that the discriminating taste of modern theatre patrons will not tolerate a picture projected in a manner to cause irritation and annoyance—factors that were once philosophically accepted by movie fans.

However, final proof of the status of present day projection lies in an analysis of the type of equipment now generally manufactured for theatre use. The average apparatus today is far better in every way than the best used ten years ago. Also, in number of actual sales the figures show to advantage though the number of prospective buyers have shown a decrease. P. M. Abbott.

entire matter should be left with them and their recommendation acted upon. No attempt should be made to tell them what to do. The owner should merely decide the amount of money that he can afford to spend or have his agent decide the amount of funds that should be spent on any given operation. If this is done, the proposition should work out satisfactorily from both a financial and construction point of view and the owners interests will be served in the best way possible. After all, any building operation, especially a theatre, is one of investment, and, as it involves the most complicated structure from an engineering point of view, it needs special attention both as to design and as to construction.

In conclusion, the writer wishes to emphasize the importance of first having complete plans and specifications, properly drawn, for any given proposition and based on previous estimates of cost or amount of outlay that has been assigned to the job. In other words, plans and specifications should not be overdesigned to the extent that, when their estimates of cost are obtained, it is found that the final cost greatly exceeds the original appropriation. He next wishes to recommend that the construction of the theatre be placed in the hands of competent construction engineers or builders and that, as a result, proper supervision is obtained at all times with special attention given to the structural features with a view to both economy and safety. Owners should make certain that their construction work is placed under highly efficient supervision as the building of a theatre requires particular attention to details.

Walter Hayes to Lease New Buffalo Theatre

SIDNEY WERTHEIMER will begin at once to build his new theatre on Hertel avenue, Buffalo, a few doors from Shea's North Park. It is to be a 2,500 seat house, complete in every way and comparing with the larger downtown houses. Mr. Wertheimer encountered much trouble in getting his plans O.K'd by the council because of the objection of nearby church officials. However, taking the matter to court he won out. When completed, the house will be leased by Walter Hays of Buffalo. former president of the M.P.T.O. of N. Y. The policy of the house has not as yet been decided upon.

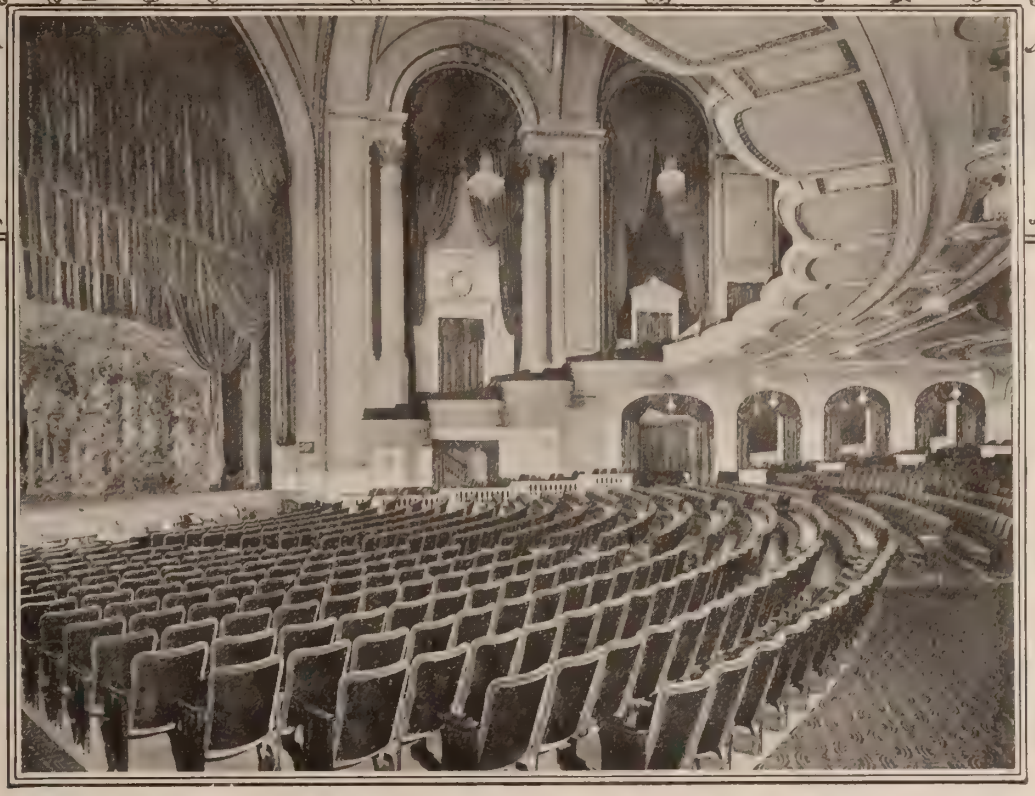
Rivoli Theatre Opened at Rome, Georgia

From all reports, Rome, Georgia, has a fine modern motion picture theatre in the Rivoli which was recently opened to the public by O. C. Lam.

All through the house the plans have been carried out to insure balance and harmony. The front is green and white and this color is the keynote for the entire building. The black and white tile in the lobby has been laid diagonally in order to give length and is in striking contrast to the yellow walls. On each side of the lobby are Adam style console tables with polychrome finish of green and yellow. The mirrors and chairs are of the same period furniture. The drapes on the alcoves on each side of the lobby are a rich blue and crimson. Burnished gold lanterns also adorn the alcoves. On either side of the alcoves are the dressing rooms.

In the main auditorium, the large light fixture and the wall brackets are also furnished in burnished gold and the wall lights are covered with parchment shades. There are aisle lights attached to the chairs. The stage finishings are all in good taste and the theatre is also being equipped with a new pipe organ.

The projection room is strictly fire-poof and forced to go to work. It is thru this part Ventilation is taken care of by the exhaust fan system.



There is also a section for the colored people located back of the white balcony.

Benton Opens New Theatre in Mechanicville

William E. Benton, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., opened his new theatre known as the State, in Mechanicville, on Monday night, October 26. The theatre represents an investment on the part of Mr. Benton of about $142,000. The house is located in the business center of the city and preceding the two shows of Monday night, the house was opened to the public for a general inspection from 5:30 o'clock. The theatre resembles in many respects the house which Mr. Benton operates in Saratoga Springs.

Inquiries and Comments

Some Points on Screens

ACCORDING to statisticians, everything moves in cycles. A sort of "Today we are down, Tomorrow we will be up" process.

This, apparently has nothing to do with the daily grind of the projectionist, yet the cyclic law of variation applies with equal force to events in the motion picture field.

After many moons of hibernating, exhibitors and projectionists alike have deluged us with requests for information on screens; big screens, little screens, cheap screens, dear screens, new screens, old screens, painted screens, washed screens; the inquiries run the whole gamut of screens and then back again.

The reason for this is, to us at least, as obscure as the reason for other cyclic variations—sun spot activity, for instance. However, the upward swing has arrived, so the only thing to do is to meet it and prepare for a protracted siege.

No Information

Occasionally, very occasionally, these requests for screen information contain enough information to enable the editor to make a specific recommendation. By far, the most of them are so indefinite, or give so little information, however, as to preclude any recommendation whatever, even based on guesswork. We have studiously avoided giving "guess-work recommendations" since they are invariably costly to the recipient and do not tend to improve the relations between subscribers and this journal.

We are sorely tempted sometimes, with the best of misguided intentions, to hand out such recommendations since we realize that the inquirer has a real need for impersonal information and lack of time does not permit of lengthy correspondence in an effort to find out just what the conditions are.

As an example a subscriber in New York recently sent the following letter:

"Dear Sir:—

I was referred to you by ..... in relation to framing and resilvering my screen.

"Will you kindly send me information on the above subjects?"

Now a request like that in the ordinary press of time would mean one of two things; either ignoring it altogether or else writing a voluminous letter describing in detail the general subject of framing and renovating screens.

It should be obvious that only a little of the tendered information, that bearing on this inquirer's particular case, would be of interest to him, and the remainder would be just so much waste effort.

It is manifestly unfair to expect us to write a general treatise on screens in order to make certain that the desired information is included somewhere in the body of the letter. Especially so in view of the fact that a description of the specific conditions would have saved much paper and time.

A Little Information

Then we have another class of requests which give a little information, just enough to whet your appetite for making a reply, but not enough to enable one to make such a complete recommendation as to expect good results therefrom.

Such a typical request was received from Largo, Florida. It will be better to omit names in this discussion. This writer had evidently secured possession of a pamphlet or booklet containing the reflective distributions curves of various makes of commercial screens and had applied the information to checking the screen in his theatre. He used the data, for the most part, very intelligently since the screen he selected was the one which would have been, ordinarily, recommended for his conditions.

He apparently confused the significance of the names applied to the commercial screens since he thought these names referred to points which could be applied to his present screen in order to secure the required distribution of light.

His letter is as follows:

"Dear Sirs:

I notice in—(manufacturers' pamphlet which was reprinted from a paper on the subject) that the color of screens for different theatres has been figured out.

"My screen is 9 x 12 feet and the house measures 24 x 65 feet from projectors (machines, he calls them) to screen.

"I have figured out that my screen should be painted with—(here he gives the name of a well known screen and assumes that it is the name of a special paint).

"Am I right and where can I get the paint to paint it with."

Screens, Not Paint

It was necessary to inform this gentleman that the table referred to screens as made by the manufacturers and not to a list of paints for amateur application.

Incidentally, a little unbiased selling talk was included which attempted to convince him that, in the long run, it would probably be better for him to purchase a new screen of recognized quality than to attempt to renovate his old screen with questionable results.

"Tinted" Screens

We now come to a third class of inquiries having to do with the selection of proper screen for use with projector systems employing various types and forms of light sources, such as Reflector Arc, A. C. Arc with Condensers, Mazda and ordinary D. C. Arc.

A recent letter from Delano, California, contained a request for information on the proper screen to use with Mazda in connection with the color from this source.

Now there is no earthly reason why, in the general run of theatres, a screen suitable for a reflector arc, say, should not be equally effective for use with Mazda and vice-versa.

Neverthless there are many persons who believe otherwise. It seems only logical for a dealer when trying to sell an exhibitor a new screen to claim that he has the one and only screen for bringing out the proper color in connection with, say, an A. C. Arc, which the exhibitor might happen to use.

No doubt, if it has been Mazda instead of the Arc, the claim would have been switched with equal ease to this source of light.

It may be possible—it may be—particularly with highly diffusing types of screen made of cloth that color can be introduced into the screen body in such a way as to obtain color modification in the light from the source. And it may also be possible that other certain screen materials are being employed which will also permit of this and with which we are not familiar.

Let it be understood, however, that no metallic surfaced screen can possess the property of selective color reflection because of the very "nature of the beast."

A metallic screen must possess a dull-polished surface, if such a term can be used. Now, no polished metal can selectively reflect light. That is, reflect certain colors and absorb others, which form the basis of so-called screen tinting. The color of the metal has no bearing in the matter. Burnished copper, which appears red under diffuse white light will appear green under green light. So will all other polished metals, for that matter, regardless of their characteristic color.

It may be possible, however, to mix coloring matter with metallic particles and so form a screen surface which will possess, to a greater or lesser degree, a certain slight amount of selective reflection. The ultimate outcome of such practice, however, is to absorb light, thus making the screen appear of lesser brightness.

In other words a certain amount of light is wasted, (absorbed in the screen) when doing this and if carried too far may easily spoil the screen, as such. On the other hand if a small quantity of coloring is used its effectiveness will not be noticeable so, wherein lies the good? If it is possible to obtain effective color modification in the screen material, why has no screen been developed for use with the high intensity arc, to tone down its color? Here, above all other places such modification is necessary and to our knowledge no such screen exists.

For brilliancy on the screen make sure you have Eastman Positive Film in the projector. It is identified by the words "Eastman" and "Kodak" in black letters in the film margin.

Theatre Construction Continues Active In New England Zone

THE new theatre in New Haven, Conn., being erected by the United Theatres Corporation of New Jersey, is expected to be ready for opening within a short time. The construction work is now practically completed. The theatre occupies the site of the Rialto which was destroyed by fire, and is next door to the Hotel Taft.

The United Theatres Corporation is also erecting a new theatre in New London, Conn., diagonally opposite the Hotel Mohican on the main street. This playhouse will probably be ready for opening late in the winter or early spring.

The Shawmut Theatre, the first of the Jake Laurie houses in Boston undergoing extensive remodelling and enlargement, to reopen, was thrown open to the public Sunday, Nov. 8. The remodelled house now has a seating capacity of 2500, an increase of 800 over the old house. Harry H. Goldstein is the manager.

There are three more houses in Mr. Laurie's circuit undergoing similar enlargement and they are expected to reopen at intervals of about two weeks. They are the Jamaica, Roslindale and Morton Street Theatres, all in Metropolitan Boston.

The new Bellevue Community Theatre in the Roslindale section of Boston was formally opened to the public Monday. There were no exercises of dedication nor no addresses, but the playhouse opened with a regular program. The house is giving double feature bills with two programs weekly.

Thomas D. Gotshall, one of the owners of the Bellevue Community Theatre is its active manager. The theatre is located opposite the Bellevue station. It has a seating capacity of 800.

Construction of the new University Theatre in Harvard Square, Cambridge, has commenced and the foundations are almost completed. This theatre will have a seating capacity of a little more than 2,000 and it is expected that it will be completed and ready for occupancy about April 1. The policy of the house has not yet been determined.

Stanley Sumner, owner-manager of the Community Theatre, Newton, is one of the owners of the University Theatre and will have general oversight of the playhouse.

The new Arlington Theatre on Massachusetts avenue, corner of Lake street, Arlington, Mass., will be opened about Nov. 23, according to present plans of Al Locatelli, the owner. The new theatre has a seating capacity of 1,700 and will draw its patronage from the rapidly growing residential section of Cambridge and Arlington. The house is to be operated on a straight picture policy with two changes of bill weekly. Fred Shehay, formerly of the Allston Theatre, Boston, will be manager of the new house.

The 325 State Street Corporation of New London, Conn., has let contracts for the erection of a theatre and office building in New London to the J. D. Harrison Construction Co. of New York City. Work is to commence at once. The theatre will be completed next fall if present plans are carried through.

If this thing were at all possible one would think that a diffusing type of screen made of yellow cloth, would do the trick very nicely. Has such a screen been tried? If so, with what results?

If diffusing type screens cannot do a creditable job in toning down colors, and the indications are that they cannot since they are not commonly encountered, then certainly no metallic screen can hope to do a successful job.

Some slight color modification in any case, is no doubt possible. That is undeniable. The question, however, is this, "Are the results commensurate with the loss of light which unavoidably results?" We think they are not.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Go West" — M-G-M., Capitol, New York

Mirror: "It's a bully 'Go West' that features the lavish sixth anniversary program at the Capitol this week. Stern-faced as ever, Buster takes his disreputably clothed self to a ranch, where he tries to play nursemaid to a herd of cattle. In taking the herd to the stockyards of a nearby town, the train is attacked by bandits and singlehandedly our hero gets the cattle to the yards. These concluding scenes are a yell. The Capitol audiences simply doubled up and screamed."

Telegram: "The choice of the Capitol Theatre for the stellar feature in its sixth anniversary program has fallen upon the tragic-eyed Buster Keaton, and judging by the hilarity of yesterday's audiences the selection will be amply justified. Keaton's latest comedy, 'Go West,' is a riotous affair of the big open spaces, and thousands of cattle and numerous bona fide cowboys have been enlisted to give greater realism to the production."

Times: When the fun starts popping in Buster Keaton's new film, 'Go West' it is rich and uproarious, with countless novel comedy twists. The chapters in which the herds of cattle are beheld roaming through the town created no end of mirth in the Capitol last evening, as did also Buster's hapless ideas of milking a cow."

Evening World: "For one hilarious hour see Buster Keaton in 'Go West.' It is packed full of merriment. 'Go West' is one of the rare pictures that ought to go big with regular patrons of the movies and prove no less popular with those who ordinarily scorn the pictures. It is advertised as a satire on 'the great open spaces' and it lives up to the billing."

Post: "The appearance of the comedian's name on the screen elicited a burst of applause from yesterday's audience and everybody, as far as we could see, appeared to enjoy the picture. Mr. Keaton's comedy matter is new and excellent, his pantomime, as ever, is very, very eloquent. Mr. Keaton is his old, appealing self."

American: "'Go West' has its amusing moments. When Buster lands his car full of cattle in Los Angeles, and tries to march them down the thoroughfare the stampede is very funny. The futile effort of the policemen to stop them in their march down the street made the Capitol audience rock with laughter yesterday. It was, I might say, the high point of merriment in the entire film."

"Classified"—First National, Allen, Cleveland.

The News: "Produced with an imagination and dexterity so sadly lacking in many a photoplay, it becomes cleaner, adroit and grown up in its every phrase. It is filled with those little subtle touches which make one remember it long after leaving the theatre."

Plain Dealer: "It is one of the most intelligently made comedy dramas which includes excellent titles, good acting and fine direction—I have seen in a long time."

"Classified"—First National, Capitol, Cincinnati

Times-Star: "'Classified,' First National's picturization of Edna Ferber's story, makes excellent screen entertainment. We do not know how closely it follows the original, but the scenario contains plenty of action well seasoned with modern romance. And best of all it has as its star Corinne Griffith, than whom there is no lovelier feminine vision on the silver sheet."

Commercial Tribune: "Corinne Griffith and Edna Ferber combine in making 'Classified' one of the most entertaining pictures shown here in some time. And in the matter of players—well, Corinne Griffith would make any picture in which she appeared."

"Don Q"—United Artists, Stillman, Cleveland

News: "Judging from the many outbursts of genuine merriment over Douglas Fairbanks in 'Don Q' most people will agree that this picture is highly entertaining. I think you will enjoy this photoplay, even as I enjoyed it. So will your wife, and so will your old man."

Press: "There is much that is engaging, much that is gallant, much that is amusing in 'Don Q' and his romantic adventures."

Plain Dealer: "Put it down in your memory that 'Don Q' is a great piece of entertainment—eleven reels of romantic magnetism, heroic charm, gorgeous background, all traveling at the rate of ninety miles an hour on the highway and sixty on the turns. Doug has never leaped so high, moved as quickly or kept in such constant motion so long before. The man isn't human; that's what he isn't."

"The Freshman"—Pathe, Hippodrome, Buffalo

Post: "One week is not going to be a long enough engagement for Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman' which yesterday proved a sensation at Shea's Hippodrome. The crowded houses for the first day were more than enthusiastic over the side-splitting comedy. It looks as though the film will make a Buffalo record for a picture."

"The Freshman"—Pathe, Cataract, Niagara Falls

Gazette: "Rah—rah—rah, and more rahs! Harold Lloyd and 'The Freshman' yesterday at the Cataract Theatre left their audience limp with laughter and wanting to stand up and cheer. It's one of those comedies that airs all your emotions in public and you laugh and cry and shout and completely forget all dignity."

"Bobbed Hair"—Warners, Warners, New York

Daily News: "The picture blithely touches on the question of 'to bob or not to bob' and then dashes into hilarious melodrama that leaves you breathless. It's great fun—every bit of it. Louise Fazenda, as Sweetie, is a riot. Marie Prevost is delightful. Kenneth Harlan keeps up the pace. Go to see 'Bobbed Hair' if you have to miss your appointment with the barber."

Evening Post: "Bobbed Hair is accompanied by almost continuous laughter from the audience. It is splendid movie material from start to finish, and the scenarist, Lewis Milestone, and the director, Alan Crosland, have turned out a fast-moving, hilarious comedy which will amuse almost anybody, even the proverbial Old Grouch. The cast is unusually good."

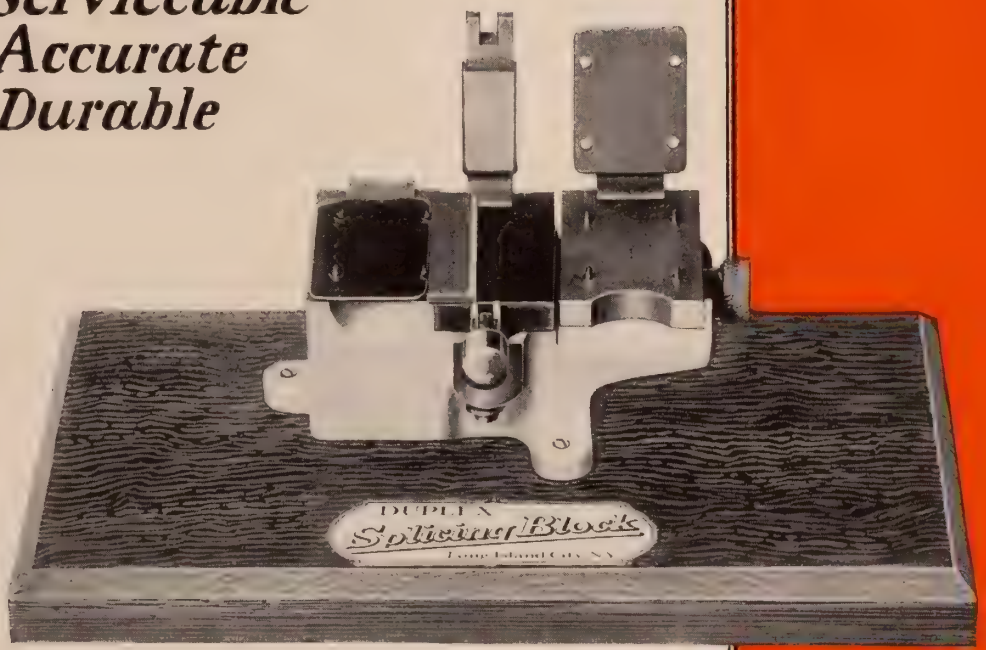
Journal: "Three shears for 'Bobbed Hair'! It's a rollicking melodrama, packed from start to finish with the most absurdly exciting adventures ever filmed outside of a serial. Louise Fazenda is excellent in a comedy role, Francis McDonald and Walter Long are good 'heavies,' and Pal, a dog, shares honors with the rest of the cast. The picture is ludicrously entertaining. You'll like it."

Evening Telegram: "Marie Prevost is attractively provoking as the adventurous maiden, and Kenneth Harlan, as the ultimate object of her affections, is commendably cool and collected as he passes through one alarming experience after another. Louise Fazenda provides some rapid comedy relief to the picture."

Sun: "Marie Prevost is unusually pleasing—as always."

Evening World: "A fast moving, racy comedy, full of plot, thrills and fights, and easily the best film the Warners have shown in the last six weeks. Marie Prevost is charming and provocative. Louise Fazenda is the pert and saucy Sweetie. Kenneth Harlan proves an excellent foil for Miss Prevost."

Morning Telegraph: "An excellent cast makes the most of the comedy values. Marie Prevost is appropriate as the heroine; she has a sparkling sense of comedy probably not equalled by any other screen comedienne. Louise Fazenda can always be counted upon for a delectably humorous performance and she has here the best opportunity in months of film making."



Daily Mirror: "The picture is a clever, absorbing film jokester, flaunting an audacious ending."

UNIT ORGANS

The Spice of Picture Presentation!

Three Views of New Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Neb.

THE real punch of pictures is organ music—the white streak of lightning through turbulent clouds, the pounding hoofs of racing horses, the silver melody of rippling waterfalls—are inanimate without the thunderous or soft and mellow accompaniment of an organ, and no instrument is as responsive and majestic in effect as a Wurlitzer Organ.

Leadership, whether it be in the production of super-photoplays, precision in the manufacture of equipment, or dependability in organ construction, is established by a recognized superiority over similar products. World leadership in organ building is the direct result of Wurlitzer success in producing an organ of finer tone, a greater volume and wider variety of effects than found in any other organ.

DIRECT BUYING

THE principal topic of discussion these days among equipment manufacturers is whether they will comply with the demand of large circuits to sell them direct thereby eliminating distributors' profit.

Direct buying necessitates that installation and servicing be done by the purchaser—which is convenient for a few circuits—fifteen at the outside. It is very questionable whether smaller or even relatively large groups of theatres can maintain such a special service department economically, not to mention the thousands of independent houses which have no technical staff.

This field is not large enough for distributors to maintain a paying business if they derive no profits from equipment bought by circuits. Therefore direct sales to circuits by manufacturers at the discounts now given dealers would eventually be the means of eliminating distributors or at least all the important ones.

Without complete distributor representation, manufacturers will be forced to sell the entire field direct. Results from that sales policy might be manifold—and by no means beneficial to theatres in general:

Where large discounts could be allowed big buyers, this policy would necessarily mean excessive charges to smaller buyers to cover installation, service and sales expense. The introduction of new and improved equipment would be handicapped, retarding the excellent advancement, such as has been constantly going on during the past ten years, for more efficient and better apparatus.

Manufacturers of lessor supplies would find it difficult to sell in quantities, resulting in the maintenance of higher prices. With no distributors' sales representatives constantly calling on exhibitors urging the installation of new and improved apparatus, the tendency towards better projection and general up-to-dateness of theatres might be brought to a more or less stand-still.

Certainly, large buyers should receive a discount—but not to the elimination of all distributor profits. And as to the manufacturers being "forced" to sell direct, this appears a bit strong—especially if these manufacturers are making good products, that are needed by theatres.

Know how to use light profitably

The first purpose of light is to see by. But merely using light for seeing is not getting full value from it. Light should be used to attract, to beautify — to bring people into your theatre and to contribute to their comfort and pleasure. That is the way to use light profitably.

Light can be fitted to a theatre as music is fitted to a play —adding a little extra touch of beauty, color or decoration wherever needed; creating any desired "effect"—making the theatre more attractive in every way.

Of course it requires skill to use light profitably. Skill that comes only from years of study and experience. But you can have this lighting skill—and simply for the asking.

Our lighting engineers, who have planned the lighting for the finest theatres in the country, are at your service—free. If your lighting is not a business-getting feature of your theatre, you need the service of these engineers.

When you mail the attached coupon enclose a brief note asking for lighting service. Our representative will call and study your problem—then very soon you will get detailed recommendations.

This New Film Safe Makes Security Cheaper than Risk

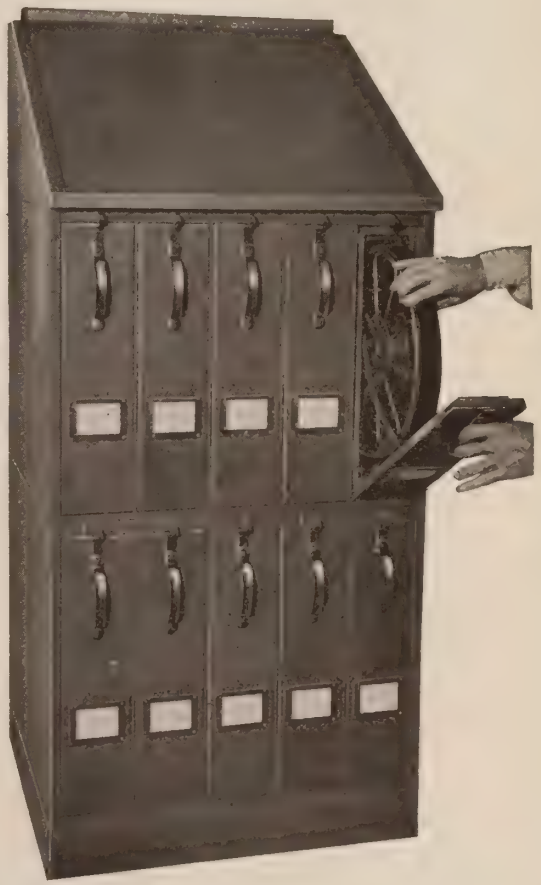
—Its Conveniences Cost You Nothing—

Insurance rates are determined by the hazards to which property is subjected. Rates charged for insurance on theatres and places where films are kept are comparatively high because of the prevalence and dangers of film fires.

The new American Film-Safe so minimizes film-fire hazards that Insurance Rating Companies allow material reductions in rates wherever this film safe is installed.

In some states the reductions allowed will in one year pay the cost of a film-safe. From then on the safe actually pays a dividend to the owner.

A Convenient Filing or Storing Cabinet



In addition to its protective value the American Film-Safe provides a most convenient system for filing and storing films. It is compact, takes up little space and can be easily moved about. It is of unit construction and may be added to or re-arranged at will. Made of full cold rolled sheet steel with all joints tenoned and pinned together, the safe is practically indestructible.

Each film is housed in a separate compartment and is suspended on a carriage which automatically moves forward when the door to the compartment is opened. Reels are always easily accessible for handling. Doors to compartments close automatically.

The exterior surfaces of American Film-Safes are finished in baked enamel. Standard colors are olive green with bronze hardware but this may also be obtained in mahogany, oak, American walnut or circassian walnut finishes.

American Film-Safes are made in two sizes. Style 1100 has five compartments for five 1000 foot reels. Style 1200 has five compartments for five 2000 foot reels.

American Film-Safes may be purchased on the deferred payment plan.

One of the newest commissions for Kilgen craftsmen is the Miracle Play to be staged in the St. Louis Coliseum in December under the direction of Morris Gest. The beauty of flowing, stately melody is of the greatest importance to this spectacle; so it is natural that a Kilgen was chosen.

The organ music at Radio Station WHT, Wrigley Bldg., Chicago, has won comments of praise from delighted auditors throughout the land. It is Kilgen Organ Music.

Crane quality is doubly important in Picture Theaters

THE severest test that plumbing fixtures can be given is the careless public use to which they are subjected in motion picture theaters.

These modern palaces of entertainment require of their installations every bit of beauty, comfort, and convenience demanded for the finest homes. But in no home, will fixtures ever be given such continuous and unthinking use. They must stand up economically under service as severe as that encountered anywhere.

Nevertheless, they must impress your patrons with your scrupulous care for their comfort, with your painstaking provision for exact sanitation.

In choosing fixtures, fittings, and valves, as well as heating materials, let the Crane name be your guide to dependable economy and satisfactory long-time service. Specify materials backed by the seventy-year reputation of this company.

At your service, to help in solving any problems of selection and installation, are men skilled in your very field. Consult them at the nearest Crane National Exhibit Rooms, where complete displays are maintained for you.

The Console illustrated here is the beautiful Barton Organ installed in the Fair Park Auditorium, Dallas, Texas.

The Golden Voice Barton Brings Silver to Your Box Office

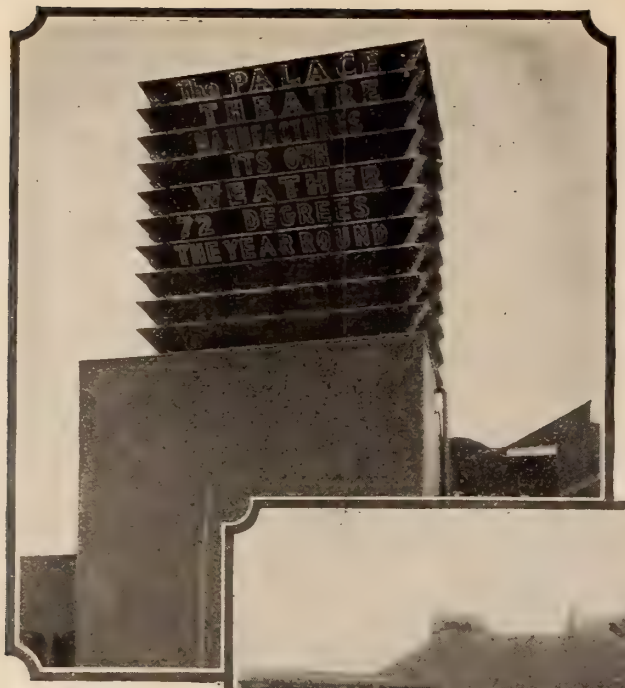
What brings the crowd back next night? What fills those last remaining seats — your profit seats? The Picture? Yes — and NO!

Somewhere — hidden in the orchestra pit, or in full view — there is a man or woman who makes your shows infinitely better. He or she — the organist — sways your audience to the moods of the presentation.

Has your organist the equipment to move your audience? Consider if he or she sends them away forever — or to come back again? To handicap your organist is a mighty big risk. To give your organist full co-operation is to install a "Barton."

The Barton Orchestral Organ is bringing capacity crowds to many leading theaters of the country. It can do likewise for yours.

The Barton has an exceptionally wide and varied range. Its interpretations are conceded to be "next to human." Its completeness, its flexibility make the Barton truly an organ with an appeal — a box office appeal.



Of course, the New Wisconsin—being an advanced theater chose the Barton as well as did the Joliet theater, Joliet, Ill., and Retlaw theater, Fond du Lac, Wis.—All these are C. W. and Geo. L. Rapp designed theaters.

Let us send you full particulars about the Barton without obligation. Merely give us the size of your theater.

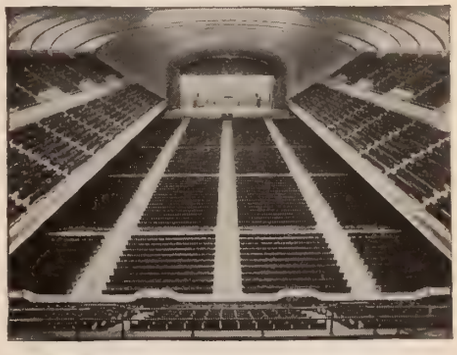
WARD LEONARD VITROHM

Grauman's wonderful Metropolitan Theatre, Los Angeles, the "Show House" of the Pacific Coast, has a complete Vitrohm installation of nearly 200 Continuous Duty Dimmers.

The Cleveland Auditorium (the largest and finest in the United States, seating 12,000) also has entire lighting system of over 900 kw. capacity perfectly controlled by means of Vitrohm Dimmers.



Grauman's Metropolitan Theatre, Los Angeles

VITROHM DIMMERS are the most compact and light of any type or make intended for the same purpose. Their dependable service is attested by the many thousands of plates in use throughout the world—such, for instance, as in the Belasco Theatre and The Hippodrome, New York (for upwards of 25 years), Eastman's Theatre, Rochester; Keith's latest and best Brooklyn Theatre; Al Malaikah Temple, Los Angeles, etc.

Ward Leonard Dimmers eliminate fire risk, are easy to operate, extremely durable, and economical in upkeep. Send us your specifications for estimate. No installation too small—none too large.

Continuous Duty

The foundation of all WARD LEONARD Theatre Dimmers is a substantial iron plate to one side of which a layer of vitreous enamel is applied. In this the resistor is imbedded. The resistor, enclosed in this non-porous enamel, is impervious to moisture and gases. It completely and permanently protects the resistance from corrosion or oxidation, and dissipates heat with maximum efficiency. It is to this unique construction, more than any other factor, that WARD LEONARD Theatre Dimmers owe their ability to render superior service under continuous duty.

A Supreme

Built in accordance with Link Standards of Construction

A Crowning Achievement

From time to time, during the past years, the discovery of some great new principle has contributed tremendously to the advance of the art of musical interpretation and the science of organ building.

Many of these principles have been given form as exclusive features of Link Organs and have added a new beauty to the magic of these pure-toned instruments.

Now a great artist and master craftsman has brought to light new facts that are sensational in their value to the theatrical world. For they have led to the creation of a new instrument that surpasses the finest results hitherto secured, and is the crowning achievement of many years of continuous progress.

This new instrument, the Link-C. Sharpe Minor Unit Organ, built on Link principles of construction, has the sturdiness that is characteristic of all Link products. It has been acclaimed a masterpiece by engineers and artists alike.

For over three generations the Link family has been engaged in the manufacture of pianos and organs. It has been their policy to produce only the finest instruments that scientific knowledge and master craftsmanship could create. Link Organs enjoy a well founded reputation for their musical qualities as well as for the consistency of their performance.

The manufacturing facilities of the Link Company are unsurpassed anywhere in the country. The tests that are applied to every instrument before it leaves the factory are the most stringent that it is possible to invent.

The new Link-C. Sharpe Minor Unit Organ upholds Link standards in every detail. It is an instrument that the Link Company is justly proud to have constructed.

Complete description of this new instrument is available to you on request. Use the attached coupon and full information will be sent to you promptly.

C. SHARPE MINOR
ORGANIST

NEW YORK CITY

May 28th
1925

LINK COMPANY,
Binghamton, N. Y. Att. Mr. G. T. Link

Gentlemen:

I would like briefly to be put in a letter to be used as you see fit, the reasons for my desire to become associated with your organization. As you know, in my experience, I have played practically all the largest theatre organs including many makes, from coast to coast; but when I sat down to the first LINK organ I ever played, I received the most pleasant surprise in my life. The quality of tone was beautiful and the response of the action superb. I had never known before such instantaneous response from any pipe organ.

Since then I have played several LINK organs and in all I found the same uniformity of tone and honesty of construction. Moreover, I was greatly surprised to find that LINK owners didn't know the meaning of the word "ciphers". And when I played on a LINK organ for an engagement and didn't have a cipher during that entire engagement, I fully realized that your organ, tonally and mechanically, was far ahead of any organ on the market today. This is a broad statement, but being of a mechanical turn of mind, I know pretty thoroughly construction of pipe organs, and in examining your construction in detail, it didn't take me very long to see why your organs excel.

For some time I have had in my mind that my broad experience in the theatrical field could be utilized, not only to my personal advantage, but to the greater advantage of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America. And although having been approached by other builders with the proposition of building a C. Sharpe Minor Unit, I have been jealous of my good name, built up through hard work on my part, so had not seen where my experience could be utilized until I came into contact with your organs and investigated your organization. I have many good friends in the theatrical business and naturally, I want to be able always to look them straight in the eye. The inference is obvious.

Sincerely.

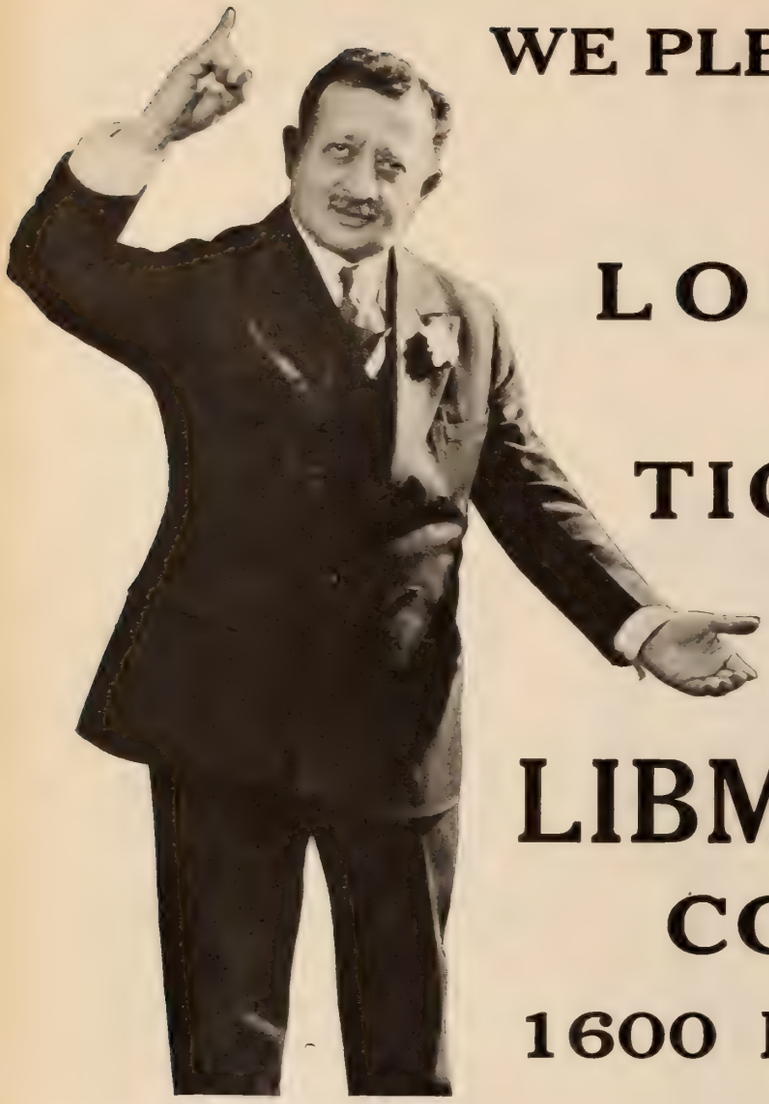
C. Sharpe Minor

CSM:BE

C. SHARPE MINOR

C. Sharpe Minor has long enjoyed an enviable reputation. His fame as a theatre organist is nation wide. During his career he has played practically every type and style of organ manufactured. His interest in the performance of instruments led him to investigate the mechanical construction of every organ he has to play.

Being of a mechanical turn of mind, he continually stored away facts with a view to sometime building an instrument that would meet perfectly the demands of the theatrical world, — an ideal organ.



It is significant that while several organ builders placed their facilities at Mr. C. Sharpe Minor's disposal, none could satisfy him in matters pertaining to principles of construction.

His desire to have his ideal organ built in accordance with Link methods and brought out under the Link name was a direct result of his investigation of Link Building Practice.

For Better Projection

What Simplex Offers You in Service

WE BELIEVE the measure of success of any business is determined by the quality of service that business offers its patrons.

Just as your success depends upon your ability and willingness to provide good entertainment, so we consider our success depends on how well our products meet your requirements for good projection.

It was because of our high regard for service that the engineers who designed the Simplex Projector were instructed to build a projector whose quality would be limited only by the limits of scientific knowledge.

We feel that the success Simplex Projectors have gained in all parts of the world is ample justification of the wisdom and correctness of our single policy—SERVICE.

The Service of Simplex Engineers The same purpose that prompted our insistence on highest quality in every detail of the Simplex machine is served in other phases of our business.

We maintain a staff of expert engineers whose duty is to see that every Simplex Projector gives the quality of service that it should and does give when properly installed and in proper working condition. These engineers are located in various parts of the country and are at the service of any theatre at any time for advice on any matter pertaining to projection or the operation of Simplex Projectors.

Service From Distributors Simplex distributors are located in 25 centers throughout the country. They are so located that distribution of each projector is made from a point within an easy servicing radius of any theatre.

When purchasing a new projector look up the nearest Simplex distributor; buy through him and you can be assured of getting the service that every buyer of Simplex is entitled.

The service behind Simplex Projectors are all designed to assist exhibitors in reaching the goal that means maximum success. That goal is better projection and better service to patrons.

Theatre Building & Equipment Buyers Guide

Millions for Theatres

AUTHORITIES in the building world estimate that some hundreds of millions will be spent this season upon new picture theatre buildings and the up-to-date equipment and renovation of our great fleet of modern playhouses.

The sum is staggering. But everything points to the full realization, and perhaps even a greater budget of cost.

There is a real estate boom on all over the country, the like of which has never been seen before. "Boom" does not fairly describe the situation, since very generally it is a substantial though speedy development to catch up with the needs of a fast-growing population and the suspension of building operations during the world war.

And picture theatres, in this day, are closely allied to real estate movements; indeed, often they are the heart and source of them. Add to this the easy money situation and the wholly optimistic statements on the business outlook by such men as Secretary Mellon, President Gary of the U. S. Steel, President Mitchell of the National City Bank and it is evident that the basis for theatre expansion is the broadest and most solid this industry has thus far experienced.

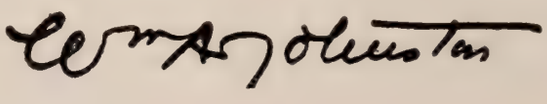
THE illustration on the cover of this special supplement of MOTION PICTURE NEWS—that of a thirty-six story skyscraper which houses a picture theatre of exceptional beauty—is symbolic of the tremendous development of the picture theatre.

It incites a bit of reminiscence which may be of interest and value.

Almost twelve years ago I was experimenting with a cover for MOTION PICTURE NEWS. In my mind's eye, I had a solid orange-red background with a modern motion picture theatre arising flush from the bottom of the page. The difficulty evolved was that of finding an artist who could conceive of such a thing as the picture theatre beautiful. And, finally, we gave up the attempt.

Architects were not even dreaming of picture palaces in those days. In fact only a few of the daring souls within the industry had visions above the roofs of the multitudinous store shows that dotted the country. The Strand of New York came along hesitatingly; so did the Stillman of Cleveland and the Central Park of Chicago. To have so many seats was daring enough. Today, after little more than a decade, a skyscraper is put up on Broadway over a picture theatre; entire city blocks are developed around them; the growth of great cities, like Los Angeles, is swerved by them; department stores are pushed from thoroughfares by them; all in all they present the most gorgeous public buildings in America today.



And this development is by no means confined to the big cities. As I write this, there comes to my desk a handsomely engraved invitation to the opening of a new theatre in York, Pa., the decorations of which are done by a noted New York artist. The smaller cities in fact today boast, in proportion to the aggregate, the finest theatres.

But in the big cities a stirring change is under way and will continue for some years—the replacing of several thousand little theatres by a few hundred great neighborhood houses with adequate parking space for cars. It is in this field, in fact, that most of the huge building budget will be spent; and this year is but the beginning. Many hundreds of millions more will be added.

LAST Spring, on my way to Hollywood to report what the studios would offer for the new season, I stopped in Chicago at the offices of Rapp and Rapp, architects, and the visit was much more than a casual one. I was amazed at their plans for new theatres. Many of them were of such design and proportions as to take one's breath away. I am free to confess that this was the high spot of my entire trip; theatres, more than pictures, indicated the tremendous stride of the industry.

Then and there this special theatre building and equipment section was planned—to which we have added a complete buyers' guide—so that exhibitors everywhere and theatres large and small may know all the details of this upward and forward building and equipment program and know just where and how to fill their own needs.

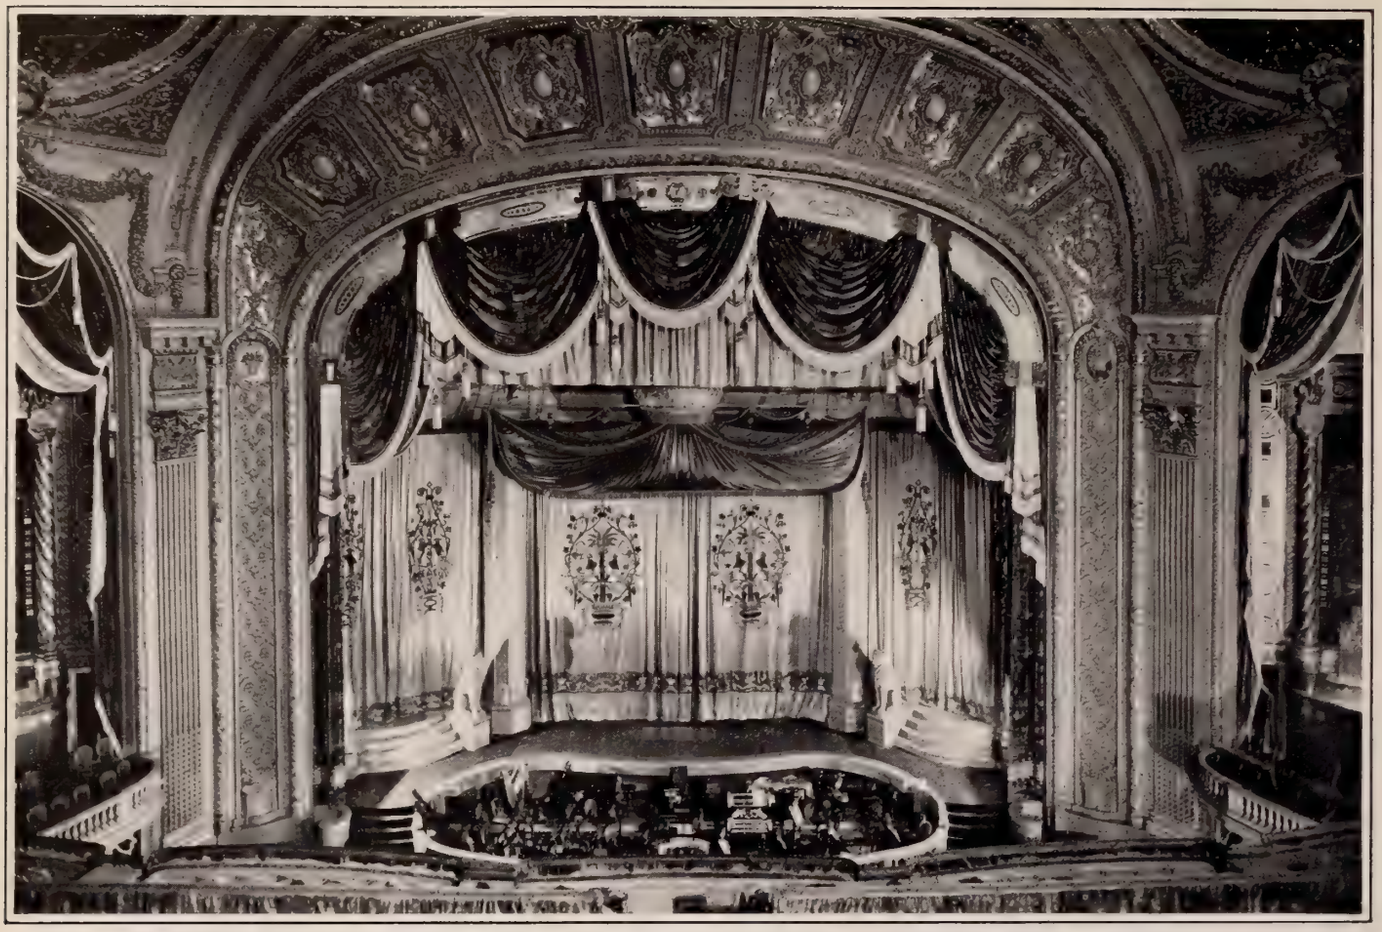
The Theatre of To-day

by E. C. A. Bullock

of C. W. and George L. Rapp
Architects

WE are living in a truly remarkable age in theatre building. In little more than a decade we have progressed from the store-front show to the veritable palace, until today more than twenty percent of our motion picture theatres may be classed as modern in every respect.



Today there seems to be no limit to what builders of theatres demand, and there seems to be no limit as to what can be done.

The modern theatre is the result of education both on the part of the exhibitor and the patron. The exhibitor has learned that with a large seating capacity it is possible to give programs of variety, appeal and costliness that could not even be dreamed of in a small house. The advent of the modern theatre saw patrons flocking to them with spirited enthusiasm thus showing their appreciation of quality entertainment amid most inviting surroundings.

Psychology Most Important

The psychology of the theatregoer is the most important consideration that confronts the exhibitor, according to Mr. Barney Balaban of Balaban & Katz, the eminent Chicago showmen.

Mr. Balaban and all other successful theatre men agree that the people of today go to the theatre to live an hour or two in the land of romance. And so it is that the sophisticated playgoer must virtually be taken up on a magic carpet and be set down suddenly in a celestial city of gorgeous stage settings, luxurious drapes, and enchanting music. The atmosphere of a king's palace must prevail to stimulate the imagination of all those who come within its doors.

People want and demand a clear, direct view of the stage. This requires the elimination of all pillars and columns, substituting therefor the elliptical shape construction.

It has also been learned that the purchaser of the cheapest ticket dislikes the feeling that he is isolated from the rest of the auditorium. And so there have been introduced broad and gradually ascending staircases leading up from lofty and impressive lobbies, making the way to the upper levels of the auditorium attractive and inviting.

Intimate Contact Essential

The modern theatre architect has designed and arranged the entrances and auditoriums in such a manner as to give the patrons, no matter in what section of the house they may be seated, a feeling of intimate contact with the stage and all parts of the auditorium. Investigation has proved to him that theatregoers patronizing the balconies and galleries with their entrances apart from the main entrance, were often made to feel that they were entirely segregated from the rest of the audience. In consequence when the main floor and boxes were filled large sections of the balconies and the gallery remained unoccupied, which resulted in a huge and unnecessary loss to the proprietors.

How well the aversion of patrons to the upper sections was overcome is well illustrated in the case of the Chicago and Tivoli theatres, Chicago, whose orchestra floors and balconies are equally patronized day and evening. On entering either one of these structures patrons find themselves in a lofty, imposing and beautifully decorated lobby running across the front and leading into three promenade foyers, which face it, one above the other, and which extend around the sides of the auditorium, giving the main or orchestra floors a foreign U-shape plan. The promenade foyers, which are wide and spacious, luxuriously furnished and their walls hung with works of art, are reached from and in full view of the lobby by means of a series of wide, gradually ascending staircases which are flanked on both sides by imposing columns.

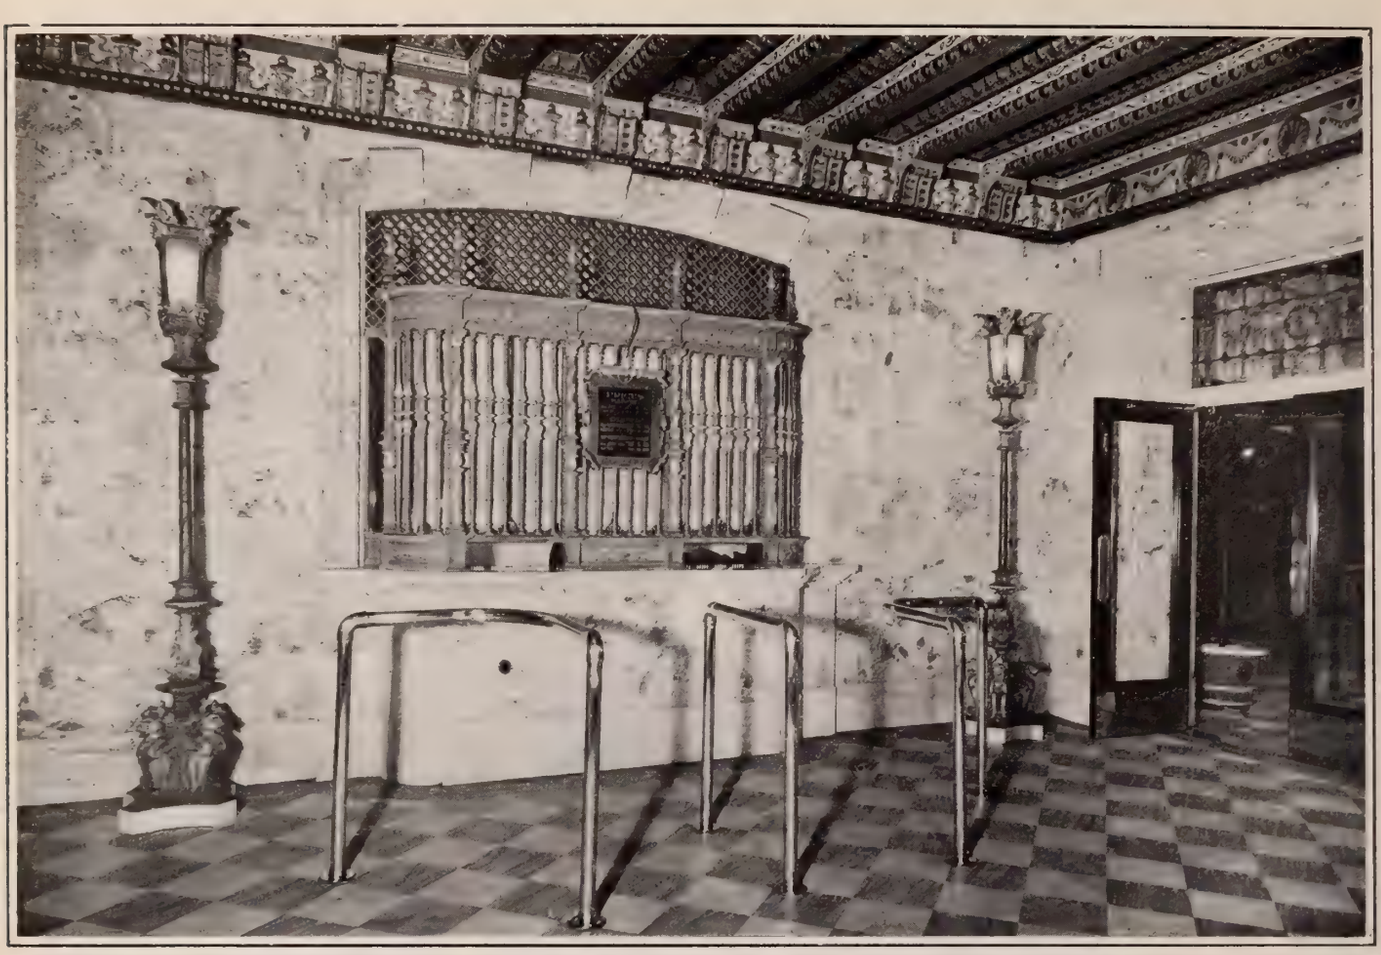
Upon entering the auditorium from the various upper foyers one finds himself emerging into a spacious balcony descending toward and nearly reaching the stage in a gradual and low sweeping curve, so that the patron often finds it difficult to realize that he is not on the main floor. A remarkable feature of the former is that this effect has been produced in spite of the fact that its lobby covers a ground area of only 60 by 80 feet, and the auditorium an area of only 160 by 170 feet, an accomplishment that is regarded as something of an engineering feat.

One Price Houses

These architectural features have been a genuine aid in bringing about one-priced houses, a condition that is highly desirable.

Theatre rentals in some of the leading cities of the country are so enormous that the exhibitor must use every effort to make every seat a revenue producer. Leases are not uncommon which require the exhibitor to get at last $100.00 per year out of each seat to take care of the rental alone. Such an arrangement makes it necessary that each seat be filled as many as 200 times per year, depending, of course, on the admission price.

The principal difference between legitimate and motion picture theatres is in regard to size. Our vaudeville houses, the largest of the legitimate type, have only between 2,500 and 2,800 seats. Consequently the 5,000-seat motion picture theatre loses considerable of the intimacy of the speaking stage. However, architects have done much to break down the barrier of the stage by being able to make the stage appear big and the auditorium small.



During the last few years we have seen the development of the tie-up between the theatre and office building. This has been necessary to get the proper returns on real estate values.

An Impressionable Entrance

First impressions must be stressed through entrance and lobby appeal. At the very outset the patron's spirit of adventure must be catered to and his feeling of magnetism excited.

Giving first consideration to the entrance of a theatre, an attractive theatrical appearance should be sought. The exterior design with graceful curves predominating, although not overdone, provides a pleasing contrast to the cold, straight, and commercial lines of the usual surrounding buildings. The entrance above and below the canopy, if one, should be made up of large and broad unobstructed openings providing generous glimpses of the interior in a most alluring sort of manner. A flood of direct, indirect or outline lighting, may blaze the trail to the theatre though many blocks away. The theatre entrance must be compelling, it must be inviting, and it must overshadow everything in its immediate neighborhood. Literally it must actually be a magnet and pull pedestrians and vehicles toward it.

Electric signs should be designed at the same time as the theatre facade, thus avoiding what has occurred in so many instances, i. e., a beautiful terra cotta front or stone exterior entirely covered by electric signs. If it is necessary for the sake of advertising to cover the front of the building with a superabundance of signs to meet like competition, the entrance should be so designed so that it provides a simple background for the signs and not be a thing of beauty in itself. Sign makers, owners, and architects should co-operate more closely to this end.

While open treatment in the matter of entrances predominates, we often confront the niche type of entrance made necessary by commercial and office-building requirements. A good example of this is the Rialto Square Theatre at Joliet, Ill., now under construction, which has in place of the usual commodious lobby a recess which has been transformed into a veritable miniature stage, a thing of great beauty and a creation which will be of immense drawing power.

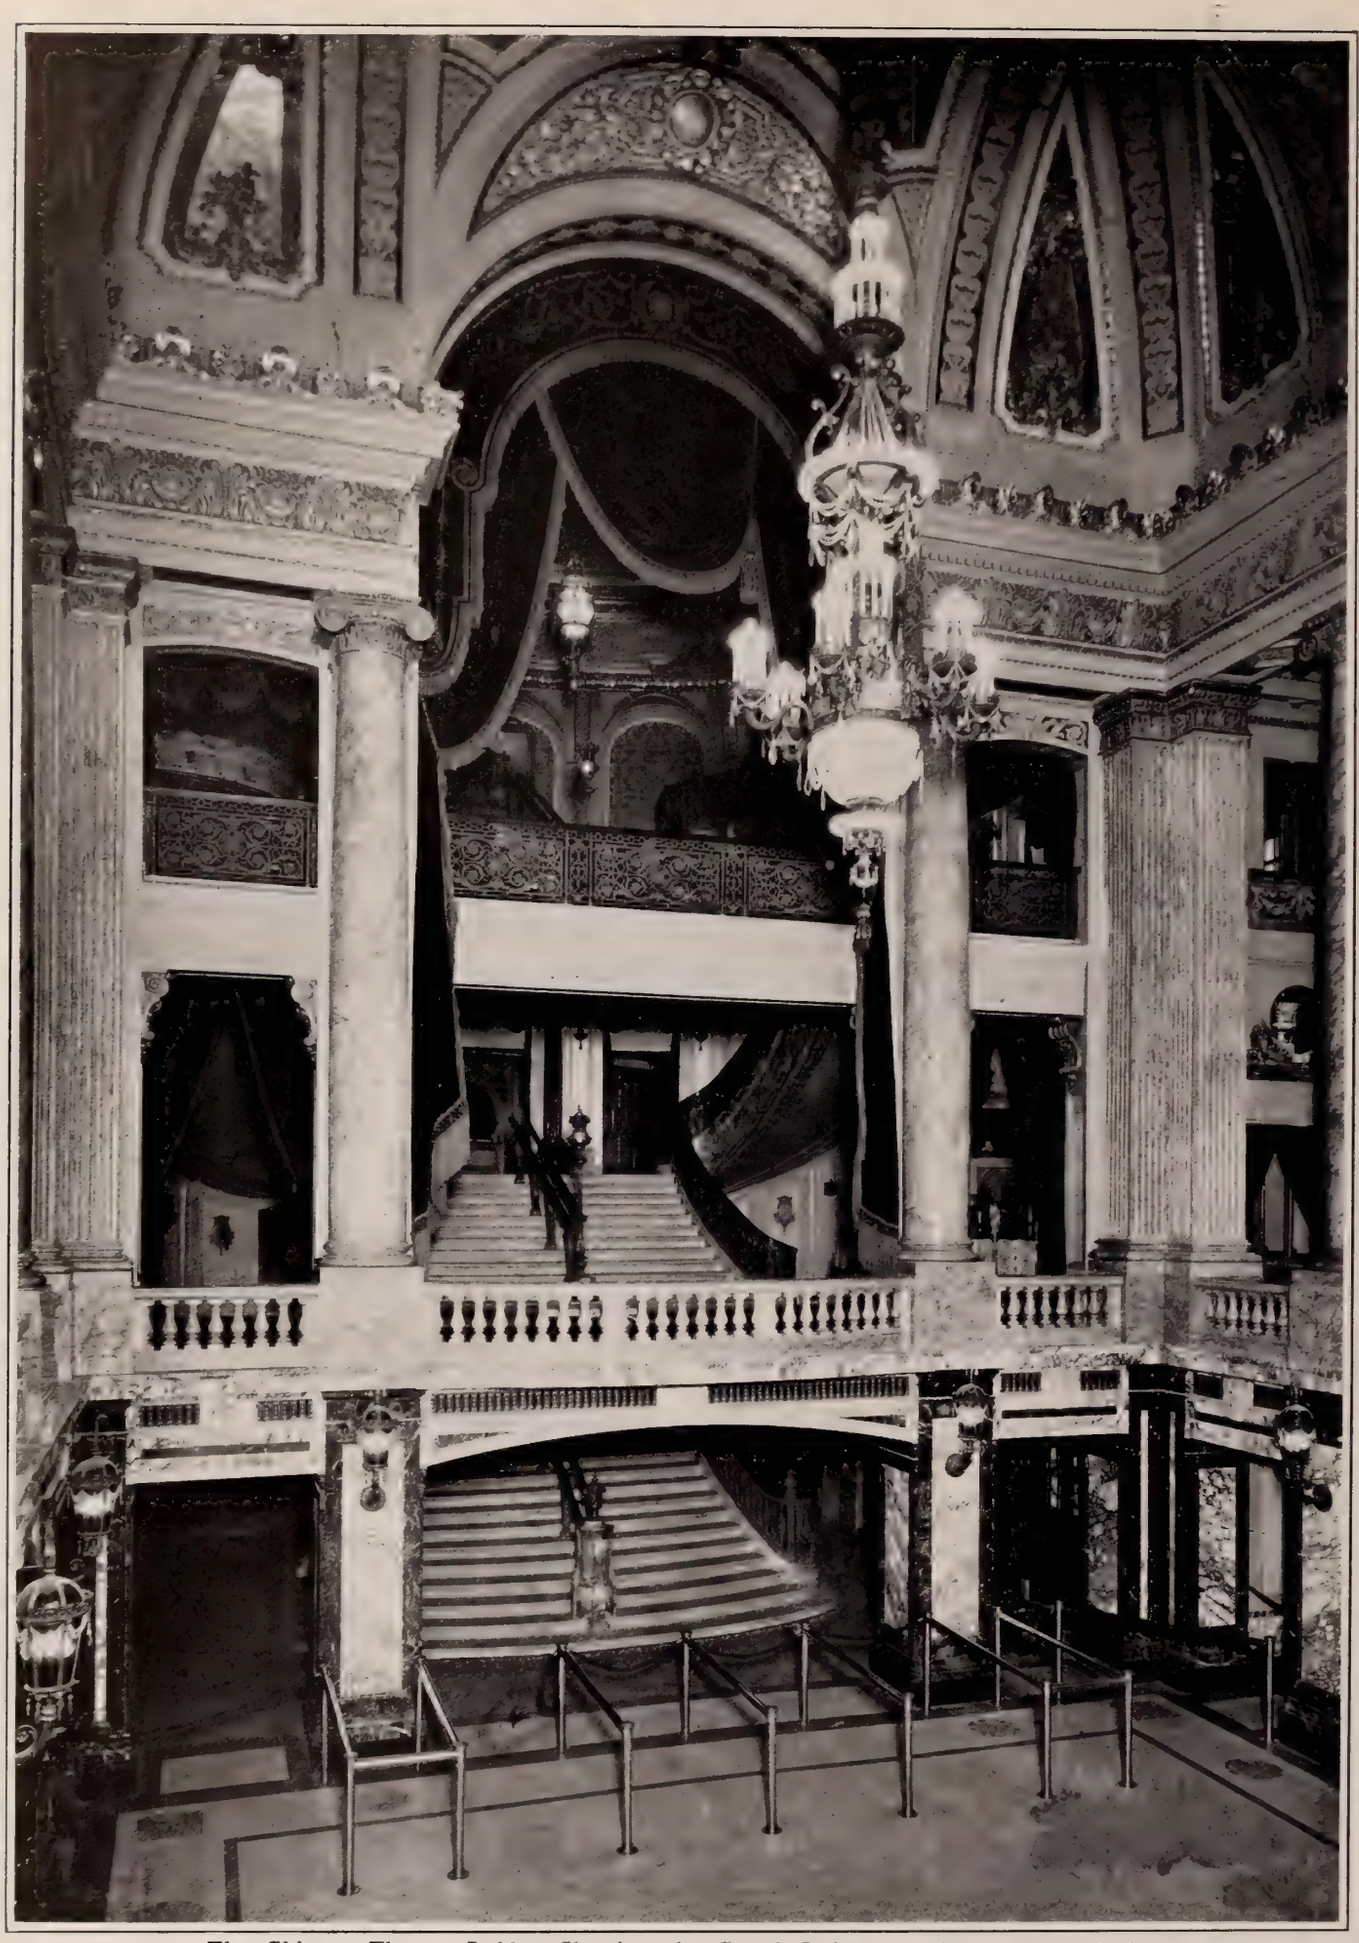
This is the day of the unusual in theatre design and the new Paramount Theatre and 36-story office building on Times Square, New York, will contain several innovations. The main entrance on Broadway will give into a grand lobby 200 feet long and 47 feet wide, and rising five stories. Finished in imported marbles and bronze, the lobby will be similar in many ways to the foyer of the Paris Opera. The magnificent building will be surmounted by a tower six stories high and the largest office building clock in New York will face Broadway from this tower. The clock will be three stories high and with chimes imported from Europe. The tremendous drawing power of these features to the entrance of the Paramount Theatre is obvious.

The Box Office

It is generally agreed that the box office should be placed in the middle of the entrance as near the street as is possible. Not under any circumstances should it be necessary to pass through doors or by other obstructions before a ticket may be purchased.

Making the Lobby Appeal



Equally important to the correctness of the entrance is the design of the lobby.

In reality the lobby must be a place of genuine interest, a place where the waiting throngs may be transformed from the usual pushing, complaining mob into one of a joyous mood.

The walls and surfaces of the lobby should be as open in treatment as possible, permitting the theatregoer to get one vista after another which will react with a decided spirit of adventure and a desire to gain admittance to the other parts of the house. In other words, the lobby should be so designed and so equipped that the fascination resulting from it will keep the patron's mind off of the fact that he is waiting.

The better theatres have done much toward making the lobby appeal. Rare paintings, impressive statuary, costly rugs and beautiful tapestries, displayed therein have a marked effect on the waiting patron. A feature of both the Chicago and Tivoli theatres, Chicago, is the rich gold grand piano situated on the mezzanine promenade. The musicians in charge render light, airy, selections which makes the waiting minutes fly by quickly.

Indeed the most striking feature of the Uptown Theatre, Chicago, is the block long lobby, running straight through from Lawrence Avenue to Magnolia Avenue, furnishing a promenade of 290 feet. It makes one of the most imposing theatre lobbies in the world, certainly by far the largest in Chicago.

The Small Theatre

Regardless of reports to the contrary the architectural principles exemplified in such large houses as the new Ambassador in St. Louis, the Capital in St. Paul, and Shea's new Buffalo in Buffalo, are just as applicable to smaller and less pretentious theatres.

One of the best examples of this theory is the Al Ringling Memorial Theatre at Baraboo, Wis., built for a man who thoroughly appreciated all forms of art. It is an artistic gem in every particular, with a seating capacity of 1,200. The little theatre of Versailles was taken as a model, and every possibility of design and decoration was utilized. An innovation in this small house was the introduction of miniature stages on each side of the main stage, in place of boxes, to be used during various acts of a performance.

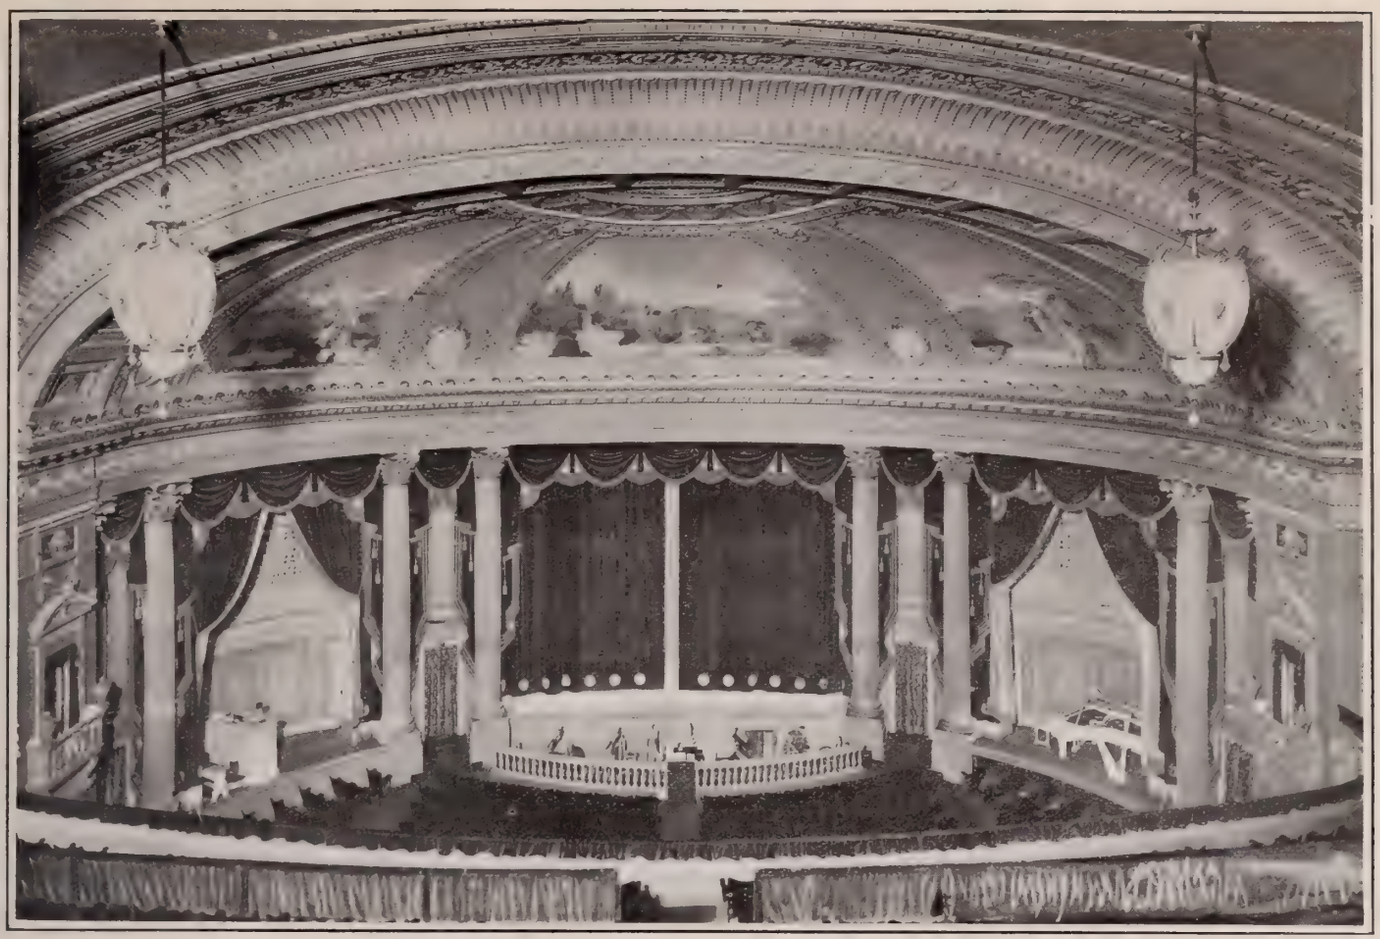
Almost any theatre, regardless of size, will permit the use of a fountain in the foyer, and there is nothing more pleasing artistically.

Structural and Engineering Problems

The theatre of today has presented many gigantic problems to the structural engineer, who believes that the motion picture itself is largely responsible for the development of the theatre, with the consequence that everything in conjunction with it had to develop.

Nowadays it is necessary to carry immense loads on long spans. Formerly the maximum limitation of a balcony cantilever was 20 feet. Now builders of theatres think nothing of 30 to 40 feet.

The span of the auditorium of the Chicago Theatre, Chicago, is 170 feet from wall to wall. A one-piece girder used in the balcony of this theatre weighed 68 tons, and because of its immense proportions had to be unloaded in Chicago by a wrecking crane.



Structural design must follow architectural design. Supports must be concealed. Reinforced concrete adapts itself better than structural steel especially in the case of mezzanine balconies. The resulting thinner construction makes it much easier to meet architectural requirements.

Structural features have followed the development of the houses. The old idea of two or three separate balconies in stair-step fashion has been supplanted by one main balcony. Also the balcony, roof, stage and lobby framework is now independent of the building, that is they are self-sustaining without the main walls.

The theatre and theatre-office buildings now in vogue presented additional structural problems in carrying the immense skyscrapers over the huge auditoriums.

In the Balaban & Katz Theatre in the new Masonic Temple, Chicago, now under construction, trusses weighing 200 tons, composed of individual pieces weighing up to 60 tons, are necessary to carry the many floors and lodge halls over the theatre.

The foundation loads of such structures must be carried to rock. In some cities this requires only going to a basement level of 65 feet, while in others it is necessary to go as deep as 150 feet.

The height of combination theatre-office buildings, and all other skyscrapers for that matter, is due to the development of structural steel, which was perfected less than 50 years ago and which was first used in Chicago. Reinforced concrete has only been in use to any great extent in theatre construction about 15 years. It is more flexible than structural steel and can be used in many places to better advantage.

Test Loads

An interesting phase of structural engineering is the testing of the individual cantilevers in balconies for possible deflection. The live or superimposed load is reckoned at 100 pounds per square foot. However, the arrangement and placing of seats will produce a load of only 35 pounds per square foot. The only place where this weight is greater is in the aisles where it will not exceed 75 pounds and it is but momentary.

Stage of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Cleveland
C. W. & Geo. L. Rapp, Architects

The test load figures 750 pounds per square foot. This is accomplished by placing sacks of cement, 14 high, in a concentrated space 7 feet wide, from an outer point to the support. For example, Keith's E. 105th Street Theatre in Cleveland underwent such a balcony test to the amount of 117,000 pounds.

Safety and Precaution

Every precaution—every safeguard. That is the tendency of the day. Safety is assured from fire and other dangers. The testing and inspection of materials and installation is today a science in itself.

Effective Lighting

A high intensity of lighting should prevail underneath the canopy and in the lobby, with a gradual lessening through the foyers and promenade tending to almost darkness as the auditorium is reached.

The progress in electric sign manufacture has been marked, until today one is almost amazed at the proportions of this phase of theatre lighting. The new Orpheum Theatre sign on the Metropolitan office building, Chicago, now under construction, will burn more current by 50 percent than the entire 22-story office building.

The signs on the new Uptown Theatre, Chicago, carry the largest connected load of any theatre in the country. They are handled by two 500-kilowatt water-cooled transformers. On the Broadway frontage alone the combined load is more than the total of three of Chicago's leading legitimate houses, the Harris, Selwyn and Woods. A 1,500 ampere sign cabinet takes care of the canopy and the outline lighting with remote switches, which permit operation from a distance and with the utmost safety.

The main principle in lighting effects is to be able to make the stage appear as part of the auditorium. In reality this is simply introducing stage lighting effects in the auditorium and making it a part of the stage setting in so far as possible. This creates that intimate feeling that is so necessary.

An Attractive atmosphere is Created by the Ladies' Room in the B. F. Keith Theatre, Cleveland
C. W. & Geo. L. Rapp, Architects

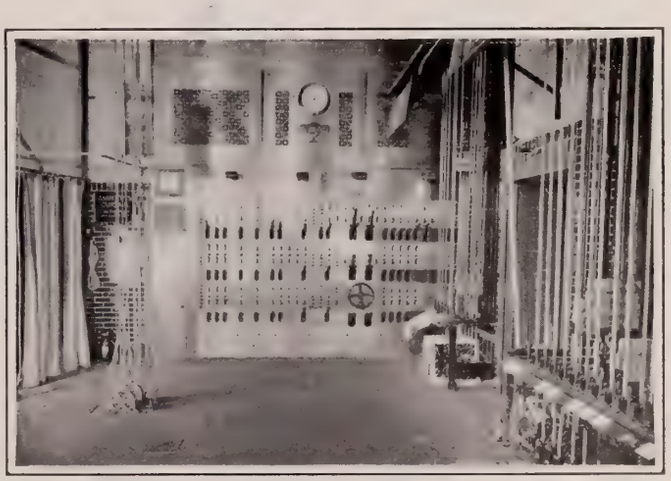
An abundance of light should be on the organ niches and in the proscenium openings. Auditorium and stage lighting should be cove lighting and on dimmers. Dimmers enable one to bring the light on slowly and artistically. Nearly all of the newer theatres have concealed light in their auditoriums in three colors. Red, green and blue, the three primary colors, can produce any color in the spectrum, including white. However, 90 per cent of the houses have red, amber, and blue. Very few have white only. An innovation in the Balaban & Katz Theatre in the new Masonic Temple, Chicago, will be the ivory electrical fixtures which are said to contribute a fourth color with magnificent effect.

The magic of a Mediterranean sky—the peaceful exhilaration of an Italian garden under soft moonlight glow—stars that twinkle and fade behind fleecy, languishing clouds, all of these effects are possible when the operator knows colors and the use of primary and complimentary tints.

The plan of diffused and concealed lighting carried out adds tremendously to the architecture, with the result that the color tones adopted are restful ones and take strength from the lighting system.

The switchboard with remote control has the dimmers and switch lever together for easy control both from the safety and utility standpoint.

The well equipped booth has three projection machines, two dissolvers, and two or four spotlights. Energy should come from duplicate sources for emergency protection.



It is highly important that the lighting phase be taken into consideration at the time the decorating is done, so that the colors will not be neutralized.

Nowadays the musical conductor is the director of the show. He is the one that operates the buzzer, and the stage manager and all others get their cues from him. His music is synchronized and ends simultaneously with the picture or feature entertainment.

An innovation is the orchestra lift which brings the orchestra to the stage or auditorium levels. It is electrically controlled by the organist. It can also be used as a part of the stage. The reason given for elevating the orchestra is in response to a criticism that the tones are somewhat muffled in the pit, which is particularly noticeable in the back parts of the house.

Usher Signal System

In theatres of more than 2,500 capacity an usher enunciator system is necessary if each seat is to work continuously. Such a system, relayed through a captain on every level to the doorman, almost perfectly times the ratio of patrons leaving and those being admitted. Today it is a question of accommodating the people when they want to come.

Ventilation

Every exhibitor must admit that each patron is entitled to body comfort. This brings us to the matter of proper ventilation.

There are two systems of ventilation—upward and overhead. One is about as efficient as the other. The only argument against the former is that some claim that it produces a gale on the ankle.

While many city ordinances demand only an adequate supply of air, others require 25 feet of air per person per minute. In order to provide this most theatres have three main supply fans situated on the orchestra floor, in the balcony, and in the lobby, with exhaust fans on the main floor, and in the toilets, dressing rooms, and picture booth.

The air must be washed, otherwise it would be necessary to redecorate every year.

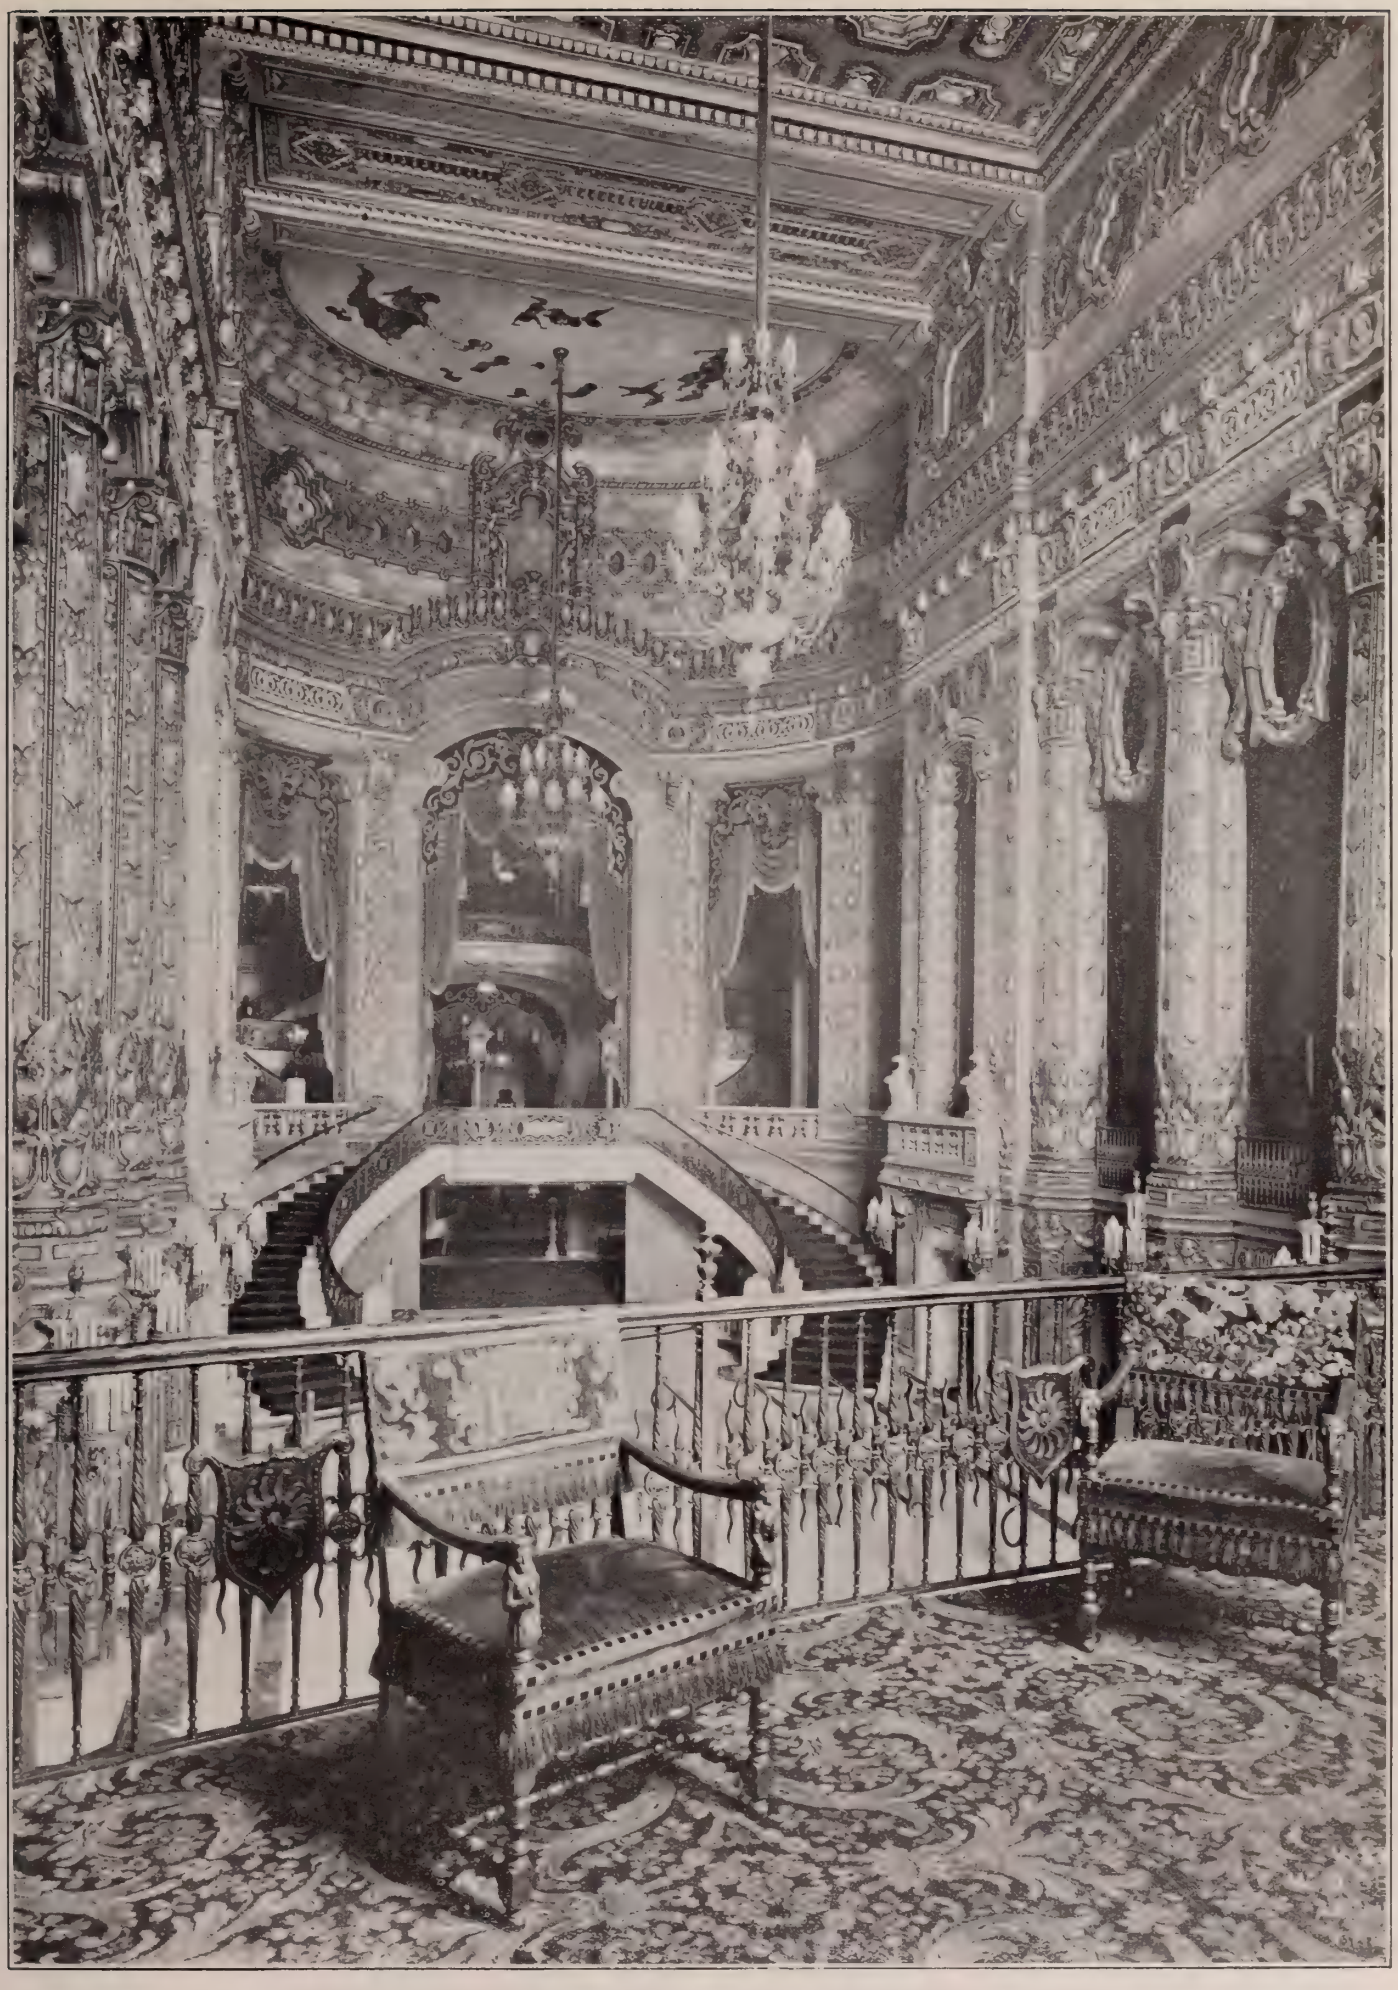
The ice plant in a 4,000-seat house requires 250 to 350 tons of refrigeration every 24 hours. This is accomplished by placing cooling coils in the air washer, the currents passing through the fan out into the theatre. The use of ice for cooling would make the air damp and unhealthy even though it were cool. The humidity content, however, must be regulated properly to avoid clammy, wet, atmosphere.

Refrigeration requires 1½ gallons of water per minute per fan. Several theatres throughout the United States have erected cooling towers to save water with good success.

Only 75 percent of the air should be taken out in order to maintain pressure in the house all of the time. This rush of cool air through the lobby during the summer months is a splendid advertisement for prospective patrons among the passersby. The air should be varied as the house fills. This, however, is a matter that depends on weather, dress and warmth of bodies. Once a theatre is overheated it takes 15 to 30 minutes to get it back to the desired temperature. Remote control on the fan motors make it possible to regulate temperature very quickly. A theatre heats fast and cools slowly.

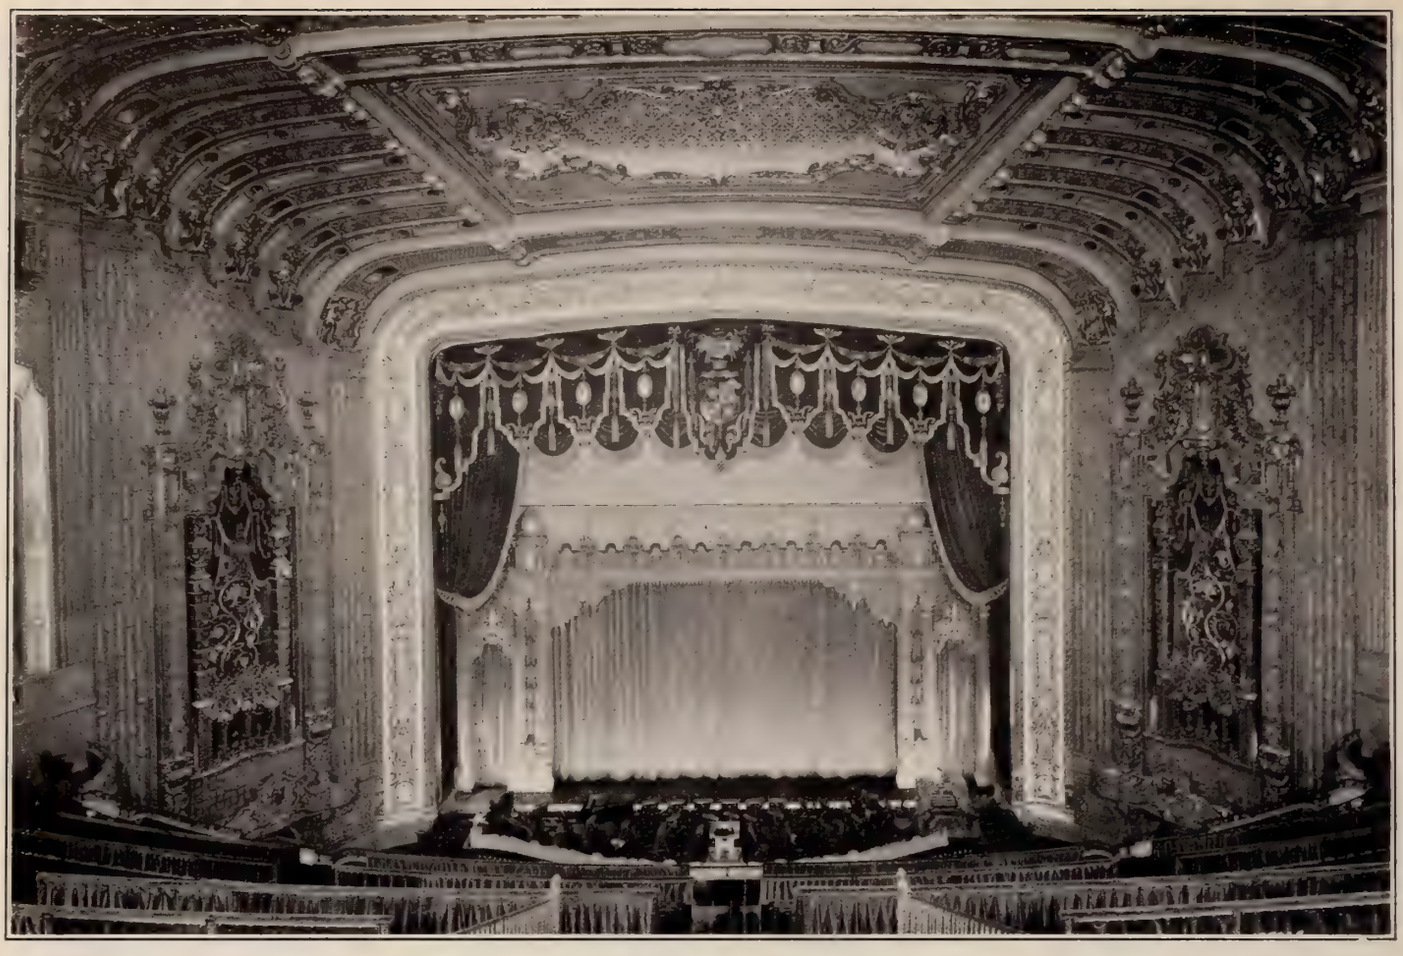
Something New Always

The public is always looking for innovations, and they are not being disappointed.



The outstanding novelty in the new Paramount Theatre, New York, and one which should give even the most sophisticated theatregoer a thrill, will be a promenade circling the upper part of the theatre which will enable one to stroll about and look down directly onto the big audience. The ceiling promenade, the only one of its kind in America, will be reached by high-speed elevators.

Other startling features of this motion picture palace include a stage with enormous water tanks, which will make possible the staging of ice ballets and other scenic effects in connection with the exhibition of pictures; special arrangements for the handling of two orchestras, and a completely equipped private theatre with a full stage and all modern scenic appliances which will enable the management to give adequate rehearsals to their performances before presentation to the public.



Then too, a radio broadcasting station, which will put the theatre's musical programs on the air; a motion picture Hall of Fame containing portraits and biographical material of the more notable figures in the history of the cinema; and a trophy room possessing exhibits marking the more outstanding events in the development of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., are typical of the radical advance being made in theatre design.

The new Uptown in Chicago boasts of cosmetic and smoking rooms for the ladies, a playroom and nursery for the children, a hospital room, a radio broadcasting and receiving room, and a public service room, each with proper attendants. It also has an elevating orchestra platform, operating in sections as desired; a stage nearly a block wide and deep enough to present a production with 300 performers; dressing rooms to accommodate several hundred actors and musicians, and a stage electrical control which makes possible stage miracles hitherto believed impossible.

What the future holds in the way of theatre design and special features is highly interesting in view of the many noteworthy accomplishments of present day building and architectural design.

Proper Tools for Exhibitors

By HAROLD B. FRANKLIN

EXPERIENCE has clearly shown that there is only one type of equipment that ought to be used in a motion picture theatre, and that is the very best for the very good reason that in the long run it is cheapest. This applies to every conceivable type of equipment from the electric sign in front, to the screen on the back wall.

The only way a theatre can be run efficiently is when the exhibitor has the proper tools. There is no excuse for poor projection in any kind of theatre that caters to the public, whether it is a de luxe house located in the heart of the city or a motion picture house in a small community. The question of obsolescence is forgotten when the equipment employed in a theatre is of the very best.

Harold B. Franklin, Director, Theatre Department, Famous Players Corp.

Statistics show clearly that it is much cheaper to operate a theatre with equipment that is of the very best than it is by geting along with makeshifts. For example, a good chair will stand the wear and tear that a cheaper one won't. The same applies to projection machines and other mechanical appliances that are given hard usage. In buying an organ one should always strive to get the very best. The upkeep of a poor instrument would buy a new instrument several times over in a period of ten years. A carpet can be purchased at $3.00 per yard and also at $6.00 per yard, but the far sighted exhibitor is the one who selects the carpet that costs $6.00.

In the early days of motion picture exhibition when many articles that were used in the operation of the theatre were in the experimental stage, there was some justification for "shopping," but these days, when good standard equipment has stood the test of time, no exhibitor of experience need experiment, because the great majority of articles that are used in a motion picture theatre have been standardized and have stood the test of time and in the great majority of instances are manufactured by companies who are reliable and who stand behind the merchandise they sell.

Therefore, operators of theatres should guide themselves as to how good a certain piece of equipment is rather than how cheap it can be bought. It is only with such a viewpoint that an exhibitor can hope to keep abreast of the times and can meet competition successfully.

Advances and Improvements in Equipment

IT is a wise procedure for every exhibitor to delay, periodically, his daily pursuit of problems of bookings, policies and other numerous worries besetting a showman, in order to review the world of theatre equipment. Surprising advances are continuously being made in various types of theatre equipment both through inventions and improved apparatus. Often these improvements are of such important natures as to materially better the very presentation of the picture, or else have a decided influence on seasonal or yearly box office receipts.

Perhaps the feature of a large portion of all this better equipment that appeals most strongly to exhibitors lies in its economy of operation. Much apparatus can be purchased to-day that actually affects a saving equal to its own cost over a relative short period of time—thereafter paying a handsome dividend.

Modern Theatre Equipment has more than kept pace with progress in this industry. The appeal that to-days' theatres make to the public is due largely to the appeal of their unusual physical characteristics—which in turn, are made possible, in no small part, to improved methods and apparatus.

Projection, air conditioning, lighting, appointments, stage effects, etc., all have undergone revolutionary changes during the past few years. Only the lesser progressive exhibitors have failed to note, partially at least, these improvements and profited thereby.

Keeping theatres up-to-date in equipment is to-day no haphazard task to be done at belated periods; exhibitors will find it profitable from more than one angle to devote serious attention to this important phase of showmanship.

Would a 50% decrease in current costs interest you?

TAKE your annual cost for current, reduce it 50% or perhaps 75%—and you then have the amount of money you could save by changing to Incandescent Lamp Projection. The amount will likely be between $500 and $1,000. Surely that is a worthwhile saving.

And Incandescent Lamp Projection has many other advantages. It improves the appearance of pictures, simplifies projectionists' work and makes operating conditions healthy. The light is steady, free from glare, and easy on the eyes of the audience.

Edison MAZDA Lamps for motion picture projection are made to the highest standards of quality. Each lamp is thoroughly tested before it leaves the factory and is guaranteed to give satisfactory results when properly operated.

Light Glorifies Your Theatre Ballunas Glorify Light

NOT a single exhibitor but knows that effective lighting individualizes his theatre and that the secret of successful lighting lies in its correct application. The proper use of light is now available to all those who give this important phase of showmanship serious attention. Modern lighting equipment has made this possible.

Balluna Lamps, with their many special features of design, are essential to every theatre that requires the best in lighting effects. Balluna Lamps are built sturdily; counter weights and ball bearings give complete flexibility of operation. Also, special provisions are made in their construction, eliminating all vibration of the spot.

DEBRIE

"P-A-R-V-O"

1. Revolution and Footage Indicators (Patented). This device adds up when the handle is turned forward and subtracts when it is turned back. It shows number of handle turns and exact footage. Either indicator can be set back to zero at any time.
2. Synchronized Focusing and Diaphragm Bars. A new method of scaling the focusing and diaphragm bars, and a new shape in the focusing rod insure instantly an absolute sharpness in focusing which cannot be secured by any other camera.

The TransVerteR
PRODUCES BETTER PICTURES

Because it eliminates the flicker and fluctuation by maintaining proper current and light values.

It produces superior light from four to five times the candle power of an alternating current arc of the same amperage.

Especially important with Mirror Arc Projection.

Over 2,000 Transverters now in use.

Send for our special literature, explaining its features on improving projection and lowering costs.

LIGHT THE WAY WITH

"AISLELITES"

INSURES AGAINST ACCIDENT. If your aisles are properly lighted by "Aislelites" you eliminate almost entirely the possibility of any of your patrons stumbling and injuring themselves.

PLEASES PATRONS. Patrons of your theatre are pleased when they are able to see where they are stepping, and where there is an empty seat, without groping around in the dark as in a theatre where no "Aislelites" are being used.

NO FLASHLIGHTS NEEDED. "Aislelites" make it unnecessary for ushers to carry flashlights to light the way. This tends to make the operation of your theatre more economical. No batteries or bulbs to buy.

QUICK EXITS GUARANTEED. Whenever it is necessary for a theatre to be emptied rapidly, there is very little confusion, and very little danger of confusion, due to the fact that every person can see the way out.

Your Screen Is Worth No More Today Than Its Value One Year From Now

The screen for your theatre is the screen that wears and withstands more than ordinary abuse—for years. That is DA-LITE.

DA-LITE

Heavy coatings, extra durability in their "backings" give DA-LITE this extra long life.

DA-LITE

A DA-LITE Screen is one of the greatest assets you can install in your theatre. Yet, in proportion to other equipment values its cost is infinitesimal. Less than 1% of your total investment.

DA-LITE

The true value of any screen is recorded in your box office. DA-LITE screens have proven themselves for others. A DA-LITE will prove its value to you.

DA-LITE

DA-LITE Screens vary from Pale Gold to Crystal White. There is a DA-LITE for every size and shape of theatre.

DA-LITE

May we send the book of DA-LITE Screen Samples to you? There is no cost—no obligations, of course. Just send us your name.

An Amazing Difference!

Pictures that on the average screen are dull, shadowy and tiresome, snap out clear, lively and bright on a Super-Lite Screen.

That is because practically all the light that falls on the silvery surface of a Super-Lite Screen is reflected.

Super-Lite Screens give the equivalent of higher intensity light sources at a fraction of their cost. They are made from fine, sturdy material and last for years.

The Greatest Attraction in the Picture Industry

Priscilla Dean visits Wurlitzer Factory, N. Tonawanda, N. Y., and is shown how the Mighty Wurlitzer Organ is built.

WHEN Priscilla Dean visited the Wurlitzer factory recently, she marveled at the skill of the artisans, the myriad infinitesimal parts, and the precision of adjustment required to assemble a Wurlitzer organ. It was a revelation to observe the internal mechanism of the majestic instrument which animated the thrilling stunts in Miss Dean's pictures; which added reality to the plunging herds of cattle rustlers, and endowed the love scenes with emotion.

And not only Miss Dean, but producers, exhibitors, and directors everywhere are amazed at the marvelous effects, and absolute dependability of the Wurlitzer Organ—a fact which is attested by the predominance of Wurlitzer Organs not only in the leading theatres, but in theatres of all sizes, for each of which there is a special type Wurlitzer organ.

A New Deal Will Be Declared in this Business on February 1st!

It's time we all stopped thinking of motion picture exhibiting as a seasonable business.

Public demand for entertainment goes on all year round. Modern equipment keeps theatres comfortable all year round. You modern showmen can keep seats filled all year round—PROVIDED YOU GET BIG PICTURES.

There's no reason in the world why your revenues can't be as big, or bigger, in April as they are in November—PROVIDED YOU GET BIG PICTURES.

PARAMOUNT INTENDS TO SEE THAT YOU GET BIG PICTURES ALL YEAR ROUND.

Paramount is going to give you, this spring, BIGGER PICTURES THAN YOU EVER HAD IN THE FALL from Paramount or any other company in the world!

Paramount has packed into these 30 new Spring pictures more famous stars, more great directors, more celebrated books and plays, more sensational punches and spectacular effects than were ever packed into a Fall group before.

There'll be no Spring in 1926 as you've known it in the past. Paramount is declaring a new deal in this business on February 1st—AND EVERY SINGLE EXHIBITOR CAN DRAW A WINNING HAND!

Watch for further details.

Leatrice Joy in Her Greatest Role!

That is saying a lot, but that's just what we mean.
It's different—it's intensely emotional—it's compelling in its magnetism.

A powerful melodrama which leads from the sinister haunts of San Francisco underworld to the exotic beauty of an uncharted island in the tropics, here is a pictu packed from start to finish with stirring situations of sure-fire appeal, with Leatrice Joy t central figure around whom eddies a whirlpool of intrigue and thrilling action.

ROMANCE! A love theme as haunting as a melody heard in a dream.
DRAMA! It fairly teems with gripping plots and startling situations.
ACTION! It moves swiftly and inevitably to a smashing climax.
STAR: Lovely Leatrice is simply superb in a magnificent role.

A MILLION DOLLARS FOR A THRILL!

That's the spirit of the theatre-going public. And that's why real Melodrama gets the money. Because it's the red corpuscles in the arteries of the dramatic complex, and its appeal is universal. Here is a Melodrama packed with hair-raising action, big climaxes and startling situations. It is a powerful treatment of one of the most widely discussed problems of the present day—crime and the reformation of criminals. It portrays the conflict of primal human passions with the inexorable methods of law enforcement and the system that decrees: "Once a criminal always a criminal."

It was interesting to find at the four o'clock showing Monday a filled theatre, with aisles, foyers, lobby and sidewalks packed. Sunday the theatre was surrounded by throngs, with lines leading a full block away in each direction. It is Fireproof, Convenient, and Pays You a Profit

To have your films fully protected against fire—to have the hazards of film storage fires entirely removed from your property—to have a neat, convenient cabinet in which to keep all your films—and to have this security and convenience pay you an actual profit—these are some advantages you get from installing an American Film-Safe.

The American Film-Safe

The American Film-Safe, the only receptacle of its kind listed as standard and labelled by the Underwriter's Laboratories, is a neat, compact, fire proof filing cabinet for films.

It is made of full cold rolled sheet steel with all joints tenoned and pinned together and is practically indestructible.

The safe is of unit construction and may be added to or re-arranged at will. It takes up little space and can be moved about easily.

Each film is housed in a separate fire proof compartment and is suspended on a film carriage which automatically moves forward when the door to the compartment is opened. Reels are always readily accessible for handling. Doors to compartments close and fasten automatically.

Each compartment has a bronze label holder on the door into which a card can be inserted so that films can be catalogued or indexed.

American Film-Safes absorb abnormal heat from films and maintain them at normal humidity, thereby increasing the life of the films.

Exterior surfaces are beautifully finished in baked enamel. Interior surfaces are thoroughly protected against rust. Standard colors are olive green with bronze hardware but they may be had in several other finishes.

There are two sizes. Style 1100 with five compartments for five 1,000 foot reels, designed principally for exchanges, studios, laboratories, etc., and style 1200 for five 2,000 foot reels, designed for theatre projection booths.

You may purchase an American Film-Safe on the deferred payment plan.

Insurance Rating Organizations make substantial reductions in rates wherever American Film-Safes are installed. In some states these reductions pay for a Safe in one year.

EXHIBITORS HERALD

The Independent Film Trade Paper

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK Nov. 10.—If Sam Rork's newest production, "Clothes Make The Pirate," which will be distributed by First National, does not please audiences wherever it is shown, then there is something wrong with the entire making of pictures and with audiences generally.

This, at least, is the consensus of many expert picture judges who witnessed a premiere of the big Rork production last Saturday night at Irving Lesser's Playhouse theatre at Great Neck, Long Island.

"CLOTHES Make The Pirate" is something different from anything done before in pictures, and for the making of it Rork gathered a remarkable cast, both as to names of drawing power and as to fitness for parts.

Leon Errol at Funniest

This remarkable cast is headed by Leon Errol, generally recognized as one of the funniest of all funny men on the socalled legitimate stage. Anyone witnessing Mr. Errol's work in the Rork picture is willing to believe the slang expression, "you ain't seen nothing yet." Every minute that Errol is on the screen—and that is during most of the 7,400 feet of the production—he is a laugh and not infrequently a scream. Errol's comedy is always clean and promises to stand for a long time as a criterion of something in the way of funniness that is entirely new to the screen.

In these comedy antics Mr. Errol is ably seconded by Dorothy Gish, always a clever screen comedienne, but who appears to have greatly developed.

Others in the cast, whose work add much to the value of the production, are George Marion, Tully Marshall, James Rennie and Edna Murphy.

While "Clothes Make The Pirate" is a costume comedy, whose greatest appeal is to the risibilities, there is much in the picture in the way of impressive scenic effects and remarkable photography, as well as good dramatic action brought about through the romance of a young naval officer and the niece of the piratical tailor, the romantic parts played by James Rennie and Edna Murphy.

Speaking Editorially

SAM RORK'S new picture, "Clothes Make the Pirate," is winning commendation all around. It should, for one reason because it is a distinct screen novelty, of which there are far too few. A producer who gives the screen a brand new type of subject performs a service second to none in the whole industry. Pictures are, of course, the life-blood of the business. New kinds of pictures are the prime essentials. So we say the release of a film like "Clothes Make the Pirate" deserves and should get special mention.

Dear Mr. Kane:

It affords me great pleasure to report that your production, "The New Commandment" was accorded an enthusiastic reception at the Rivoli Theatre last week. Business was quite phenomenal despite unfavorable weather and strong competition. It was the one Broadway attraction appropriate for Armistice Week, a fact that helped materially in getting such excellent returns. The big audiences were most responsive. Best wishes and congratulations.

Volume XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, November 28, 1925 No. 22

What is a Motion Picture Profit?

TELEGRAMS have been sent to Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York, protesting against the distribution merger of United Artists with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Monopoly is mentioned and it is pointed out that the very selling situation which caused them to form United Artists, namely, to get their pictues sold by themselves and not coupled with those inferior pictures pretty sure to result when many are made, is now to be repeated.

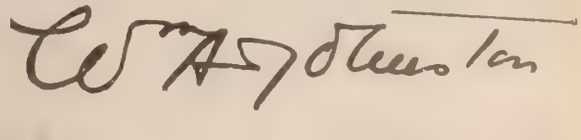
Well, let us see.

This distribution merger, as we understand it, is physical only. United Artists will do away with its exchanges and thereby save a large item of distribution expense. We believe that exhibitors themselves are opposed to the excessive duplication of exchange overhead, and will welcome this saving of middlemen cost. United Artists product will not be sold by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, any more than Famous Players now controls the selling of Harold Lloyd productions. There is every indication, in fact, that United Artists will increase its selling department. There is now a much larger program to handle.

Another thing:

Industrial situations have greatly changed since Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, D. W. Griffith and Charles Chaplin withdrew from their affiliations in order to sell their product through and by themselves. They felt at the time that the prices their pictures deserved were cut because they were used to sell other pictures. But very shortly they found their prices affected by another condition, namely, the control of cities and sections by chains of theatres. This has been a supreme issue with them for several years. In some places they had to hire halls to get their pictures shown. They have threatened right along to build theatres of their own. Maybe they wanted too high prices; maybe only those necessary to foster the high type of picture so greatly demanded by first class houses.

That subject is too involved to discuss here. But the fact remains that the issue facing United Artists right along has been the general one of producer versus theatre control. And it is also a fact, regardless of just why this merger was made, that certain theatre-controlled cities today will now give United Artists product a much better reception than before, and wholly because they don't want Loew theatres to build next door to their profitable palaces. All of which is perfectly natural.



But that's the issue today, not the tacking on of weak pictures to good ones.

One of the exhibitors I most respect is E. V. Richards of New Orleans. His firm has built and run fine theatres in a large section of the country, giving the public better service than they had before. It is a fine piece of business construction and a credit to the industry.

He said to me the other day: "You talk a good deal about the theatres making excessive profits. You feel that the producer is getting the worst of it. But don't you realize that better theatres are just as necessary as better pictures? Shall we have these better theatres built out of theatre profits or producer profits —or what profits?"

Well, this is true: but just what is a motion picture profit?

Today, and generally, it is what you can get. True of producer, true of theatre. It is what you can get, regardless of any other consideration. It is blind greed. And just as long as this blindness prevails there will be motion picture trade warfare. And a lot of hypocrisy!

AN EDITOR

An Editorial

THE Fifteenth Anniversary Dinner of Pathe News given at the Plaza Hotel, New York, last Saturday night, proved to be one of the most telling events in the industry's history.

And at the conclusion of "Flashes of the Past," a remarkable compilation of the world stirring events of the past fifteen years, a practical observer remarked: "It strikes me that we have just seen the greatest motion picture."

THE importance of such a dinner, looking at it from the standpoint of the industry as a whole, is this:

The Vice President of the United States accepted this occasion to voice what to many seems to be a paramount issue in this country, namely the reformation of the Senate with respect to certain archaic rules so that speedier and better legislation may result.

Governor Ritchie spoke as boldly upon the great issue of the sovereignty of the State. And Emanuel Cohen's carefully prepared address was one of the best treatises ever put forth on the scope and power of the motion picture.

The scholarly Frederic R. Coudert, one of the country's great corporation lawyers, presided, and at the dais were seated the largest number of notables ever present at any film function.

I AM looking at the whole affair from a publicity standpoint, gauging its importance to the industry from that very important angle.

The speeches—and in vitality and effect they ranked high—were transmitted far and wide by radio. It was worth listening to by the vast multitude; and it was worth reading about. The affair received columns of newspaper space.

All this to the good name and high standing of the film and its industry! Here was a background of dignity and earnestness and accomplishment. To the public it was made evident that the motion picture is close to the heart of the nation and its high interests, and that the power of the motion picture in turn has the understanding and respect of the nation's leaders.

This sort of publicity is immeasurable in value; it is mightily needed. Let us hope that it will continue to hold the stage against the excessive stuff about salaries and other extravagance, which costs us in taxes more than the box-office yields from the ballyhoo.

FOR real drama—which is the drama of real life, the Pathe News picture "Flashes of the Past" is assuredly one of the screen's greatest accomplishments. Here, in rapid sequence, is unfolded the vivid story of the world of yesterday—war, fire, flood, heroes, parades, tragedies, hopes, and through it all the making and unmaking and reconstruction of civilization. The great and thrilling march of world progress, seen in all its reality, through a window! Could anything be more thrilling! Can we create better than Creation itself?

Whatever is to be done with the picture, it strikes me that its commercial value is large; I can imagine that Jeff McCarthy would make millions of people pay well to see it. But, aside from that consideration, it will be a pity if people everywhere cannot see it. I should like, also, to have a great convention of exhibitors view the picture. It would give them that high respect for the news reel which the news reel deserves.

THE stage could not produce "Flashes of the Past"; books can only give a pallid shadow of it. Only motion pictures can keep the world a living drama—and that we cannot do in our studios. Only a world organization of camera men can accomplish what is assuredly the pictures' greatest, truest opportunity. It's about time we appreciated our news reels and what they do—and will continue to do for the screen.

AND in conclusion, our hats are off to the Pathe exchange organization and especially to the editor of Pathe News, Emanuel Cohen.

ABOUT pictures: We review Bill Hart's "Tumbleweeds" in this issue, and apparently it is all we hoped for and bears out all the prognostication that Bill Hart has come back with a whoop. From the Paramount fold we hear confident estimates of "Irish Luck," Meighan's new picture, "That Royle Girl," by D. W. Griffith, "A Kiss for Cinderella," in which Betty Bronson is said to go one better than "Peter Pan," Adolph Menjou's "Grand Duchess and The Waiter," and "The American Venus." A lot of enthusiasm is expressed over "A Kiss for Cinderella."

If you will look closely, you will see all the members of the Hal Roach-Pathe "Our Gang" performing on the desk of their director, Robert McGowan, thanks to the process-camera in the hands of Alvin V. Knechtel. It appears in Pathe Review No. 45.

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

Director Gus Meins introduces William McCormick, western representative of Motion Picture News, to the Buster Brown family at the Century plant, producing for Universal release.

"The Road to Yesterday" is pronounced one of De Mille's best accomplishments and a sure-fire box-office success. First National is shouting over Colleen Moore's "We Moderns" and Sam Rork's "Clothes Make the Pirate."

WITH all the good pictures, however, we cannot but feel that about the most important recent screen event is Vilma Banky, the beautiful and charming young actress brought from Austria to this country by Samuel Goldwyn. Few new players, it is true, have the fortune to be launched in so fine a picture as "The Dark Angel," but it is equally true that this accomplished performer would stand forth in pictures of less calibre.

Considering the fact that personalities are the goods we sell most over our box-office counters and also the fact that these goods, through over-use, get considerably shopworn, it would seem that concentration on new players should be about the most important move in production today. If there are any more Vilma Bankys in Europe it would pay to suspend production in some quarters and go search for them.

ARTHUR BRISBANE, writing his noted column for newspapers "for people who think," has this to say:

"The Federal Trade Commission, anxious perhaps to earn its salary, wants men owning moving pictures and also theatres to sell the theatres. The commission says they cannot own BOTH.

"That is new and doesn't seem to fit the Constitution, which allows a man to own and use property, if he doesn't injure others.

"If Messrs. Zukor and Lasky cannot show their own pictures in their own theatres, what right has the express company to stable its own horses in its own stables? Why not compel the express company to sell its stables or sell its horses? Stables are no more closely related to horses than moving pictures to theatres.

"If Zukor and Lasky can't show pictures they manufacture in theatres they build and own, how can Standard Oil exhibit and sell the gasoline it manufactures in the thousands of gasoline stations that it builds and owns?

"How can a manufacturer of shoes sell his shoes in his own stores?

"If the Trade Commission will prevent as far as possible swindling and misrepresentation, and allow legitimate business men to do their business in a business way, it will be attending to its work."

"STELLA DALLAS" is a splendid piece of picture construction. Back of it you can discern the steady, sure, sincere hand of director Henry King. The characterizations by Belle Bennett, Lois Moran and Jean Hersholt are faultless. Samuel Goldwyn, always a pioneer, always aiming at the highest, has scored with another large credit to the screen.

A FEW years ago most every issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS carried a handsome insert on the product of the American Film Company of Chicago and Santa Barbara, Samuel S. Hutchinson, President. The name, in fact, goes prominently back to the early days of the Mutual Film Corporation. Since the inserts ceased, S. S. Hutchinson has called regularly at this office and indicated always that he was in continuous touch both with the market and with studio technique. So we speak of the Hutchinson Film Corporation of Hollywood now producing for Associated Exhibitors release as a carry-on in production and not at all a comeback to it.

Mary Brian, who will always be remembered as the Wendy of "Peter Pan," escorted Peter B. Kyne, the noted author, about the Paramount West Coast studios on his recent visit there to confer with Director Irvin Willat on his "The Enchanted Hill."

Speaking Editorially

A BIG week for news! The leading story being, of course, the contemplated United Artists-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer merger, of which the details are not yet clear, but the consummation of the deal is apparently only a matter of a few days, as we go to press.

This is one of the industry's most significant developments. It has been hanging fire for a long time and now is about to become a reality.

THEN there is the Fifteenth Anniversary Dinner of Pathe News, commented upon at length elsewhere in this issue. Under the caption "big," space should also be reserved for a picture bearing that very word in its title—"The Big Parade." Looks as if this film will set a new vogue in production. "Stella Dallas," too, came into view during the current week and aroused a lot of comment.

WHICH reminds us of a very interesting statement made by Harry Rapf, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in an interview with one of our staff. He said most emphatically that the production forces of all companies on the Coast are striving as never before to put quality into pictures. New angles and specialization in treatment have their place in this movement. The word "quality" has been used a long time, and in many connections, but there can be no doubt that the industry is now fully alive to the fact that only quality pictures will do. The more so, as the quality theatre movement continues to spread throughout the country. The pictures have got to keep pace with the theatres. That's sound business sense, and an imperative necessity.

IN exhibitor organization circles, there are several items of interest. Messrs. Seider, Woodhull and Cohen appeared before the A. M. P. A. and spoke in behalf of real co-operation among all branches of the industry. Joe Seider, as Business Manager of the M. P. T. O. A., announced that his platform is, and will be, strict business and no politics. That also is sound sense. The Administrative Committee of the national organization held a series of important sessions in New York. Out in Michigan, H. M. Richey, general manager of the state body, started on a tour in which he expects to visit every theatre in the Wolverine Commonwealth. That's bringing the organization to the individual exhibitor!

OVER in England, J. D. Williams is going ahead with his plans to create a British Hollywood near London. The plans are very extensive. And J. D.'s activities are getting columns of space in the London and provincial newspapers.

JANUARY has been set aside as "National Laugh Month" by the short subjects companies and a concerted drive is already under way. This move deserves the utmost encouragement for the very good reason that the short subject is vital to the success of the theatre program; and the point should be, and no doubt will be, driven home to both the exhibitor and the public.

You can't keep these comedians from cutting up when there's a camera around! Here is Lupino Lane, flanked by Estelle Bradley and Virginia Vance, clowning between scenes of "Maid in Morocco," his first Educational-Lupino Lane comedy.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Ostrich feather garters are the latest thing, and Sally Long, ex-Follies beauty playing a vivid flapper role in "Fifth Avenue" (Producers Dist. Corp.) found them just the right touch.

NOTEWORTHY PREMIERES

NOT one but two premieres were given "Stella Dallas," Samuel Goldwyn's latest film production, in New York this week. On Monday afternoon an invitation professional matinee was given in honor of Miss Ethel Barrymore, and in the evening the formal premiere took place. A brilliant throng of Broadway stars of the first magnitude attended the professional matinee, while the roster of spectators in the evening took in most of the high spots of the social register, the stage and screen world, the press—in brief, the "Who's Who of New York."

Harry Langdon, Sennett-Pathe comedian, soon to be seen in "There He Goes," will go to any lengths for a laugh, even to playing one of these darned things.

PICTURES TO PRESSES

REVERSING the precedent of a famous publisher who became a picture producer, James Leo Meehan, son-in-law of the late Gene Stratton-Porter, and director of "The Keeper of the Bees" for F. B. O., has purchased a controlling interest in the Pasadena Morning Sun, the first issue of which is due shortly.

It is not his first venture into newspaperdom, however, as before entering motion pictures he was an editor and magazine writer. He will continue to film the Gene Stratton-Porter novels.

Anne Cornwall is Hoot Gibson's lovely leading lady in "The Indians Are Coming!" which will be his next production for Universal.

WELCOME PUBLICITY COPY

GEORGE W. HARVEY, advertising manager of Producers Distributing corporation, sends us a piece of "publicity" copy which we are glad to print without change: Just arrived. Mr. and Mrs. George W. Harvey present A first-run attraction. Released Nov. 9th, 1925. Miss . . . . . Harvey. (Title to be announced.)

The illustration depicts a bouncing baby girl on a scale, tipping the beam at seven and one-half pounds. Congratulations, George.

Kathleen Key, whose work in "The Midshipman" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) is being commended, believes in keeping in trim for her work at the studio.

This queer telephone is one of the "props" which William Desmond uses in "Strings of Steel," a Universal picture of the pioneer days in the telephone industry.

Jackie Coogan, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer juvenile star, went on a six weeks' vacation trip in the high Sierras after finishing "Old Clothes," and did every bit of his own work around the hunting lodge, as this testifies.

Lew Cody played villainous roles for so long that Director Hobart Henley took no chance with him between scenes of "His Secretary" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

Frank Lloyd, First National producer-director, with Mrs. Lloyd and daughter Alma, photographed aboard the Empress of Australia sailing for a four months' vacation in the Orient following the completion of "The Splendid Road."

WHEN LAUDER TITLED A FILM

TITLES for pictures, so vitally important at the box-office, come from a thousand and one sources. The origin of one, that of Chaplin's "A Dog's Life," has just come to light, in connection with Pathe's reissue of this subject. It seems that Harry Lauder was visiting the Chaplin studio at the time, and after seeing the quiet elegance and comfort of the place he turned to Chaplin with a twinkle in his eye and said: "It's a dog's life you're leading these days, Charlie, a dog's life!" And this chance remark inspired Charlie to make his famous comedy of that name.

CASTING BY SKETCH

AN interesting production innovation is being tried out by Cecil B. De Mille in connection with "The Volga Boatman," the second independent production to be personally directed by him. He has engaged Sayre Groesbeck to sketch for him his visualization of the various characters in the story. Groesbeck knows Russian types intimately, his sketches for the London Graphic made at Archangel having attracted widespread attention. He drew for Mr. De Mille the various characters as he saw them, and these sketches are being used to assist the casting director and the costume department in the selection of the proper actors and wardrobe. The idea has tremendous potential possibilities, and the sketches which we reproduce here this week speak more eloquently than words of the value they possess.

SAM RORK—FASHION CREATOR

SAM RORK, whose "Clothes Make the Pirate" opens next week at the Circle in Indianapolis, is known as a picture producer of outstanding merit rather than as a creator of feminine fashions—but it looks as though he might win fame for the latter as well.

Just two years ago "Ponjola" started its sensational run, with Anna Q. Nilsson wearing a close-cropped, mannish haircut. Now you see that particular coiffure (or lack of one) on every side.

Exactly two years later, "Clothes Make the Pirate" will open at the Mark Strand theatre in New York. In this picture Leon Errol's costume is distinguished by an extremely short pair of pants—and Sam is wondering whether that fad, too, will sweep the nation.

PAUL TERRY—ZOO KEEPER

KARL K. KITCHEN, columnist of the New York Evening World, tells an amusing anecdote about "Aesop's Film Fables," created by Paul Terry for Pathe release. It seems that while standing in the lobby of the Hillside theatre, in the New Jersey town of that name, Alexander Okin, manager, overheard this conversation between a man and woman leaving the theatre:

The Man—"Did you like the pictures, Bess?"

The Girl—"They were pretty good, especially the 'Aesop's Fables.'"

The Man—"You're right. Ain't it wonderful how they train those animals?"

RIVALLING THE MASTERS

JOSEPH AUGUST, a veteran cameraman for Fox despite his years, has achieved another artistic success, according to reports of his work on "The Ancient Mariner," transformed into a motion picture play by Fox Films from Samuel Taylor Coleridge's immortal poem. He was responsible for the new and startling photographic innovations in "Dante's Inferno," which he is said to have excelled in "The Ancient Mariner."

Gustave Dore, whose masterly engravings for the "Inferno" and the "Mariner" remain unapproached to this day in fanciful conception, could not have visioned more effective scenes than August has achieved with his motion picture camera, it is said.

STARS TO THE SHORTS

ONCE again the National Board of Review awards all of its asterisks, denoting merit, to short subjects, with none of the feature releases voted as warranting the distinction. The short subjects so honored are: "Buster's Nightmare," one of the Buster Brown comedies of Century-Universal; "The Amundsen Polar Flight," Pathe; and two issues of Pathe Review, Nos. 47 and 48.

Four of the remarkable character sketches of Russian types by Don Sayre Groesbeck for the guidance of the casting director and costume department in planning Cecil B. De Mille's production for Producers Dist Corp., "The Volga Boatman." Left to right: The boatman turned revolutionist, to be played by William Boyd; Mariusha after the revolution, Jetta Goudal; Vera, the aristocratic Russian heroine, Elinor Fair; Prince Dmitri, to be played by Victor Varconi.

Getting the most out of the new stage building at the Educational studio, Los Angeles; Norma Taurog is using the side of the building for a shot, while Jess Robbins, directing Educational-Cameo comedies, utilizes the roof.

FLORIDA FLASHES

FROM his retreat in Miami, where he is publicizing real estate as he once publicized pictures and players, Harry Reichenbach gave out an interview the other day to the Miami Daily News which contain some observations of unusual interest from a veteran of this industry. Here are a few salient points:

"The Star Maker" was asked why are the "better" pictures almost always flops? Why are the biggest successes those pictures that have the depth of a mud puddle and are as near like life as a worm is like an eleplant?

He thought for a moment. Then he said:

"Art is a pitcher from which nothing can be poured.

"The makers of pictures make them to make money. They give the people what the people want; what the people want today, not yesterday or tomorrow. A department store would not fill its shelves with goods that no one wanted or would buy. If people want red ribbons, the department store sells red ribbons. It is the same with the pictures.

Jack L. Warner (left), production chief at the West Coast studios, welcomes Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Lubitsch back to Los Angeles after a cross-country trip taking in Toronto, New York, Washington and other points, scenes being taken for "Lady Windemere's Fan" (Warner Bros.).

"And the people do not want these 'better' pictures. There is too much unhappiness in them—they reflect life too clearly. People don't want to buy misery. They have enough of that anyway."

He was asked if pictures would ever get better? If people would ever go to see those pictures which showed life as it is? He said:

"The American home went through the cut glass period, son. At one time, the saturation point of culture was a huge cut glass bowl on the living room table, a huge cut glass chandelier on the dining room ceiling and as much cut glass as possible scattered over the rest of the house. Then came the stuffed cushion period, with its piles and piles of cushions and plush and discomfort. Now, even in the poorer homes, you will find imitation Chippendale and furnishings that are in good taste.

"The American has been educated concerning his home. He will be educated concerning his pictures. You must remember that pictures are still babies. They are only 19. They are still in the stuffed cushion stage of their development."

And then the "Star Maker" swung back to the movies and told how European directors make better pictures than American directors because the Europeans usually have a greater background, a greater culture—are artists, giving the actor inspiration as well as directions for lifting a handkerchief, kissing the heroine or killing the old father.

To the "Star Maker," Ernst Lubitsch is the greatest of all directors, Adolph Menjou the greatest of all movie actors and Mary Philbin the greatest of all movie actresses.

STAR-OWNED THEATRES

AN interview with Alice Calhoun by Grace Kingsley in the Los Angeles Sunday Times brings out the interesting fact that Miss Calhoun is the owner of a half interest in the Hanson Theatre corporation, which includes the Larchmont theatre, the Marquise theatre in Sherman and the Mark Strand theatre in San Pedro. The circuit, according to the story, is a thriving one, and as far as we can recall, Miss Calhoun is the only star to invest money in the exhibiting end of this business.

Miss Calhoun is one of the newer generation of young stars, Miss Kingsley points out, that is profiting by the example of another generation and investing its money wisely against the day, all too soon, when the best years of a professional career have passed by. Miss Calhoun lives simply and sensibly, owns real estate and mining properties, and would never need to face a camera again unless she so desired. But she does, and declares that she wants to continue for ten years more, then retire. At the present rate, at the termination of that ten year period Miss Calhoun should make the late Hetty Green's reputation as the world's wealthiest woman very insecure indeed.

Hans Kraly, who is to continuitize "Kiki" (First National) for Norma Talmadge, meets the fair star upon her arrival in Los Angeles to start work.

THE SEATS OF THE MIGHTY

OUR own Madame La Marquise de la Falaise de Coudray, or, if that won't fit into your marquee sign, Gloria Swanson, accompanied by her titled young husband, was a spectator at the Yale-Princeton game last Saturday in New Haven. Or was, at least, until an untoward incident marred the beauty of that otherwise happy day.

It seems that shortly after the beginning of the fourth quarter the pair decided to leave ahead of the crowd. Just as they reached the entrance to portal 17, Bill Kline started his sensational run which led to Yale's second and last touchdown. Naturally enough, in the excitement of the moment, they paused right at the mouth of the portal, staring wide-eyed at Mons. Kline in his spectacular course.

And it was then that T. Blair Call, employe of the telephone company and an usher for a day, heard the stern call of duty. Perhaps he was an ardent Swanson fan, in which case what burning agonies must have writhed within him! Or perhaps he did not recognize the diminutive heroine of "Manhandled," "Sans Gene," "Stage Struck" and a score of other film best sellers. Or—again perhaps—perhaps he is that mythical figure, The Man Who Never Saw a Movie.

But at any rate—and there is no perhaps about this—T. Blair rose to the situation. "Lady," he said, firmly, "You'll have to get out of the portal." His only reply was an unperturbed glance from the film idol. Then, as picturesquely reported by the New York Herald Tribune, T. Blair lapsed into the quaint, academic phraseology peculiar to college towns. "Say, you," he continued, sternly, "Get outta de portal. Didja hear me?"

Evidently, according to published reports, she did.

JACKIE THE GIANT KILLER

ALTHOUGH his education is by no means being neglected, Jackie Coogan's parents are determined that he shall grow up with a healthy mind in a husky body, and there is no pampering in his daily routine. He has just returned from six weeks at the Coogan hunting lodge in the high Sierras, where he went after completing "Old Clothes." While there, in addition to hunting, riding and fishing, he washed his own clothes, chopped wood, fed the horses and mules and made himself useful generally. Now he is back home, looking the picture of health and all "set to go" on his next picture.

PURE SCOTCH

FROM Page Films, Ltd., Glasgow, comes the announcement of an old-Scotch production, "The Fair Maid of Perth," which was given its premiere presentation at The Picture House, Sauchiehall street, Glasgow. Starring Russell Thorndike and Sylvia Caine, it is a picturization of Sir Walter Scott's famous novel of the same name, and was filmed in the authentic locations in Scotland.

Blanche Mehaffey, who has progressed upward and onward, appears in "A Woman of the World" Paramount.

"Beans," a dog of unusual intelligence and "cuteness," who has been put under contract by F. B. O., following his work in two Tom Tyler pictures.

Rex Ingram and his wife, Alice Terry, at the International Exposition of Decorative and Industrial Arts, Paris, after finishing "Mare Nostrum" (Metro-Goldwyn).

Jack Lloyd has played 335 character roles in Mermaid comedies during the past four years, though his real face is seldom seen.

United Artists, M-G-M. Merger of Distribution Likely

T.O.C.C. and M.P.T.O.A. Committee Wire Protests

Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin, (United Artists stars); Marcus Loew, (President of Metro-Goldwyn); Joseph M. Schenck, (Chairman, Board of Directors, United Artists); Hiram Abrams, (President of United Artists) and Nicholas M. Schenck, (Vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn.

New York, N. Y., November 19—Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of United Artists, in response to a query telegraphed the following statement to William A. Johnston, editor of The Motion Picture News:

"We hope to bring our negotiations to a successful conclusion by the middle of next week. We propose to combine the distributing offices of both organizations (United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) into one, effecting a healthy economy.

"All of our pictures will in the future as in the past be sold on their merits and not in block form. Cannot give you details of affiliation as same are not yet worked out. (Signed) Joseph M. Schenck."

IT was generally conceded in New York this week that the physical distribution of United Artists would shortly be merged with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as the result of negotiations now pending on the Coast, and likely to be completed at any moment. Among those concerned in the conferences on the Coast are Joseph M. Schenck, Hiram Abrams, Dennis F. O'Brien, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, for United Artists, and Nicholas M. Schenck, J. Robert Rubin and Louis B. Mayer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Marcus Loew will leave Saturday, November 21, for Los Angeles, which gave further credence to the report that papers would be signed shortly. It is important to note, however, that any agreement arrived at now must necessarily be ratified by the boards of directors of both companies, and that therefore any final decision in the matter may not come for some time.

An important development was the filing of telegrams by the directors and officers of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, New York City, to Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, urging them to remain out of the merger.

Similar action by the Administrative committee of the M. P. T. O. A. followed on Wednesday, when a wire of the same general nature was dispatched to Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks.

The merger would save United Artists from ten to fifteen per cent in distribution cost, Joseph M. Schenck is quoted as having stated in Hollywood.

On Saturday, November 14, Mr. Schenck issued the following statement:

"This is in no sense an amalgamation as far as production is concerned. It is simply an economy measure to avoid duplication in distributing our pictures. United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will continue to produce independently, but we will each distribute our pictures through the new company which will make contracts with both organizations. It will be called 'United Artists-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distribution Company.'

"Some few details remain to be worked out and the final papers will be signed in New York, because a vote of the board of directors of each company will be necessary to ratify the matter. But we are in accord on the main points and we are agreed that it will be an advantageous move for all concerned."

One of the angles in the deal, according to discussion in New York, has to do with the foreign market. The merger, from this viewpoint, would give Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer a better distribution system abroad, as the United Artists foreign system is known to be one of the best.

Following is the text of the telegram sent to Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, signed Charles L. O'Reilly, President and Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Board of Directors:

"The Board of Directors and officers of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce met today to take up the reported merger of United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer companies. It was the unanimous opinion that we bring to your attention the fact that this merger is another step in a well laid out scheme to bring about a trustification of our industry and we feel that you owe it to the public and the Independent Theatre Owners who have supported your artistic efforts and who have helped develop the prestige and influence that you now possess to prevent your being used for destructive and monopolistic purposes. Your previous experience with Famous Players-Lasky Company which compelled you to start an independent company will be repeated only with more disastrous effects to the public and to the theatre owners because the pictures in which you appear will be used to compel or force theatre owners to buy and use pictures of an inferior grade and quality issued by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company in conjunction therewith. We do not feel that an artist of your standing and independence will subordinate your great initiative, creative ability and artistic effort hitherto displayed by you, for any monetary consideration, and in behalf of our public and ourselves plead with you to continue your independence for the furtherance and continuance of our industry along the lines of the greatest usefulness to our public and the country at large."

A similar telegram was sent to Chaplin by O'Reilly and Cohen.

Commenting on rumors to the effect that Chaplin was endeavoring to block the merger, Arthur Kelly, representing Mr. Chaplin in the East, and treasurer of United Artists, said:

"Mr. Chaplin has been in San Francisco for some time, working on the scenario of his next picture.

"He returned to Los Angeles on Wednesday of this week and is doubtless now taking part in the conferences. He has issued no statement, but I can say that if Mr. Chaplin agrees to the move it will be on the definite assurance that the aims for which United Artists was formed are not sacrificed.

"In other words, he will want to be very sure that United Artists' pictures are sold separately and on their own merits; that they are not used to force the selling of other product; that the production policies and plans of its members remain free and independent of outside control; and that the door is left open to leading artists who desire an independent release for their pictures on an unhampered basis."

British Imports Show Increase

Tremendous Advance in Film Footage is not Paralleled in Value

THE following special report to the Department of Commerce by Alfred Nutting, clerk in the American Consulate General in London, gives an analysis of British exports and imports of motion picture films for the first nine months of 1925:

For the nine months to September, 1925, the aggregate quantity of British imports of cinema films reached 170,587,388 linear feet, contrasted with 79,191,467 linear feet in the same period of 1924, and 90,459,407 linear feet in 1923; this extensive rise, however, was not accompanied by a corresponding advance in value, which increased this year to £1,114,953 against £887,500 a year ago.

Of the above aggregate for the current period, no less than 154,742,426 linear feet were imported in the first six months (compared with 48.898,631 linear feet in 1924) and 87,849,206 linear feet thereof were received in the month of June last (only 6,961,309 linear feet being imported in June, 1924), in consequence of the two months' notice which was given of the intention to subject cinema films to Customs duty on imports arriving on and after July 1, 1925.

For the three months, July-September, 1925, the quantity imported was only 15,844,962 linear feet, contrasted with 31,518,439 linear feet during the same three months of 1923, when the McKenna duties were in operation.

Of imports during the current nine months, blank film comprised 122,316,370 linear feet, against 53,994,350 linear feet last year, and 69,787,177 linear feet in 1923; while for the three months July-September the respective totals were 10,245,402 linear feet, 17,278,994 linear feet, and 24,789,339 linear feet. Positive films totaled 40,329,532 linear feet in the current nine months, against 20,257,269 linear feet in 1924, and 15,085,248 linear feet in 1923, the latest three months' figures being 4,278,431 linear feet, 11,295,590 linear feet, and 5,065,078 linear feet respectively; and negative films 7,941,486 linear feet in the nine months of 1925 contrasted with 4,939,848 linear feet in 1924, and 5,586,982 linear feet in 1923, the final three months recording imports of 1,321,129 linear feet this year, against 1,718,252 linear feet in 1924, and 1,664,022 linear feet two years ago.

It is thus apparent that blank film has decreased the most heavily since June 30 last. It may be added that the total re-exports for the nine months in each of the years 1923–1925 show comparatively little change, averaging about 11,000,000 linear feet.

India Launches Society To Produce Films

A notice in the Official Gazette, states American Consul S. Verne Richardson, of Karachi, carries the information that the Registrar of Cooperative Societies in the Punjab, India, has granted registration to the Topical and Educational Films Cooperative Society, Limited, of Lahore. The Society will be the only film producing society in India registered under the Cooperative Societies Act and is the first society for producing Indian films in the Punjab. An influential managing committee has been formed, representative of all classes and communities and it is expected to enrol 2,000 members to raise a capital of five lakhs of rupees (about $150,000).

Membership is open to workers in the film industry, persons of the learned and skilled professions helpful to the industry, and a limited number of persons interested in investing in the industry. Shares are two hundred and fifty rupees each payable in full or by instalments of ten rupees with one rupee entrance fee. Not more than four shares may be acquired by a single person. The Society hopes to put its first program on the market in the coming cold weather (the Indian term for winter and meaning the months November-February each year) which will probably include a super film drama as well as topical and educational side films.

Sam Moross Resigns as T. O. C. C. Secretary

Sam A. Moross who has served the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York as secretary since the organization of that body has resigned his office to enter the brokerage and real estate business in New York City. The board of directors accepted the resignation with regret and will tender Moross a testimonial dinner in appreciation of his long and faithful service.

Canada Planning "All Canadian" Week

"ALL CANADIAN WEEK" is the latest feature to be put across by prominent exhibitors in Eastern Canada in conjunction with the discussed probability of American producers making use of Canadian soil for the producing of pictures to qualify under the proposed Kontingent Plan in Great Britain.

This Canadian Week idea follows up the visit of various producers, directors and stars to the Dominion at different times in recent months and the actual manufacture of several new productions in Quebec this year. The special week is intended to impress upon the people that the industry has reached the stage where producers are looking to Canada as a place for making pictures and, later, these features can be presented in the United Kingdom as British Empire Made productions.

The "All Canadian Week" was commented upon by the Ottawa Journal as being evidence of a development in the film industry which permitted a presentation of a Canadian programme. In this connection, reference was also made in The Journal to England's proposed Kontingent Plan for the encouragement of British pictures.

Notables Celebrate With Pathe News at Anniversary Dinner

Vice-President Dawes Honor Guest at Brilliant Affair

THE most notable affair of its kind ever held in the motion picture industry took place Saturday evening, November 14, when the Fifteenth Anniversary of Pathe News was observed by a dinner given at the Hotel Plaza, New York City.

Vice-President Charles G. Dawes was the guest of honor. Others at the speakers' table included an amazing array of first-page names, such as Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland; Major-General Mason M. Patrick, Chief of the Army Air Service; Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett; Major-General Fox Connor, Assistant Chief of Staff; Major-General Charles P. Summerall, Corps Commander, U. S. Army; Admiral S. S. Robinson; Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe; Congressman Ogden L. Mills; Gov. Lee Trinkle, of Virginia; Edmund C. Lynch, the financier; Richard P. Ernst, United States Senator from Kentucky; Emanual Cohen, editor of Pathe News; Don Manuel C. Tellez, Ambassador from Mexico; Frederic R. Coudert, internationally famous lawyer, the toastmaster; A. Van de Vyvere, the Belgian Minister of State; Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy; United States Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York; Charles E. Merrill, of Merrill, Lynch & Co.; Gov. Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine; Gov. George S. Silzer, of New Jersey; Jansen Noyes; McKenzie Moss, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Major-General John A. LeJeune, Commandant of the Marine Corps; Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett and Rear Admiral R. E. Coontz.

Other prominent persons in the assemblage were: Bernard M. Baruch; Kent Cooper, General Manager of the Associated Press; Paul D. Cravath, the lawyer; George B. Cortelyou; F. Trubee Davison; James Montgomery Flagg, the artist; Daniel Frohman; Charles Dana Gibson; Major-General James G. Harbord; Thomas W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Company; Jesse L. Lasky; Samuel McRoberts; S. Stanwood Menken; Dwight W. Morrow, of J. P. Morgan & Company; Frank Presbrey; Courtland Smith, secretary of the Hays organization; Melville E. Stone, counselor of the Associated Press; Herbert Bayard Swope, of the New York World; Frederick William Wile, and Owen D. Young.

Vice-President Dawes delivered a slashing attack on the antiquated rules of the United States Senate, pausing first to pay tribute to the world-wide importance of the news weekly. Gov. Ritchie again reiterated his staunch friendship for the motion picture. And Emanuel Cohen, of Pathe, reviewed the history of Pathe News and delivered one of the most effective speeches ever made at a film dinner. And that completed the speech-making. Will H. Hays was to have been the only other speaker, but he was prevented from being present by a death in the family. He sent a telegram of warm greeting and congratulations.

In an evening which was notable in many respects, the motion picture itself was distinctly starred. The guests sat for fifty minutes, their attention riveted on the screen, while "Flashes of the Past," a review of outstanding events since 1910 was shown. This is one of the most remarkable pictures ever projected and represents news weekly skill at its highest peak. Pictures of the guests themselves were shown and these won great commendation. Everything in connection with the affair was run smoothly and impressively.

Musical selections were rendered by an orchestra under the personal direction of Vincent Lopez, while the musical interpretation for the "Flashes" was directed by Dr. Hugo Risenfeld, and the proceedings were broadcast by WJZ.

Emanuel Cohen, editor of Pathe News, meets Vice-president Charles G. Dawes and Mrs. Dawes upon their arrival in New York City for the 15th anniversary dinner of Pathe News.

Some of the salient points made by Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, with particular reference to the film business, follow:

"In the honest examination to give the public the cleanest and best, Maryland exhibitors are not surpassed by exhibitors or producers anywhere. I believe that as a class they regard their business as impressive with a public press, and as a class they are entirely faithful to that trust. Maryland, it is true, is one of the states where censorship exists. When it comes to Pathe News service, no censorship is necessary and there ought not to be any. But in any event, it is Maryland's policy to insist on a sane censorship, enough to protect the public where that may be necessary, but never enough to impair the responsibility of the producers and exhibitors for the pictures which they show.

"That is the balance which ought to be struck in all public regulation. That is the balance, that is the line which ought never to be lost sight of, whether regulation is in the field where it is concededly necessary, such as railroads and public utilities, or whether it is in the field where the necessity for it is by no means so clear, and in that field I would put the moving picture industry.

"But if regulation is necessary to protect the public, then let it be confined to what is needed to protect the public and nothing else, and let it be administered in a way that recognizes that the men in charge of this great industry want to run it and are capable of running it cleanly and decently, and do not let us have interference anywhere which will take from the owners of the industry the responsibility for the operation of their own business and for the character of the pictures which they show. (Applause.)

"The moving picture industry cannot succeed, cannot merit or hold public approval any more than any other industry can unless its product has character. That is the great thing in life, for an individual in public service or in business—character. The owners are the ones who ought to be most interested in giving it character. Certainly, the vast majority of them are. So state interference should never be permitted to go to an extent which might lessen the obligation and lessen the authority of this great right-thinking majority of your industry who will be satisfied with nothing less than the best, themselves to compel the small minority in their industry to live up to their high standards or else to get out of the business and to go into some other one where the standards are not so high.

"I am, of course, speaking only of state regulation. A good deal of the state regulation, goodness knows, is bad enough. And if the Maryland legislature ever passed a bill such as the Connecticut legislature passed, I don't believe I could be too quick in getting them back again to repeal it.

"And so I take it for granted that you will agree with me that to the extent that any public regulation may be necessary it ought to be confined to the states, and that in no event ought Congress to be permitted to pass the Federal Censorship Bill.

Notables in American public life and leaders of the motion picture industry gathered at the Plaza, New York City, for the Fifteenth Anniversary dinner of Pathe News.

"Gentlemen, I appreciate more than I can say the opportunity of being here. I appreciate the opportunity of congratulating Mr. Cohen upon the splendidly constructive work which has marked the recent years of his life. I can, of course, add nothing to what he has told you, and to what others who are to speak will tell you as to the value of the Pathe News Service. I am simply one of the millions who recognize in Pathe Service a development as marvelous as any other thing in this marvelous age. I am simply one of the millions who recognize in it a development which, above all others, helps to give the whole world a common language and to make the whole world akin."

In his speech Emanuel Cohen said:

"When in the early 90's, the new art of the motion picture was developed, mainly due to the inspiring genius of one of our distinguished friends who unfortunately could not be with us this evening, Mr. Thomas Edison, its purpose and scope was conceived largely for the entertainment of the masses. Here and there at that time, the pioneers of the industry went beyond this scope and directed their lenses on some news events, but only in a sporadic fashion, an occasional glimpse of new possibilities.

"It was in 1910 that there came the fuller realization of this newly discovered but unexplored field of motion picture usefulness when Charles Pathe presented for the first time a regular and systematic medium of news dissemination by films.

"Public recognition of this usefulness has steadily increased, and I personally, in my eleven years of editorship of the Pathe News, have had the opportunity of seeing the news film grow from a mere exhibition in a few hundred scattered theatres throughout the country where it was used mainly as a filler on the program, down to the present day when the combined circulation of all news films reaches almost 90 per cent of the 18,000 motion picture theatres in this country. It is conservatively estimated that the news film is now seen by upwards of forty millions of people in the United States every week. Also we find it now not merely a filler, but a vital part of the program, an institution recognized by theatre and public alike as playing an important role in news communication and in the life of the nation.

"Like the great news syndicates, the Associated Press, the United Press and the International News, of whose tremendous service the public is so fully aware, the Pathe News is now world wide. Its tenticles reaching into every nook and corner of the earth, civilized or uncivilized. Its thousands of lenses on every political development, witnessing the pageantry and the tragedy of every people, peering into the customs and habits of every land, holding the mirror to every phase of human activity everywhere.

"Although the purpose is similar to that of the newspaper, the news film plays a different role. Its object is to bring the readers to the very scene of an event so that they not only see what transpires but can actually feel its pulse. The deadly accuracy and vivid realism of the news film has brought it to the heights of purpose and utility which it now occupies. It has reeled its way into the confidence of millions of persons. One might say that it has won a place of trust as well as affection.

"Supplementing the service of the great newspapers, this graphic portrayal is enabling the public to realize and to become acquainted with events the world over, to form clearer judgments of these world events, and guiding it to more intelligent understanding. The excursion round the world on which it takes its readers in the 15 minutes of each issue as if on the wings of time has made it possible for them to see and become acquainted with other lands. The lions of Trafalgar Square are just as familiar to the American audience as the Woolworth Building to the Englishman. The sufferings of Japan and the tragic loss following the earthquake were felt from the screens. The remarkable achievements of America's round the world flyers were witnessed by Pathe News readers in every hamlet.

"Am I presuming when I refer to what the news film has accomplished and has the power still to accomplish in the way of fostering that understanding and amity between the peoples which statesmen are so eagerly striving for as the basis for international good will and tolerance?

"The news picture is within the grasp of every one, all peoples irrespective of thought, race or creed find instantaneous expression and common understanding in the news film.

"The Pathe News in 15 years has filmed practically every important event in the world. We shall produce living proof before you this evening. The great poet who sighed in hopelessness, 'Oh, God, turn back the universe and show me yesterday' had never seen a news film.

"Tonight we shall turn back the universe and show you yesterday. The value of the news film is going to be written on your minds forever after you have traveled back over the years with us. We shall see the world before the Great War, we shall view the personalities of the world's greatest men who have passed into the Great Beyond. We shall see epoch making events, some of which have changed the map of the world. When these pictures were taken they were simple matters. Now after surveying the world's changes, they have a new significance which makes them the stage centers of the most gripping drama ever known.

"Just suppose we had camera men at Valley Forge and we could sit here and watch Washington and his freezing army and ragged patriots starving and bleeding for the wealth and freedom which we are enjoying tonight. One hundred years from now our dependents will see the horror of the great war and the undying heroism of all who fought in it.

"Suppose we had the news film at Bunker Hill, at Lexington and at Yorktown, what an imperishable history for us! Can you imagine being able to witness John Hancock signing the Declaration of Independence, or Abraham Lincoln signing the Emancipation Proclamation? It would impress you, would it not?

"Even if we could witness our beloved Theodore Roosevelt thundering up San Juan Hill, we might feel as though we were being gifted by Providence with an earthly sight.

"Since 1910, however, such events have been recorded for posterity. The News film has come to be the greatest historian of all. Our Presidents, our soldiers and our public men, from now on will live forever.

"When our grandchildren read in their histories of some great political event, some bitter struggle, some great victory won, they will look up from the letter and from the printed word and see as real as in the living presence the men who did these things.

"How much better they will be able to understand. It is because of these things that we feel the greatness of the news film, and why we wish to celebrate its achievement tonight, and as we view this film which we have entitled "The Flashes of the Past," it makes us wonder what the flashes of the future will be, what destiny will inscribe on these celluloid pages of history. As the progress of human events marches on, perhaps this very method of news recording will itself be further perfected so as to do still greater service to the public. Time and space in the transportation of films will be reduced and minimized. Who can foretell if in our own lifetime we will see the day when motion pictures will be transmitted by the ethereal waves of the radio, so that the public will be able to sit in its favorite theatre and watch the events throughout the world, even as they see transpiring, when the whole world will be linked together in instantaneous understanding."

"Business, Not Politics" Seider Policy

Woodhull and Cohen Also Important Speakers at Session of A. M. P. A.

HARMONY among all branches of the industry was stressed at an important meeting of the A. M. P. A. November 12 in New York by a group of exhibitor leaders—Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager of the M. P. T. O. A.; R. F. Woodhull, President of the organization and Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the board of directors.

Strict business devoid of politics was announced by Mr. Seider as his policy in the business management of the M. P. T. O. A. This was his first official pronouncement since taking office. It follows:

"As Business Manager it will be our policy to conduct the affairs of the organization along strictly business lines.

"The important subject of the moment, contract and arbitration, is nearing adjustment. Legislative problems will be worked out and the mass of detail necessary will be properly handled.

"And although there naturally must result from this undertaking a certain measure of hope and confidence to the theatre owner, yet, he wants to know that he will be permitted to remain in business and enjoy the opportunity to carry on in his chosen field of endeavor. He wants to be sure of his future in this Industry.

"It is argued that the building of theatres cannot be stopped because the "wheels of progress cannot be blocked."

"Is it progress to overbuild and overseat? Especially where the purpose is to eliminate the smaller competitor by the weight of larger financial resources. Is it progress to threaten a small operator with opposition unless he purchases a certain product?

"Shall it continue impossible for a small operator to purchase quality product when he has for a competitor a large influential purchaser? Should a theatre owner who has purchased for a number of years the product of a particular distributor lose that particular product without opportunity with the arrival of a more influential purchaser? Or will the product be allocated so that he with 'clean hands' may live?

"These are the problems confronting and disheartening the theatre owner and these are the problems we have presented to Mr. Hays, and these are the problems received most sympathetically by Mr. Hays."

President Woodhull and Sydney Cohen, who acted as toastmaster, prefaced their remarks with laudations for Mr. Seider.

Both Mr. Cohen and Mr. Woodhull urged members of the A. M. P. A. to cooperate with the Business Manager in the efforts that are being made to bring about a perfect mutuality in the entire industry.

In his speech, which was interspersed with bits of clever humor, President Woodhull took issue with an observation made by Adolph Zukor at a previous meeting of the A. M. P. A.

"I think perhaps it is right to say that Zukor is the outstanding figure in the progress of the film industry," Mr. Woodhull said, "but I cannot agree with him in saying to you that the success of the film industry is practically a fifty-fifty proposition—the producers and the exploiteers. In fact I think it might be made a trio when you consider that the pictures have to be projected and that the exhibitor is the man who does that. But—when you come right down to it there is the public carrying the air, so after all a quartette describes, or apportions, it better to my way of thinking.

"You advertisers and exploiteers are the lifting and driving power of the motion picture industry. You have all seen poor pictures that you fellows have absolutely put over. But you get your material from the producer and you work in the exhibitor's box office and the public eye is caught by your work. Therefore, how can it be a fifty-fifty proposition? When you come right down to it I do not think that anyone will ever be able to tell which of the four of us is the most responsible for the success and progress of the industry. It will always be the four of us and therefore the four of us will always have to stick together and work together.

"I am in absolute accord with Mr. Hays' suggestion, made when he first entered the industry, that the industry needs a strong exhibitor organization and that representatives of that organization and of the producers should all sit down at the same table and decide matters as they present themselves.

"Most of the so-called trouble in this Industry is founded on nothing but the whisperings of busy-bodies. It is up to us to recognize this fact and the sooner we do the sooner there will be real harmony and a perfect machine which will work for the mutual benefit of all of us."

That the geography of the industry is constantly changing and that one company may be a power today and a total loss tomorrow was the theme which Mr. Cohen struck home to his audience. Due to such power menacing theatre holdings and harassing exhibitors, other units are springing up and fortifying themselves, Cohen said. With this angle in mind he declared: "It looks to me as if the battle of the giants will be fought in 1928."

In connection with the "battle," Cohen referred to the inception of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. "I firmly believe that if our organization had not been formed then that now one or two companies instead of owning 500 or 600 theatres, would own 5,000 or 6,000 theatres—meaning that lots of us who are now in would be out."

Fix Penalty for Failure to Deliver Film

AT an Albany meeting attended by J. H. MacIntyre, Robert Mochrie, Jack Krause and Ted O'Shea, representing the exchanges, and Julius Berinstein, Abe Stone and Louis Buettner, representing the exhibitors, decision was reached as to the method that would hereafter be employed by the exchanges in adjusting matters where a motion picture theatre has been forced to remain dark through failure of shipments to arrive on time.

It was decided that in such cases where the rent of the film amounted to $15 or less, and where there were no facts to establish the amount of the claim, the exhibitor be awarded four times the cost of the picture, and furthermore that the picture be furnished the exhibitor without cost at a later date. In cases where the rental of the picture was up to and including $25, the award to the exhibitor is to be three and one-half times the cost of the film, and in instances where the rental ranges from $25 upwards, the award is to be made on the basis of three times the cost of the picture to the exhibitor.

Beetson Visits Eastern Canada Cities

A recent visitor in Eastern Canadian cities was Frederick W. Beetson, secretary-treasurer of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., Los Angeles. Beetson declared that the aim of his association was to regulate child labor in the moving picture industry, making it a recreation instead of an imposition.

Connecticut Appeal Dropped

Supreme Court Suit to Test Tax Law Dismissed; Exchanges in Operation

THE appeal of the American Feature Film Company of Boston and New Haven to test the constitutionality of the Connecticut law imposing a tax on motion picture films was dismissed by the Supreme Court at Washington on motion of both parties on Tuesday of this week. This was in line with the action promised at the time an agreement was reached between the film interests and the Connecticut officials, and was not unexpected.

On July 10 the Special Federal court in New Haven heard the case and ruled that the Connecticut law was constitutional. Previous to that date, Federal Court judges sitting in New Haven denied a reargument. Steps toward an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court were then taken by former Attorney General Wickersham, of Cadwallader, Wickersham & Taft, attorney for the American Feature Film company. The appeal was expected to be based on the fact that the tax law interfered with inter-state commerce.

Shortly after the hurried passage of the law by the Connecticut legislature, all film exchanges were removed from New Haven and selling was stopped. Prints were shipped from New York and from Boston. A rotating fund was established into which Connecticut exhibitors paid pro rata assessments to meet the payment of the tax.

This tax will continue in effect until January, 1927, at which time the Connecticut legislature convenes, and amendment or modification of the law is confidently expected at that time, to remove the hardship which it has admittedly worked upon exhibitors in that state.

Commencing last Thursday, film salesmen are again making their accustomed rounds in the state and exchanges are again in full operation. Prints and accessories have been shipped back to the New Haven exchanges, which were not dismantled otherwise, and conditions are now practically back to normal.

With but one or two exceptions, where men were transferred to other territories, the exchange personnel in New Haven is practically as it was before the exodus from the state.

Seattle Mayor Vetoes New Picture Ordinance

Declaring that W. T. Campbell, a member of the Seattle City Council, had deceived and betrayed fellow members of the Council for his own personal and financial gain, Mayor Edwin J. Brown of that city last week sent to the Council his veto of an ordinance which would remove the existing rule that prohibits the erection of theatres within 500 feet of a public school building in Seattle. The ordinance had been introduced and recommended by a committee of which Mr. Campbell was chairman. Mr. Campbell, the Mayor declared, had violated a Council ruling by voting for legislation in which he had a "financial and personal interest."

Questioned regarding the matter, Mr. Campbell declared that he had planned to construct a motion picture theatre near the West Seattle Junction, less than 500 feet from a grammar school. However, he declared, other motion exhibitors in outlying districts had protested against the "archaic law," and consequently all the members of the committee had agreed that there was no good reason for the existence of the ban.

M-G-M Makes Changes In Exchange Executives

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announces three changes in the executive administration of its exchanges. Samuel Eckman, Jr., has taken over the supervision of the Boston and New Haven offices in conjunction with his present supervision of the New York, Albany and Buffalo offices.

George A. Hickey has been placed in charge of the Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh and Charlotte offices, and Felix Mendelssohn is in charge of special work for the home office sales department.

George A. Balsdon to Join Vital Exchanges

David R. Hochreich, president of Vital Exchanges, Inc., has signed George A. Balsdon, formerly assistant general manager for Vitagraph, for ten years, as home office representative. Balsdon will immediately start on a tour of all Vital Exchanges beginning with Canada.

Famous Files Supplementary Brief

Argument Intimates Unfairness of Examiner in Investigation Before Federal Trade Commission

AN interpretation of the 17,000 pages of testimony taken during the course of the hearings in the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of Famous Players-Lasky, differing greatly from that made by the counsel for the commission in his brief asking that the respondents be ordered to divest themselves of their exhibition activities and to discontinue block booking, is given by Famous Players in the argument filed with the commission this week as a supplement to their brief answering that of the Government's counsel.

The original brief of the company required over 550 printed pages; the argument covers some 325 additional, in which the points brought out in the commission's counsel's brief are discussed and interpreted from the view of the respondents.

A spirit of unfairness has been maintained throughout the proceeding, it is intimated in the Famous Players argument. As proof of this, it cites the question by the commission's counsel, asked of a number of witnesses, "What effect does it have upon the competition among the producers of motion pictures where a large producer owns quite a number of first class first run theatres in different key cities?" , which was objected to by the respondent's counsel, but allowed by the examiner, while the similar question asked of a number of witnesses by the respondent's counsel, "What in your judgment has been the actual effect upon the market for good pictures in this territory of the ownership of theatres by the producer whose name is Famous Players-Lasky Corporation?" was ruled out by the examiner upon objection by the counsel's commission.

The first 7,000 pages of testimony, it is declared, is a mass of so-called opinion evidence, hearsay and "back-stairs gossip," and, it is asserted "attempt after attempt of the respondents' counsel to answer hearsay and opinion evidence by testimony as to actual facts by witnesses who knew the facts was met with a barrage of objections, most of which were sustained by the examiner."

There is only one question before the commission, the argument indicates, stated in the opening sentence. "This brief is written in defence of the right of the American manufacturer to sell his product directly to the consumer, without the interposition of either wholesale or retail middlemen."

Considerable space is given over to a discussion of the make-up of the industry to support the contention that "neither Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, nor any of its constituent corporations, now has, or ever has had, any semblance of monoply in any branch of the motion picture industry." Comparisons are made between the increase in production of the respondents and that of the Bethlehem Steel Company and other important industrial concerns. In no year has Famous Players ever produced or distributed as much as 20 per cent of the feature pictures, it is declared, nor has its rentals from its pictures ever exceeded 31 per cent of the total of the country.

"While we insist that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has the absolute legal right to devote all of the time of all of its theatres solely to the showing of its own pictures," the argument states, "the fact is that a very large part of the time of the theatres in which it has an interest has been taken up in the exhibition of the product of its competitors. It is a fact, therefore, that the theatres in which Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are interested themselves afford an excellent market for the pictures of competing producers and distributors."

"A motion picture producer, like any other manufacturer, may lawfully sell its product directly to the ultimate consumer, and may lawfully own the facilities for such sale," it is contended.

The respondents deny that unfair or coercive measures have ever been used, either in the acquisition of theatres or in their sales of Paramount pictures, discussing in detail the various cases cited before the commission to show that Famous Players had its agents threaten exhibitors with producer-owned theatres in order to make them accept Paramount pictures 100 per cent at high prices.

Taking up the question of block booking, it is declared that this practice has been rooted in the industry from its inception, that all large companies, with the exception of United Artists, who turn out exceptionally fine pictures, follow the practice, and that the great majority of exhibitors take less than the entire block of pictures offered. When but one or two pictures were taken, it is pointed out, naturally they were offered at a higher price, the quotation for the block being in the nature of a "wholesale" price for a quantity purchase.

The commission has no jurisdiction to order Famous Players to sell its theatres, it is asserted in conclusion. Neither the acquisition nor the ownership of theatres by motion picture producers is a method of competition. Many of the alleged unfair acts of the respondents relate only to intrastate commerce, which is not within the scope of the commission's jurisdiction.

A brief in reply will be filed by the commission's counsel about November 20.

M. P. T. O. A. Committee Meets Here

$15,000 Returned to Independent Association—Other Important Steps Taken

CONCRETE plans developed at sessions of the Administrative Committee lasting over eight hours this week will be put into immediate execution for the rehabilitating of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America into a powerful organization.

As one of the first planks in the new platform of strength the exhibitor leaders on November 18th, wrote out and delivered a check of $15,000 to the Independent Motion Picture Association of America. At the same time they cancelled an additional and written obligation of the independent association to the national organization totaling $25,000.

That the I. M. P. A. A. may continue the maintenance of their association and that Independence may be furthered is the basis upon which the Administrative Committee, at the request of the Play Date Bureau, took this action.

The Committee, as a token of the appreciation of the National organization, to Carl Laemmle in his pledge of $50,000 for the cause of Independence made in the name of the Universal Film Corporation at Milwaukee, was unanimous in its endorsement of a resolution providing for the tendering of a testimonial dinner to Mr. Laemmle in January.

In the Music Tax situation the committee authorized the engagement of Fulton J. Brylawski, Copyright attorney of Washington, as the first step in the forthcoming fight against the American Society of Composers, Authors Association. Kindred theatrical organizations and associations will be invited to join the National Association of Theatre Owners in this movement.

The fullest cooperation will be afforded Mr. Seider in his capacity as Business Manager. Upon this official the executive committee rests much of the hope for the establishing of the National Organization on a rock-bound basis. The building up of a campaign against all copyright legislation adverse to the industry will be one of Mr. Seider's many earlier tasks.

The Administrative Committee heartily sanctioned the issuance by the Business Manager of an organization bulletin which will chronicle all matters of a technical and intimate interest to members of the National Organization. Details concerning the nature of this bulletin will shortly be announced in a statement to the entire industry by Mr. Seider.

In regard to the report concerning the possible merging of the United Artists interests with those of Metro-Goldwyn the Administrative Committee went on record as opposed. A telegram in this respect was dispatched to Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks adjuring them to consider Independence before making any move of this nature.

Every member of the Administrative Committee, with the exception of Nathan Yamins of Fall River, was present at the meetings. They were all of the opinion that never before have they had such a constructive session as the one which they have just completed.

EYTON ABROAD FOR PARAMOUNT

Named Foreign Production Chief

CHARLES EYTON, who has been general manager of the Lasky studio in Hollywood practically since its beginning, has been relieved of his duties at his own request and has been appointed general representative of the Paramount production department abroad. He will sail for Europe in the near future to arrange for the filming abroad of certain big pictures and to put into operation ideas he has for the making of American pictures in England, France and Germany.

One of the first things Eyton will do upon arrival will be to confer with Sir James M. Barrie on the production of an original story which Barrie is about to write for Betty Bronson and which will be produced in London next Summer. Paramount plans to have a Barrie-Bronson picture each Christmas for several years to come, as a result of the tremendous success of "Peter Pan" and the promised success of "A Kiss for Cinderella."

Rapf Sees Era of Improvement

Rumors of Resignation Flatly Denied; All Companies Striving for Quality

PICTURES the coming year will be the best in the history of the industry, not only from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer but from all companies, in the opinion of Harry Rapf, associate studio executive of that firm. Mr. Rapf, who sailed Wednesday on the Berengaria for a short vacation abroad, sees unprecedented efforts being made at the present time toward a higher quality of product on every hand. He has supervised 33 productions in the past year and a half, and feels the need of a rest badly, he says. Mrs. Rapf and their son, Maurice, accompanied him abroad.

Rumors of his resignation from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were flatly denied by Mr. Rapf, who stated that he had renewed his contract for a period of years before leaving the Coast.

"We are very proud of the average we have maintained in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product the past year," said Mr. Rapf in an interview. "However, we are anxious to do even better the coming year and will spare no effort in that direction. We want to make every picture as good as possible next year, even if we have to cut our schedule slightly to do it.

"Aside from the practical difficulties in the way of meeting release dates, and so on, there is one big difficulty at the present time. Money, studio facilities, actors, directors—these we have, but no one today can get together enough man-power in the writing end. Story-brains are the hardest thing of all to find.

"It is a question of imagination plus training, and after you find a man with the requisite imagination it is not so easy to find the time to train him in the difficult language of the motion picture. I have always believed in giving an opportunity to new brains, and have taken ten people into the organization in the past year in the hope that they might develop into good screen writers. Two of them have shown some promise, but if it were only possible to spend more time with them greater things might be accomplished. The difficulty is to find the time while absorbed by a thousand and one production details to engage in the development of new talent.

"We must have better screen stories. Where a play producer may bring out only a handful of plays each season, and each of those plays may represent years of work by an author, we must find 52 stories each year, and it is virtually impossible under actual producing conditions to spend the amount of time that should be taken.

"An example of the way it should be done is afforded by the script just completed by Benjamin Christensen, the Scandinavian director whom we signed some time ago. He has just finished it, after eight solid months of work, and it is without a doubt the most remarkable and interesting script I have ever read. A child could almost make a good picture from it, it is so complete. And during all that time he has been seeing American pictures, studying American audiences, analyzing American taste, until today he has a better conception of those things than some domestic directors.

"But unfortunately we cannot always take so much time in getting the story right. If we could, the general average of picture quality would rise, but the time has not yet arrived when it is practical. Despite that, however, every one of the leading companies is working harder than ever before, and has the most ambitious plans for the coming year ever laid out. I am confident that you will see the finest product in the history of this business coming from the studios the coming year."

He also expressed particular enthusiasm over "Ben Hur," which he saw assembled in 17 reels before his departure from the Coast, and "The Big Parade," for the development of which from a small idea he gave credit to Irving Thalberg.

Harry Rapf, associate studio executive of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Mrs. Rapf and their son, Maurice, taken in New York City prior to sailing for Europe this week.

Whitehurst Interests Win Baltimore Control

The fight which has been waged between the banker faction in the Century Theatre Company, operating the Century and Parkway Theatres, Baltimore, and the Whitehurst Combined Interests, to get enough stock to control the voting power and the destinies of the two playhouses in the future, has practically come to a close.

Dr. J. H. Whitehurst, president of the Century Theatre Company has announced that the interests he represents has acquired enough stock to control the voting power. Neither of the properties will be sold, it is understood, and the four theatres—Century, Parkway, Garden and New—operated by the Whitehursts will continue to be operated on a co-operative policy as heretofore, it is said.

Much stock has been purchased by the Whitehurst Interests during the past week, it is understood, they even going so far as to radio stockholders on ships at sea to purchase their stock.

A large amount of stock has been deposited with the Fidelity Trust Company, Baltimore, which the banking faction asked, and they will continue to receive it so that the cohesive minority might be formed for protective measures it is understood.

Famous Loses Verdict for Non-Delivery

I. M. HIRSHBLOND, owner of the Tracy Theatre, Toms River, was adjudged winner by the Film Board of Trade of Philadelphia over Famous Players for the latter's non-delivery of a Gloria Swanson film contracted for. The board ruled the fact was established, Hirshblond has a contract with Famous for the playing of a Gloria Swanson picture and that Famous must turn over to him the next Swanson picture made, which would be "Stage Struck."

The decision establishes the precedent that where pictures are contracted for with a certain star they must be delivered, or in the event that they cannot be then the next picture made by that star must be delivered.

Frank Company Activities Expand

Recent Joining with North American Theatres and Motion Picture Capitol Company Increases Large Holdings

THE Frank Amusement Company, Inc., which recently joined seven Iowa theatres with a string of theatres over the country owned by the North American Theatres, Inc., and the Motion Picture Capitol Company, Frank R. Wilson of New York being president of both, has engaged Arthur Weld to take charge of the general headquarters of the Frank Amusement Company at Waterloo, Iowa.

Alexander Frank, president and directing manager of the company, secured Mr. Weld to take charge of his interests and also to act as booker for the Frank Circuit which has theatres in Clinton, Cedar Rapids, Waterloo and Sioux City. Mr. Weld is a former newspaper man serving as editor and reporter in that line for sixteen years. He has also had experience as a theatre man for seven years. He was manager of the Strand Theatre at Cedar Rapids for three years and for the past four years has been manager of the Strand Theatre at Waterloo. He was for a long time on the Los Angeles Express.

Plans for the erection of a new $700,000 theatre in Des Moines were announced by Alexander Frank.

The new theatre will seat 2,700 persons, according to Frank. This will make it the biggest movie house in the state and one of the biggest west of the Mississippi river.

"The building," Frank asserted, "probably will be erected by Des Moines business men, but we have agreed to take a thirty year lease on the property and will operate it as a first run picture house."

Executives of the North American Theatres, Inc., and the Motion Picture Capitol Company to which the Frank Amusement Company has joined its Iowa Theatre holdings were in Des Moines last week, debating upon the location for the new theatre. Harry C. Arthur, vice president and general manager of the Motion Picture Capitol Company, Howard P. Ingeles, partner of Theodore Schulze and Company, James Q. Newton, Denver and Omaha banker, and Alexander Frank of the Frank Amusement Company, met in Des Moines last week, going there from Sioux City and leaving the next day for Waterloo. They stated that the North American Theatres, Inc., has a capital of seven million and the Motion Picture Capitol Company is backed by two million five hundred thousand.

A number of important transactions have been concluded in the theatre field in the past week.

The Victoria Theatre, 415 East Baltimore street, Baltimore, which has been operated by H. A. Blum, for about two years, has now been taken over by the Independent Film Company of Philadelphia, that company having taken over the lease under which Mr. Blum operated the playhouse. That company will endeavor also to obtain other moving picture theatres in Baltimore, it is reported, by lease or purchase.

The Victoria will be operated now under the management of L. B. Haggerty. It has a seating capacity of 1,250 persons and was built in 1908 by Pearce and Scheck and then rebuilt after a fire about four years ago.

William P. Gray, Inc., of Lewiston, Me., is a new corporation just organized to conduct motion picture theatres, with 10,000 shares of capital stock of no stated par value. The incorporators are William P. Gray, who is president and treasurer, and Benjamin L. Berman, clerk, both of Lewiston.

Plans are being drawn by George Rapp of Chicago for the new theatre which Paramount in association with Mike Shea, will build at 622 Main street, in between the new Shea Buffalo and the new Fox theatres. It is understood that the Shea Buffalo will open the week of December 27.

The Fox Company is not building, but leasing, the theatre to be constructed in Buffalo by David and Joseph Coplon at 606-616 Main street. Plans for the house are being made by Lempert & Sons of Rochester. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 4,000. The building housing the theatre will be nine stories high on the Main street side. Work will begin about February 1. E. M. Fay of Providence and Mike Comerford of Scranton are interested with the Fox company in the long term lease. The house will show Fox films in connection with high class music and other attractions.

John E. Andrus, realty owner and former Mayor of Yonkers, has leased a large plot of ground on South Broadway for a long term of years to Marcus Loew, who will erect a 3,000 seat house on the property. It is located between Harriet and Vark streets.

Breig Brothers are constructing three new theatres for the Comerford Amusement Co., in West Scranton, Hazelton and at Waverly, N. Y. They all provide for stores and apartments.

The West Scranton project is now underway on North Main Ave. It will cost $350,000 and seat 2,400. Vaudeville and pictures will be the policy. It will be completed by Sept. 1926.

The contracting firm is starting work on a $200,000 vaudeville and picture house for Comerford at Waverly, N. Y. This will seat 1,500. About half the work on the new house at Hazelton has been completed.

A number of new theatres are planned for the Los Angeles territory.

A contract has been awarded for a two-story brick theatre, store, apartment and hotel building at Main St. and Griffith Ave., to cost $100,000. Plans provide for a theatre to seat 900.

The General Construction Co., has prepared plans for a theatre building at Owensmouth for M. O. Walling. The house will seat 800.

Plans are being prepared by J. J. Fraunfelder for a one-story brick theatre and store building on Hawthorne Circle, Hawthorne, for William McNeal. The structure will cost about $125,000, will have a theatre seating 925 people.

W. E. Johansen will erect a one-story brick theatre building at 2928 South Western Ave. It will seat 900 and cost about $35,000.

Stock Issue of Roxy Theatres Increases

Papers increasing the number of shares of stock of the Roxy Theatres Corporation were filed this week with the secretary of state at Albany. The company is permitted to increase the 350,000 shares of stock having no par value, which were authorized at the time of its incorporation, to 475,000 shares of stock of no par value.

Loew Statement Shows Large Profit

Net of $4,708,631 is Reported for Company and its Subsidiaries for Fiscal Year Ending in August

LOEW'S, Incorporated, has issued its annual financial statement together with the subsidiary companies 100 per cent owned by the organization. The statement shows a net profit transferred to surplus of $4,708,631 for the fiscal year ended August 31st, 1925, as against $2,949,052 in 1924 and $2,415,488 in 1923.

The company's gross income from theatres receipts and sale of pictures was $53,797,924, as against $40,628,928 in 1924 and $16,860,160 in 1923. The distributing end of the Loew enterprises embodied in Metro-Goldwyn Dist. Corp. cost $6,820,583 in 1925 as compared with $4,327,419 in 1924 and $2,958,354 in 1923.

Loew's, Inc., has declared a regular quarterly dividend of fifty cents per share, payable Dec. 31 to stockholders of record as of Dec. 12. Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corp. declared a dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred, payable Dec. 5 to stockholders of record as of Nov. 28.

The Loew statement was unusual in that the good will item, which features these annual financial reports, was missing. This item, generally grouped with leases and contracts, was placed at $10,977,083 on last year's statement. Despite the fact that this item is conspicuous by its absence, the current statement shows that total assets are placed at $53,755,396.

The Board of Directors caused appraisals to be made of certain properties and investments which increased considerably in value since originally acquired and directed that due record be made in the assets to permit leases, contracts and good will to be entirely written off.

Nine Houses Added to Hostettler Circuit Under Control of Universal

NINE theatres were added to the holdings of the Hostettler Amusement Co., Omaha, under control of Universal, this week, including the Blaine Cook circuit of seven houses and the two Hawley and Neville theatres in North Platt, Nebr.

The Blaine Cook circuit embraces theatres in Lemars, Iowa, and Beatrice, York and North Platt, Nebr. There are two theatres in Beatrice, two in York and one in North Platt. The Keith and Sun are the Hawley and Neville houses in North Platt.

Also, the new theatre being erected at Sarasota, Fla., by A. B. Edwards has been leased to Universal for a period of 20 years. It will be called the Edwards theatre. It is hoped to have it completed by January.

This brings the number of theatres under lease by Universal to one hundred and thirty or more, it is believed, based upon figures which have been given out from time to time. In addition to individual theatres in leading cities, houses acquired by Universal in territories from which it found unsatisfactory representation for its product, include the Sparks circuit in Florida, the Schine houses in upper New York State, the Hostettler chain in Nebraska and Iowa, the Clemmer theatre in Spokane, the Sears houses and others in the Kansas City territory, three in Canada, and houses announced to be built or acquired in Minneapolis, Omaha and St. Louis.

Pawley Returns From Europe

Producers Distributing Executive Back After Tour of Inspection

AFTER an extensive two months' tour of continental countries as well as Great Britain, Raymond Pawley, first vice-president and treasurer of Producers Distributing Corporation, is back at the home office. Pawley made a careful study of the foreign film market and a general inspection of the new distributing machinery recently set up to handle Producers Distributing releases in England and on the Continent.

Regarding his trip, Mr. Pawley had the following to say:

"For anyone interested in the development of the motion picture industry, European conditions should not be ignored; it is a subject well worthy of careful study. One can hardly make an exhaustive survey of European conditions in a few weeks, but the time I spent abroad has been ample to confirm the opinion expressed by some observers, to the effect that this market will eventually be the most important world outlet for motion pictures.

"My itinerary included a visit to London and our seven new branch offices in the United Kingdom; Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Budapest. In England, Scotland and Wales, with Mr. Vogel and Managing Director A. George Smith of the Producers Distributing Company, Ltd., I met the branch managers and staff, talked with prominent exhibitors and inspected the first-run theatres in all branch cities. In Berlin I had several conferences with the Directors of National Film Company, our contracting distributor in Germany, and others of the industry; inspected the new offices in Berlin of our Central European representative, Mr. Kofeldt, and a number of the important theatres of the city.

"In Vienna I had conversations with a number of those interested in the motion picture business and inspected the theatres. In Budapest the time was largely employed in an inspection of the field in Hungary, Austria and Roumania, and conferences on proposed plans for distribution of our product in these countries."

Raymond Pawley, 1st vice-president and treasurer of Producers Distributing Corp.

Charles A. Bird, Well Known Showman, Dead

Charles A. Bird, a native of Lockport, N. Y., died last week in Hornell, N. Y. The funeral was conducted from the Robertson undertaking rooms in Hornell and was attended by residents and members of the Elks.

Bird, who was connected with the show business almost from boyhood, left an estate estimated by attorneys at $250,000. After a short time spent in the local post office after he left school he went to Elmira where he became manager of a southern New York and Pennsylvania theatre circuit. He then joined the Shuberts in New York and later became general manager of Comstock and Gest. He left to join Fox as general manager of the West Coast studios, which position he held for several years returning to Hornell for a vacation. He was taken sick and had been in sanitariums most of the time since. He was about seventy years old.

"Romola," starring Lillian Gish, was the opening bill. Vaudeville will be given twice a week, Friday and Saturday. Only the biggest feature pictures will be shown, including product from Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, Warner Brothers and Film Booking Offices.

Swanson of the Everett Amusement Company, second vice-president, and J. M. Hone, of Seattle, secretary-treasurer.

Williams Plan Wins Wide Attention

British Affairs Active; United Artists Accept "Only Way"; British Exhibitors May Oppose Quota Plan

BRITISH film affairs continued to attract a considerable amount of attention in the trade this week, with J. D. Williams' plan for an eight-unit studio winning widespread notice in the press of the United Kingdom. Important developments in the international situation included:

Acquisition for release by United Artists of "The Only Way," a British picture which has been the centre of stormy controversy.

The general council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, meeting in London, recommended acceptance of the British quota plan, with much unfavorable criticism developing and the possibility that members of the association would turn it down was seen.

Further concrete proposals for Central studios were put forward by E. Beddington Behrens, M. C., Ph. D., formerly on the permanent staff of the League of Nations, at a meeting of the General Committee of the trade.

Rumors were circulated and denied concerning the financial status of the UFA in Germany, which were expected to be set at rest by the meeting of the board of directors shortly. This concern is opening several new theatres in Germany.

Charles Eyton, general manager of the Famous Players Hollywood studios for some time, is being sent abroad to survey the field for further Paramount productions to be made abroad, while John Wenger is being sent to London to design presentations for the new Paramount house there.

The Board of Trade for German-American Commerce, Inc., of which Herman A. Metz, former comptroller of the City of New York and ex-Congressman, is president, passed a resolution "emphatically protesting" against the German Kontingent system. A copy of this resolution, which was unanimously adopted, has been forwarded to Will H. Hays. The board takes the stand that the motion picture is an important agent for the promotion of friendly political as well as commercial relations ,and that its channels of trade should be free and open.

Eight studios in one centre are planned by British National Pictures, Ltd., according to an announcement made at a press luncheon by George T. Eaton, chairman of the directors.

Aside from Mr. Eaton, the other officers of the company are announced as J. D. Williams, managing director; Cecil A. H. Harrison, director; T. H. Eslick, architect and engineer to the company.

Mr. Eaton said:

"You know as well as I do, perhaps better, of the agitation which has been going on for so long verbally to improve these conditions. But the only way to improve them is to make films which will be acceptable to the whole world, and to do that is to remove some of the handicaps under which British production has been laboring.

"One of these handicaps has been the non-existence of studios so organized that they really can compete with those in Hollywood; studios where production can be handled efficiently, in the most up-to-date sense, as well as economically.

"One of the main objects of British National Pictures is to provide such studios, and when later you see the plans of the studios which we are about to erect, plans which I shall have the pleasure of asking you to inspect and discuss in a few moments, I honestly believe that you will realize that our intentions will go more than a long way to solve what has been so serious a problem hitherto.

"I first came into contact with Mr. J. D. Williams in Australia many years ago.

O'Reilly and Gould Buy Theatre Site

CHARLES L. O'REILLY, president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York, and A. Gould head a syndicate which has just purchased from the Spraybel Realty Corporation a site 100 x 219 feet on the Northeast corner of Eighty-Ninth Street and First Avenue, where they plan a ten story apartment, store and theatre building. The theatre will be a 2,400 seat motion picture house, equipped with a stage, orchestra and balcony.

New Company for St. Louis Chain

William Goldman Completes Organization to Handle Second Run Circuit; Holdings are Being Increased

FORMATION of a new company to operate a chain of second run motion picture houses has been announced by William Goldman, owner of the Kings, Queens and Rivoli theatres of St. Louis, Mo. At the same time Goldman made public the closing of leases on Freund Brothers, Woodland and Kingsland theatres on Gravois avenue and a large airdome adjoining the Woodland. These leases become effective on November 21.

Goldman also stated that he will spend approximately $50,000 for a 1,500-seat airdome next to the Kingsland theatre, and that he had acquired a lot on Hodiamont avenue just south of Easton avenue on which he will erect a 2,000-seat theatre. He also contemplates the immediate construction of a 1,500-seat house on Union boulevard near St. Louis. He purchased the latter site many months ago.

As was revealed earlier in the year Goldman has secured a lease on the Union Theatre property at Union boulevard and Easton avenue which becomes effective in 1927. He also lists a half interest in the Congress Theatre on Olive street as among his assets. He is now negotiating for several other houses in St. Louis and vicinity, and stated that he plans to build in neighborhood centers in which he cannot purchase a desirable house.

The name of his new corporation and its capitalization has not been decided.

He stated that his acquisition of second run houses will not disturb his first-run booking arrangements with Skouras Brothers.

During the past week the St. Louis Amusement Company closed a deal whereby the Ozark Theatre of Webster Groves, Mo., will secure pictures through the Koplar-Skouras chain. Previously the St. Louis Amusement Company had added eight leading neighborhood and suburban theatres to its string.

The Embassy Amusement Company which now controls six leading houses and contemplates the erection of two others has negotiations under way which will add two or three more houses to its holdings within the next few weeks.

A survey of the local theatres reveals that a few operating companies control all of the desirable houses. Loew's State, the Delmonte and Wellston are the only large theatres here that are now held by some chain.

A check of the St. Louis houses shows:

St. Louis Amusement Company:

21 theatres operating, 31,640 seats; 3 theatres closed, 3,954 seats; 2 houses projects, 4,500 seats; 15 airdomes, 25,613 seats; total, 65,707 seats.

RICHEY ON TOUR
Michigan Manager to Visit Theatres

H. M. RICHEY, General Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, has started on a tour in which he expects to visit every theatre in the State. The trip is undertaken in an effort to establish still closer contact with exhibitor members of the association and those who are not now members.

It is felt that in this manner the association will be able to learn more directly the problems of each exhibitor. To visit him in his own theatre and sit down and talk these matters over is thought a better plan, although it requires a great deal of time and effort.

If Mr. Richey keeps up with the schedule laid out, he will visit ten exhibitors a day. It is probable that the whole program cannot be accomplished in one trip but Mr. Richey has started and will spend at least a month out of the office.

New Censorship In Des Moines

Authorize Theatre Commission For All Stage and Screen Productions

A THEATRE commission which will censor all stage and screen productions in Des Moines was authorized by the city council on November 13. The article appointing the commission was approved by the council after Mayor Carl Garver announced that the article had the approval of the city legal department. A previous authorization was ruled out by the legal department because it failed to give the members of the commission police power. The first draft of the ruling did not include screen productions.

The appointment of the censor board was a result of the arrest of the twenty-two members of the burlesque show appearing at the Garrick theatre. The members of the company were released but N. S. Barger, manager of the Garrick theatre was bound over to the grand jury on charges of putting on an indecent production.

There are to be three members on the commission, one to serve for two years, one for four and one for six years. After the first term, members are to serve for six years. They are to be qualified by education and experience to fill their places on the commission and are to have police power to make arrests or, if they prefer, to cut out portions of the performance which are obscene and immoral.

The members of the commission are to work without compensation and are to be privileged to enter all theatres without charge. No mention was made as to the probable members of the board and they will be appointed by Mayor Garver after the ordinance has been published and is in force.

Motion picture theatre men in Des Moines feel no concern over the appointment of a board of censors as there has not been the least suspicion of dissatisfaction with the censorship which the theatre managers themselves give to all pictures shown at their houses. Herb Groves, manager of the Des Moines Theatre, stated that the city executives have always worked in cooperation with the theatre men and that the showing of pictures that would be questionable is not considered by Des Moines theatre men a profitable business anyway.

For several years a committee from the Des Moines Woman's Club have previewed most of the pictures shown at the theatres and made special recommendations of the pictures at the meetings of the club. No objection has been made by this committee to pictures shown at the Des Moines theatres.

New Service Incorporated in Pittsburgh

A new concern which proposes to sell and lease motion picture machines and films, has been organized in Pittsburgh under the name of the Pinkey Film Service, of Pittsburgh. The company obtained a charter of incorporation at the State Department in the capitol in Harrisburg, on November 14, and is capitalized at $5,000 of which $500 has been paid in. The par value of the shares is $25. Clara V. Brown, 1028 Forbes street, Pittsburgh, is treasurer and chief stockholder, owning 198 shares and the other incorporators are E. C. McHugh, Pittsburgh, one share, and Thomas E. Shaw, Pittsburgh, one share.

Williams Plan Wins Wide Attention

There I was associated with him in a number of enterprises in the entertainment business which were and still are very successful. I myself was for a long time on several successful theatrical Boards which are today flourishing enterprises. So I may assume to know something about the show business, of which the photoplay is the modern and logical development.

"Seven years ago I came home and retired, devoting myself to the breeding of prize cattle, and I am pleased to say that I have made a success of it both as a breeder and a showman, and have the honor this year of being the president of the British Friesian Cattle Society. But lately I have felt the call of business again and when I decided to come into the film business for the very serious purpose of trying to found an industrial concern capable of competing with America, I unhesitatingly sought the help of Mr. J. D. Williams, because he is English by parentage, and I may incidentally say, is married to an English girl, because he knows every angle of the film industry as few men do, and because he has always nurtured the idea of a British Film Producing industry which shall be an international factor in the widest sense. But in this connection I want to say most emphatically that every penny of the capital of this company is British, every shareholder is British and (save for Mr. Williams, who is really British by blood and tradition), all the directors are British. In fine, the company is exactly what its name implies — a British National one; it will make British pictures, it will conduct its business in a British way and it will propagate on the screen nothing which will do any harm, even by inference, to the best British ideals.

"All the wonderful facilities which we are going to offer will also be at their disposal, for we intend not only to make pictures ourselves, but to give all the assistance and encouragement at our command to British producers, to give them surroundings and facilities where, at last, they can make films in security and comfort, without any of the heartbreaking difficulties, delays and makeshifts that have so long been their handicap. You will note from the plans that we are going to build eight studios. We shall only be using one or two of these, the others will be open to producers and we have no intention of tying them all up, or of attempting a monopoly."

De Mille Starts Work on "Volga Boatman"

CECIL B. De MILLE has departed from Los Angeles with his "Volga Boatman" company for a point on the Sacramento River fifty miles from the nearest railroad, where initial scenes will be shot. This will be De Mille's second personally directed feature for Producers Distributing Corporation release.

Accompanying De Mille to the location were the entire cast, including Jetta Goudal, Elinor Fair, William Boyd, Victor Varconi, Theodore Kosloff and some fifty minor players. Frank Urson will again act as De Mille's assistant, while Arthur Miller will serve as cameraman.

Blue and Prevost Together in Warner Picture

Monte Blue and Marie Prevost will be co-starred in "Other Women's Husbands," a Warner Brothers production, the story for which was written by E. T. Lowe, Jr. Advices from the Warner offices state this is in response to popular demand. In addition to the stars, who play husband and wife, the cast thus far selected consists of Huntly Gordon, who plays the best friend, and Phyllis Haver, who has the "vamp" role.

Cast Completed For "So This is Mexico"

The cast has been completed for "So This is Mexico," first of six pictures Richard Talmadge will make for F. B. O. this winter. Louise Lorraine will have the feminine lead opposite Talmadge, while others prominent in support are Henry Herbert, Charles Hill Mailes, Charles Clary, Victor Dillingham and Arthur Conrad. The production got under way this week under the direction of Noel Smith.

Electrical Equipment at F. B. O. Enlarged

F. B. O. has enlarged its electrical equipment at the studio from a capacity of 15,000 volts to 30,000 volts. The expansion was directed by Lee Rauch, for several years superintendent of electricity at F. B. O. In order to place underground the pipes for the new wiring system it was necessary to dig up a long section of the studio "street."

Scenes from the Evelyn Brent starring vehicle for F. B. O. titled "A Broadway Lady."

Highlights from the Associated Exhibitors release "Camille of the Barbary Coast."

"Ancient Mariner" Campaign

Countrywide Exploitation Launched for Fox Special Christmas Production

BEFORE he left on his southern trip James R. Grainger, general sales manager for Fox Film announced the complete plan and scope of the national campaign to be waged on "The Ancient Mariner," the Fox Film Corporation's Christmas picture which is being directed by Henry Otto and Chester Bennett from a scenario furnished by Eve Unsell, the cast for which includes Leslie Fenton, Clara Bow, Earle Williams, Nigel de Brulier, Paul Panzer, Gladys Brockwell and Vivian Oakland.

Special sales letters, pamphlets and posters are being sent to schools, academies, libraries and literary associations throughout the country. Through the cooperation of the Hays offices a beautiful seven colored half-sheet lithograph, the work of Luis Usabal, noted Spanish artist, will be distributed to societies who have already agreed to post them in reading rooms, club headquarters and other conspicuous places.

Essay contests for students in elementary, primary, parochial, highschools and academies have been started in almost 100 newspapers with substantial prizes for the best essay on the subject of "The Ancient Mariner."

Not less than a hundred thousand bookmarks will be distributed in the public libraries throughout the country, these carrying a message regarding "The Ancient Mariner" as a Christmas attraction.

A number of exploitation men sufficient to cover every section of the country are devoting practically all their time to this special campaign. The campaign through advertising in the trade papers is commensurate with the size of this production.

Whitman Bennett To Make "Cleaner Flame"

"The Cleaner Flame," an original film story by Clara Beranger and Forest Halsey, will be put into production within the next two weeks by Whitman Bennett at his Glendale studio. It will be released as one of the Golden Arrow features for 1925-1926 on the Arrow Pictures Corporation schedule.
